U.S. IN WORST POSITION SINCE WAR IN KOREA, STEVENSON SAYS

He Promises to Offer Own Plan for Workable Peace With Reds —Assails G.O.P. Policy as Partisan.

(Related story on Page 2A.)

BY RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19 — Adlai Stevenson, in his first speech as an announced candidate for the presidency in 1956, outlined tonight Democratic strategy for attacking the "peace and prosperity" claims of the Eisenhower administration.

Addressing a fund-raising gathering of about 3000 Democratic organization workers who paid $100 a plate for a modest dinner, the defeated 1952 presidential nominee predicted that the Democrats would win the White House next year just as they won both houses of Congress in 1954 and local elections last week.

The dinner wound up a three-day meeting of the Democratic National Committee. Besides Stevenson, two undeclared candidates for the Democratic nomination, Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee and Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, and former President Harry Truman addressed the Democrats.

Wind-Up of Meeting.

In his address, Stevenson, former Governor of Illinois, made it clear that as the front runner for the Democratic presidential nomination he intended to criticize sharply the foreign policies and diplomatic activities of President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, and offer the voters his own program for attaining a workable peace with the Communist world by maintaining our military strength and bettering the lot of less privileged peoples.

"Our position," he said, "is more perilous than it has been since Korea."

Peace Comes First.

Foreign policy should be American and not partisan, he said, and "our first, our greatest, our most relentless purpose is peace. He then added:

"Now that the mists of illusion have risen from last summer's meeting at the 'summit,' we must again face the fact that the cold war is still in the freeze, that our security system is deteriorating and that a safe and orderly world is still a distant goal.

"Certainly we must have learned by now that peace and security can not be had for the asking, or by slogans, or by tough talk, or by blowing alternately hot and cold, rash and prudent. Certainly we must have learned that sound foreign policies cannot be devised with one eye fixed only on the budget and the other on the divisions in the Republican party. Certainly we must have learned that in the fluctuating market of world affairs there is no bargain basement where peace is for sale cheap.

"Let us indeed remember that who plays politics with peace will lose at both."

Upsurge of Less Privileged.

Asserting that the world is dominated by two facts—"expansive Communist imperialism with the hydrogen bomb in its arsenal and the great revolutionary upsurge of less privileged people who long for peace and a better share in the better things of life," Stevenson said that we and our allies must be strong to check Communist ambition.

"America's military strength has been reduced," he observed, "while at the same time we talked tougher and tougher. But if our threats were sincere, then our pretensions of peace were insincere. And if

U.S. LINES UP WITH 5 BAGHDAD PACT COUNTRIES

American Diplomatic, Military Observers to Attend First Meeting Tomorrow.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (UP) —The United States announced today it will establish "military and political liaison" with the five-nation Baghdad pact.

The five nations are joined in a defensive alliance along Russia's southern frontier. Members are Iraq, Iran, Turkey, Pakistan, and Britain.

Today's announcement was regarded as a possible first step toward eventual full-fledged United States membership in the pact.

Egypt has opposed the pact, primarily because Iraq — an Arab nation—is a member. This independent step by Iraq amounted to a challenge to Egypt's leadership of the Arab bloc.

United States officials admitted that the whole problem of American relationship with the Baghdad pact countries is a "thorny one."

The United States risked some Arab displeasure by aligning itself with the five nations because of Egypt's opposition to it. Egypt recently made a deal with Communist Czechoslovakia to obtain arms.

The United States move was regarded as another effort to stabilize the uneasy situation in the Middle East where Egypt and Israel have been fighting sporadically.

United States diplomatic and military officials will sit in on the first meeting of the pact organization beginning in Baghdad Monday.

The State Department appointed the American Ambassador to Iraq, Waldemar Gallman, to head the United States group of observers at the Baghdad meeting. He will continue to maintain relations with the organization after its first meeting.

Adm. John H. Cassady, commander-in-chief, United States naval forces in the eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean, and Brig. Gen. Forrest Caraway will be the special United States military observers at the first meeting.

Col. Henry P. Tucker, United States military attache at Baghdad, will have the job of continuing the military liaison after the meeting.

DEFENSE AGAINST REDS IS MAIN GOAL

DEMOCRATIC BIG 3 SEE TRUMAN; 'THEY HAVE TO,' HE SAYS

CHICAGO, Nov. 19 (AP)—The three men most mentioned as potential nominees for President on the Democratic ticket called on former President Truman today.

First, Adlai E. Stevenson left his quarters in the Conrad Hilton Hotel and crossed the street to the Blackstone Hotel to visit Truman.

Then Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee made a similar trip for a brief chat.

Still later, Truman dropped in at a cocktail party for Gov. Averell Harriman of New York at the Blackstone Hotel. The party was given by Michael Prendergast, New York state Democratic chairman.

A reporter asked Truman: "Is there any significance in the fact the other two men called on you, and you called on Gov. Harriman?"

"Mr. Harriman called on me, too," Truman replied, "so don't try to make anything significant about that."

He added with a grin:

"They all have to call on me."

MOSCOW'S GABBY KHRUSHCHEV PUTS FOOT IN HIS MOUTH

NEW DELHI, Nov. 19 (INS) —Nikita S. Khrushchev, Russia's garrulous Communist party chief, almost talked himself into an embarrassing corner today.

Winding-up a sight-seeing tour of New Delhi with Soviet Premier Bulganin, Khrushchev told his Indian escorts:

"I bow to the builders of these great monuments — but they were built with slave labor, and I congratulate the people who ultimately overthrew imperialism."

When his Indian hosts informed him that some of the kings who built the monuments had risen from the ranks as slaves, Khrushchev tried to recover with:

"Well, having roused the slaves against the oppressors, these kings seemed to have become oppressors themselves."

He hastily added with a laugh that he did not want to continue talking on this subject.

"People might think I am doing propaganda," he said.

TRUMAN SAYS HE MAY ACCEPT OXFORD U. DEGREE

CHICAGO, Nov. 19 (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman said tonight he may accept a degree from Oxford University in England next spring, but he will be on hand for the August Democratic presidential nominating convention.

Truman told a reporter he has been offered a degree similar to that conferred on Winston Churchill but has not finally made up his mind whether to accept it.

Asked the nature of the honor, Truman described it as a "beefeater's hat degree." He said he was uncertain at the moment of the technical title.

BULGANIN PAINTS ROSY ECONOMIC FUTURE FOR INDIA

Russian Offers Technical Aid on Atomic Power for Peaceful Purposes.

NEW DELHI, Nov. 19 (UP)— Russian Premier Bulganin said today that all necessary conditions have been created for the development of trade and economic co-operation between India and Russia "on the basis of genuine equality and mutual benefit."

"Our countries stand as allies in the noble and great struggle for peace throughout the entire world," he said.

Bulganin spoke at a civic reception on the second day of the state visit he and Soviet Communist party chief Nikita S. Khrushchev are paying to Prime Minister Nehru and President Rajendra Prasad.

Assuring his large audience of Russia's sympathy for the attempt of India to build up its national economy, with emphasis on industry, Bulganin said:

"We are confident that the industrious and talented Indian people will be able to achieve their goal."

Offers Technical Aid.

He said Russia was willing to give technical advice to such projects as hydroelectric power and the utilization of atomic power for peaceful purposes.

Bulganin spoke in Russian. An interpreter, standing beside him, put his speech into the Hindu language. He said he and Khrushchev were especially pleased that India, as well as Russia, "stands undeviatingly and firmly for the solution of such very important questions as the restoration of the legitimate rights of the Chinese People's Republic in the United Nations." That meant the recognition of the Chinese Communist regime in the U.N. in place of Nationalist China.

Russia and India, he said, are "building relations on a stable and reliable foundation."

Crowd Fills Three Blocks.

People jammed three city blocks to cheer the Russians at the civic reception. They waved Indian and Russian flags. Big forces of police armed with long staves, reinforced by police from neighboring areas, held the crowds behind specially built barricades of iron bars. The spectators were made to sit down during the speechmaking.

A group of Indian girls sang songs.

The Russians spent the morning sightseeing. Large crowds, cheering and waving flags, hailed them wherever they went in the capital. They laid wreaths at the memorial built for Mohandas K. Gandhi, removing their shoes outside in keeping with the Hindu practice.

RESCUED AFTER DANGLING FROM PLANE 25 MINUTES

FORT POLK, La., Nov. 19 (AP)—A paratrooper who dangled from an airborne troop carrier 1300 feet above the ground was rescued today in a tense 25-minute struggle.

Pfc. Lee Smith of the Eighty-second Airborne division hung from the plane after leaping in a mass jump in connection with the Army and Air Force's huge exercise Sagebrush war games.

The static line on Lee's parachute apparently became entangled and the automatic release mechanism failed to operate.

Staff Sgt. C. J. Bolden of Murfreesboro, Tenn., engineer on the C-119 troop carrier, tried to lift Smith back into the plane, but had to call for assistance.

Radio Operator A. Dalullo of Chicago and co-pilot Lt. J. W. Cunningham of Washington worked with Holden trying to pull Smith back in, but they had to use a winch-type mechanism to lift Smith back into the plane.

LAMAR CAUDLE, CONNELLY KEY FIGURES IN TAX SCANDAL INQUIRY

Ex-Justice Department Official to Testify Tomorrow—Grand Jury Heard Truman Appointments Secretary.

Theron Lamar Caudle, former head of the Justice Department's tax division in the Truman Administration, and Matthew J. Connelly, who was former President Truman's appointments secretary, are key figures in the federal grand jury's investigation of tax scandals in that administration, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

Caudle is under subpena as a grand jury witness tomorrow. Connelly testified last week.

Interest in Caudle and Connelly was intensified following the recent discovery of old records pertaining to financial dealings between Harry I. Schwimmer, Kansas City attorney, indicted Friday on a charge of perjury, and a client in an income tax case, it was learned. The client, Irving Sachs, president of Shu-Stiles, Inc., 1214 Washington avenue, was fined $40,000 in 1951 on his plea of guilty of tax evasion in United States District Court.

Charges Bribery Fund.

In a statement in court, Wyllys S. Newcomb, special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, who has directed the current phase of the inquiry since last March, said Schwimmer told the grand jury that a $10,000 check which the old records showed Schwimmer received from Shu-Stiles, Inc., Oct. 12, 1949, was a legal fee.

"It was not a fee at all," Newcomb told United States District Judge George H. Moore. "It was known by the defendant that the proceeds of the check constituted a fund to be used to bribe and corrupt public officials."

Caudle, reached by long-distance telephone at his home in Wadesboro, N.C., said he recalled the Sachs case, but knew of no fund in connection with the case.

"Mr. Sachs suffered from epilepsy and was examined by a number of doctors," Caudle told the Post-Dispatch. "All except one physician reported that prosecution would be the trigger for a suicide," Caudle added.

Says He Will Be on Hand.

Caudle, who said he would be on hand for testimony here tomorrow, told a subcommittee investigating the Justice Department in 1952 that Connelly telephoned him from the White House with a request that a conference in the Sachs case be postponed because of the illness of Attorney Schwimmer. Caudle said Connelly was informed there would be no objection to a continuance.

Both Caudle and Connelly were grand jury witnesses last June, a session at which William M. Boyle, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, also was a witness. Connelly declined to comment on the recent developments when here last week. He now lives in New York.

Schwimmer entered Lutheran Hospital following his grand jury appearance Friday, complaining of a heart ailment. Federal agents placed him under 24-hour surveillance, and a physician was appointed to make a physical examination and report to Judge Moore this week.

The perjury indictment stated that the $10,000 check was drawn on the Shu-Stiles account at the Boatmen's National Bank and was signed, "Irving Sachs, pres." When under oath as a grand jury witness on Tuesday, Schwimmer was asked, the indictment related: "Is it your statement that you regarded this money as some sort of advance?"

Termed It Advance on Fee.

Schwimmer's reply, the indictment reported, was: "It was an advance on my fee. It is what you call a retainer fee. It is for work to be done, or maybe, as I said before, work I had already done."

The indictment charged that Schwimmer knew his testimony was false, and that the proceeds of the check "constituted a fund to be used to bribe and corrupt public officials, and the defendant had so regarded it."

Schwimmer, in a prepared statement, said: "At no time have I asked any one in or out of the Government to do anything except that which is proper and right under the law, nor have I paid anyone any money."

DEVIL FINDS WORK AT OFFICE OF UNEMPLOYMENT BUREAU

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 19 (UP) —The old saying that the devil finds work for idle hands proved to be true at an Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation office here today.

Six unemployed men were arrested by vice squad men for shooting craps in the waiting room of the bureau's office. They were waiting to be directed to any jobs that might be open.

HEARING WITHIN 10 DAYS AFTER FILING OF CHARGE NOW REQUIRED

Dowd, FitzGibbon, Comerford Agree to Revision—2 More in Holdover 18 Days Without Accusations.

A new rule to help protect the civil rights of persons arrested as suspects in criminal cases was put into effect yesterday in the Court of Criminal Correction as a result of an inquiry by the Committee on Criminal Justice of the St. Louis Bar Association.

The committee's report, released yesterday, was critical of the handling by the circuit attorney's office of cases in which prisoners were held in jail for "inordinate" periods of time without a preliminary hearing.

2 More Held 18 Days.

Meanwhile, the Post-Dispatch learned that two more men have been held in the holdover at Police Headquarters for 18 days without charges having been placed against them and without having been given an opportunity to plead guilty or innocent. Their confinement for that period was the result of administrative errors on the part of the circuit attorney's office, prosecuting attorney's office and the Police Department.

The new rule, agreed to by Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd and Judges David W. FitzGibbon and Louis Comerford of the Court of Criminal Correction, calls for a preliminary hearing on a felony charge as soon as possible and in any event in not more than 10 days after a charge has been filed against the suspect.

The rule is patterned after two rules of the Missouri Supreme Court which have not been in effect in the Court of Criminal Correction.

The rule put into effect yesterday, follows:

"A preliminary examination shall be had on all felony charges within 10 days after the filing of said charge in this court (the Court of Criminal Correction) except the preliminary examination may be postponed from time to time, not to exceed 10 days at one time, upon request and with the consent of both parties, or upon a finding of good and sufficient cause therefor, supported by a written memorandum signed by the party requesting said postponement."

A procedure to follow under the rule also was laid down by the committee, which was under the direction of Frank P. Aschemeyer, chairman, a former commissioner of the Missouri Supreme Court, and Circuit Judge Ivan Lee Holt Jr., vice chairman.

The attention of the Bar Association was called to the cases of Airmen Eugene Woodard and Eugene Kmetz by the Post-Dispatch after Circuit Judge James E. McLaughlin ruled each of the men was held illegally in jail by Dowd's office in connection with a $12 street robbery.

Woodard was held for 80 days and Kmetz for 74 days after they had been discharged at preliminary hearings in the Court of Criminal Correction. The complaints against them merely had "hold for the grand jury" written across them.

Element of Oversight.

The report said that Dowd "conceded there was an element of oversight so far as his office was concerned and agreed that his office should have proceeded more diligently so that the delay in obtaining indictments should not have occurred."

The circuit attorney's office, according to the new procedure, will not merely write on an information issued to hold a suspect who has been released at a preliminary hearing, the notation, "hold for the grand jury."

Instead, new informations against accused persons, the report said, will be complete in all respects so it will be possible to tell at a glance the evidence against a prisoner on the basis of the accusations in the information. The court will then set a date for a hearing within 10 days.

Postponement Rule.

If Dowd's office has not obtained an indictment within the 10-day period, the new procedure says he will not be able to obtain a postponement of a hearing on the information unless he can convince the court that there is "good and sufficient cause" for a continuance.

If the court decides there is

NO-PARKING SIGNS MARK SHOPPING SEASON'S ADVENT

The holiday shopping season arrived officially yesterday on the calendar of the City Department of Streets and Sewers, and parking was prohibited on Olive and Pine streets between Fourth street and Twelfth boulevard to facilitate the expected heavier flow of traffic.

No-parking signs were posted, and meters were removed from their standards. The bar will remain in effect until Jan. 14.

Ordinarily one-hour metered parking is permitted on those streets between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Frank Kriz, director of the department, said the plan worked well last year and that he thought it would again.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 19 (AP)—The late Daniel J. Tobin, president emeritus of the AFL Teamsters, left his wife, Irene, a $5000 monthly minimum income in a will filed for probate yesterday.

The 83-year-old labor leader's personal estate was valued at $60,000. It was left to Mrs. Tobin after deduction of five bequests to relatives and church groups.

At the time of his death last Monday Tobin was drawing $50,000 annual salary as retired head of the union he headed for 45 years.

The probate petition indicated the monthly income would come out of a trust fund of undisclosed size and not included in the estimate of the personal estate.

88 PCT. OF TRAVEL BETWEEN CITIES IS BY PRIVATE AUTO

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (UP) —Americans are traveling more and more by automobile, the Interstate Commerce Commission reported today.

Last year they rode 548,000,000,000 miles by car on intercity trips. That amounted to nearly 88 per cent of the total intercity passenger mileage by all modes of transportation.

The ICC said automobile travel increased 3.7 per cent over 1953.

Airplane passenger mileage went up 12.3 per cent, and travel by boat on inland waterways increased 14.4 per cent. Railroad passenger mileage dropped 8.7 per cent and bus travel declined 9.8 per cent.

NURSE KILLED BY POISON PUT IN CUP BY MAID

Domestic Charged With Murder Says Woman Who Died Told Her to Do So.

Mrs. Juanita Williams, a housemaid, was charged with murder last night in the death from arsenic poisoning of Miss Anna Marx, 69-year-old practical nurse, who worked for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Levis, 9 Wydown terrace, Clayton.

Mrs. Williams, also employed by the Levis family, was held without bond at St. Louis county jail at Clayton. Earlier in the day she admitted to police that she put arsenic in Miss Marx's teacup.

Miss Marx died Oct. 21, a day after she was taken to Barnes Hospital with acute abdominal pains, but the cause of her death was not known until Friday, when a laboratory test was completed.

Mrs. Williams, a Negro, said she bought the poison when Miss Marx asked her to, and put it in a cup of water for Miss Marx, also at the nurse's request, as they were having lunch together Oct. 20, police reported.

She did not admit knowing anything about the arsenic until yesterday when St. Louis police were about to give her a lie detector test.

At the same time she admitted that she had stolen $450 from the Levis home, and said the nurse was aware that she, the maid, had taken $100 of the total.

The Levis home was robbed of $900 shortly before Miss Marx was stricken, and Mrs. Williams was questioned at the time, but police said she admitted then that she had stolen only two bottles of liquor.

In addition to murder, Mrs. Williams was charged with grand larceny and larceny of more than $50 in warrants issued by Magistrate Leslie T. Lewis. Hearing was set for Dec. 1. One charge was based on theft of $100 from a purse, and the other theft of $350 which had been left on a table. Police said she admitted both thefts.

The poisoning was reported to police by a physician after he received the laboratory report. He said he had treated Miss Marx when she became ill, and ordered her taken to Barnes Hospital several hours later. She died the next night.

Candidate Loses Election, Wins 10-Day Vacation in Florida

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 19 (AP)—Max Frauwirth lost an election but won a 10-day Florida vacation for himself and his family.

The Republican town committee voted the vacation last night for Frauwirth, the G.O.P. nominee for Mayor in the Nov. 8 city elections.

Frauwirth, 47-year-old lawyer, finished third in a three-man race. He trailed Socialist Jasper McLevy, who was elected to his twelfth consecutive two-year term; and Democrat Samuel J. Tedesco.

A. Edward Sandula, a Republican party leader, said the vacation is a gift from committee members and friends for the "enthusiasm and loyalty demonstrated by Mr. Frauwirth in waging a vigorous and spirited campaign."

How much vacation money will be available has not been determined. It will be shared by Frauwirth with his wife, their 13-year-old son, and two daughters, 9 and 8.

Old Masters in British Gallery Suffer Without Air Conditioning

LONDON, Nov. 19 (AP)— Millions of dollars worth of paintings by old masters at the British National Gallery have been destroyed or damaged because of shortage of hanging space and lack of air conditioning.

Rows of paintings are stocked in a store room with holes in the door, easy prey to the corroding effects of London's persistent winter fogs. Others are packed in a cold windy corridor.

Great paintings damaged in recent years by the vicissitudes of temperature that the gallery cannot control include Michelangelo's "Entombment," Piero della Francesca's "Nativity," Holbein's "Ambassadors," Rubens's "Chateau de Steein" and Botticelli's "Adoration of the Kings."

This state of affairs at the National Gallery was described in a report of the trustees issued today. Asked about the damage, a spokesman for the gallery said:

"It goes into the millions, and I don't mean dollars, but pounds." (One pound equals $2.80.)

The trustees asked the government for £80,000 ($224,000) annually with which to buy paintings and all the money they can get to expand and install air conditioning.

The National Gallery receives from the government £10,500 ($39,000) a year to purchase new pictures. It has an additional annual income around £20,000 ($56,000).

In asking for £80,000 a year for purchases the trustees mentioned that it would amount to 1-750th of the pig subsidy—what the government pays farmers on sales of pigs that are below a set minimum price.

TRUMAN WARNS PARTY TO REMAIN LIBERAL OR 'IT'LL BE LICKED' IN '56

Retains Neutral Stand on Candidates — Says Nation's Domestic Affairs Are in 'An Awful Fix.'

By SAM B. ARMSTRONG
National Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

CHICAGO, Nov. 19—Former President Harry S. Truman, who prides himself on his practical political sagacity, told Democrats at a $100-a-plate dinner here tonight that theirs was the liberal and progressive party and if it takes any other course "it will be licked next year."

Noting that the three major prospective candidates for the party's nomination for President were seated at the head table with him, Truman retained his neutral position.

Concerning the three men—Adlai Stevenson, Gov. Averell Harriman of New York and Senator Estes Kefauver—Truman remarked: "Plenty of people will support one of the candidates; plenty of others will suport the other two.

"I like variety."

Calling particular attention to the plight of farmers, caught in a price squeeze, Truman said the nation's domestic affairs were in "an awful fix."

"Get Our Man Elected."

He told the Democratic leaders their duty was "to keep the party together and after the primaries, get on the bandwagon with me and get our man elected."

"Whoever is nominated, I'm going to do everything to get him elected."

The introduction of the former President at the dinner, which ended a three-day session of the Democratic National Committee, brought a two-minute standing ovation in the bunting-draped International Amphitheater, where Stevenson was nominated in 1952 and where he hopes to be nominated again next August.

The hall was well filled by an audience of about 3000 persons, including national committeemen, state chairmen, governors, senators, representatives and other party leaders.

Kefauver Critical.

Kefauver, following Truman on the speaking program, told dinner guests that the Eisenhower Administration's foreign policy has "in a large measure been a failure."

The Tennessee Senator, who has said he would announce his decision on seeking the Democratic nomination for President in about four weeks, declared that the United States foreign service has "either bad direction or no direction at all" from Washington. Kefauver has just returned from an extended tour abroad.

"I happened to be behind the Iron Curtain during the period in which the spirit of Geneva still had some spirit," he said. "Last week it seems to have expired at the meeting of the foreign ministers. But what surprised me at the time is that in country after country, on both sides of the Iron Curtain, our representatives in the foreign service were totally unable to take advantage of it while it was still viable."

Paying his respects to a "fine foreign service, staffed with capable and dedicated" people, he continued:

"But they are substantially without guidance from Washington. They must work either with bad direction or no direction at all. They suffer from leadership that wavers or is not present at all.

"There is none of the great sweep of thought which produced the Marshall plan and NATO. I found that, throughout the areas I visited, the Communist leaders acted and we reacted. The initiative was not ours.

"Now that the Foreign Ministers' conference is over, we find that every problem that was on hand in Europe and in Asia at the time of the 'meeting at the summit' is still with us. Not only are the solutions of these problems as far away as ever—and perhaps even farther away—but new problems have been added to them.

Cites Middle East Crisis.

"There is the critical situation in the Middle East in which the fate of the little democratic state of Israel is involved. And we find the State Department trying to play both ends against the middle—a game which too often leads to disaster."

Turning to colonialism, which he described as a "burning question," he declared that the United States is without a policy which is clear-cut and understandable to peoples seeking freedom.

"Colonialism," he went on, "has done much for the development of many countries but it has not given people self-government. This they are going to have. This is the spirit of the world and we might as well help them gracefully.

"If we fail in this, we will forfeit the good will of millions of people and of many nations. As far as the State Department is concerned, the golden rule might as well not have been written.

"We need imagination in American foreign policy; I might say we need truthfulness as well. And most of all we need the courage of our convictions.

"We need, and have needed for a long time, a clean and unequivocal statement of our national interest in the Middle East. We cannot sit idly by and see Israel engulfed in an unnecessary war."

Turning to domestic problems, Kefauver charged that the Republican Administration had failed to see "the humanside of the farm problem."

"They manage very well on policies designed to help the mortgage bankers," he said. "They do extremely well when it comes to easing the burdens of the rich and powerful. But in dealing with questions dealing with human beings, the every-day problems of making a living and educating children, and taking care of sickness, the Republicans fail."

Forcing 'Millions' Out.

Declining farm product prices and rising farm operation costs have resulted in forcing "millions" of small farmers out of agriculture, Kefauver contended. The small farmer, he said, is not responsible for rapidly increasing surpluses.

"The attack on the small farmer by this Administration is morally not unlike some of the drives by the Russians toward the collectivization of agriculture.

"Most of you here tonight remember the Republican attacks on the Roosevelt Administration for plowing under crops and little pigs. The Republicans don't plow under the crops; they are engaged in plowing under the farmer. The farmer has seen pledges made to him and shamelessly voided."

Gov. Harriman, who says he is "not an active candidate" for the Democratic nomination, spoke after Kefauver.

Harriman in Good Mood.

Gov. Harriman, who appears to be finding that relaxation from his wonted dignity comes a bit more easily, was full of good will and affection for all Democrats including his potential adversaries, and he singled them out by name.

Paying tribute to Democratic leaders he said:

"First, to the man who ever fought for the rights of all the people at home and rallied and united the free world against the Communist menace. With his indomitable spirit to urge us on, it is no wonder that our party has a soaring morale and the will to win. So, first and foremost, I want to salute the greatest fighter of them all — Harry S. Truman."

Most of his talk was in similar vein. He continued:

"I see another great Democrat over there—a man who fought a gallant fight against insuperable odds, who brought glory in defeat—and who, by his inspired campaign, laid the foundations for our recent victories. I'm talking about Adlai E. Stevenson.

"I also see another old friend to whom we owe much. He's the man who made Adolphe Wenzell say 'uncle' in the Dixon-Yates scandal—our stalwart Senator from Tennessee, Estes Kefauver."

And so it went until he had mentioned by name virtually every Democrat who has been looking out of the corner of his eye for a top place on the party ticket and even some who haven't.

For their records in Congress, he cited Senators Stuart Symington of Missouri, Paul Douglas of Illinois, Lyndon Johnson of Texas and virtually every other Senator and several House members.

Praises Lehman.

He praised Senator Herbert Lehman of New York, who has announced that he would support Stevenson for the nomination, for his "fight for a decent immigration law, the rights of labor and protection of the public interest from the power grab."

He confined his brief references to the Republican party to generalities:

"One reason that the Republicans lost five straight presidential elections is that their leadership in Congress, with few exceptions, was narrow, short-sighted, and mean.

"While the President was devoting his efforts to trying to appease the dissident Republican factions in Congress, the Administration was being taken over by the special interests, which always have their eye on the ball."

Democratic women were represented on the program by Mrs. Leonor K. Sullivan of St. Louis, Representative in Congress from the Third District. Women, she said, have been responsive to the social legislation which the Democratic party has brought about, and have contributed to its strength.

Gets Pistol Used to Shoot Him.

ROME, Nov. 19 (AP)—Italian Communist boss Palmiro Togliatti has been given a souvenir by Rome's tribunal. It is the revolver a Sicilian student used to shoot him with three bullets July 14, 1948. The justice ministry agreed Togliatti should have the weapon to hang on a wall and an unfired shell for a watch charm, as he asked.

PALACE MURDER OF TWO BREAKS MOROCCO PEACE

Caliph and Bodyguard Beaten, Trampled to Death — Five Others Wounded.

RABAT, Morocco, Nov. 19 (AP)—Morocco's era of good feeling was shattered today by a political murder in the courtyard of Sultan Sidi Mohammed Ben Youssef's palace. The fact the Sultan was inside the palace seeking means to keep the peace in Morocco emphasized the difficulties this French protectorate faces.

At least two of a group of Moroccan notables who formed to pay homage to the recently returned monarch were dead and five others wounded. Two of the wounded were not expected to recover. There were reports two more Moroccans were killed in scattered brawls on the great meadow just outside the palace.

The top man killed was Khalifi Berdadi, an important caliph of the old religious capital of Fez, where terrorists had made three attempts on his life previously. Recognized in the palace courtyard by his political enemies, he and his bodyguard were beaten and trampled to death.

Knives and Guns.

The famed palace "Black Guard" quickly surrounded the melee but not before the knives and guns had done their work.

The dead caliph was a supporter of former Sultan Mohammed Moulay Ben Arafa and had come uninvited to make his peace with Youssef.

There had been scattered violence in Morocco throughout the period of negotiations with the French and the Sultan's expected return. But the principal figures have made a show of attempting to keep order and the Sultan himself has been generally forgiving to his former opponents.

Thousands Waiting.

The violence in the palace courtyard was reflected in beatings and fights among thousands of Moroccans waiting in the meadow around the palace hoping to be received by the Sultan.

There was also trouble in the southern capitol of Marrakech, home of powerful Thami el Glaoui, where a political fight in the main square killed at least two—a local official who shot one of his enemies and was in turn beaten to death by a mob.

DEADLOCK HOLDS IN NEW TALKS ON U.N. MEMBERS

'Horse-Trading' Parley Called by Russia, but Big Four Leaders Still Can't Agree.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (UP)—The Big Four United Nations ambassadors met for about three hours today but failed to reach agreement on breaking a deadlock on U.N. membership.

After the long luncheon meeting at the Soviet U.N. headquarters on Park avenue, the United States issued the following statement:

"Representatives of the United Kingdom, France, the U.S.S.R. and the United States met today to discuss the United Nations membership question. No agreement was reached. The conversations will continue."

The meeting was at the invitation of Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister V. V. Kuznetsov, obviously for some high-level "horsetrading" on the admission of 18 new members.

Big Four agreement was needed to break the membership deadlock and win approval for five Communist and 13 Western-sponsored nations as new members.

Informed sources said Security Council President Nasrollah Entezam has made it clear he will not call the meeting of the 11-nation body until the Big Four reach agreement on membership.

Kuznetsov was host at the luncheon, but Soviet Ambassador to Washington G. N. Zarubin, Ambassador to Britain Jacob Malik and the U.N. delegate, A. A. Sobolev, who recently returned from Geneva, also were present.

United States Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., accompanied by his political advisers, joined Britain's Sir Pierson Dixon and France's Herve Alphand, who was present even though his country has walked out of the U.N.

The principal stumbling block to admitting the 18 nations has been United States opposition to Outer Mongolia. The Russians last week issued an "all or nothing" warning, making it clear that if the Communist state on the border of China were not admitted to the U.N. then the Soviet Union would use its veto in the Security Council, killing the entire plan.

Bishops Say Public and Private Schools Have Equal Right to Aid

Catholic Hierarchy Asserts Church-Supported Education Is Integral Part of U.S. System — Reply to Critics.

(Text on Page 2B)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (UP)—The Catholic hierarchy of the United States today asserted church and private schools were an integral part of the nation's educational system and claimed for them equal rights to grants or aids extended to public schools.

At the conclusion of their annual three-day conference here, the 208 cardinals, archbishops and bishops also replied to those who charge the Catholic school "is a divisive influence in national affairs" and "who would write them off as less wholly dedicated to the public welfare than state-supported schools."

"Let it be fully understood," the prelates said in a 2500-word statement, "that private and church-related schools in America exist not by sufferance but by right. The right is implicit in the whole concept of American freedom and immunity from totalitarian oppression and in the constitutional framework of our Federal Government and of the several states.

"Thus far, happily, the right of the parent to educate the child has not been successfully challenged in any American court. If the state has a concurrent right to decree a minimal education for its citizens, as a vital necessity in modern democratic society, that right does not extend to an arbitrary designation of the school or the educational agency.

"It is, rather, a general right, limited by the primary right of the parent to exercise his choice according to his best wisdom and conscience. The state has no authority to either monopolize the field or to arrogate to itself exclusive privileges and powers. The state, itself, is not a primary educative agency.

The bishops said the Catholic schools not only meet or surpass these standards but offer the additional advantage of training in the fundamentals of religion which public schools cannot legally teach.

They also said that because these schools "emphatically, are an integral part of the American education system and are carrying a large share of the educational burden, they have full right to be considered and dealt with as components of the system."

"The students of these schools have the right to benefit from those measures, grants, or aids, which are manifestly designed for the health, safety and welfare of American youth, irrespective of the school attended," they added.

Catholic schools can, and do, participate in the federal school lunch program but are barred from federal aid in school construction. They also get some other benefits from public funds, such as school transportation and textbooks but these are aids to the children rather than the schools. Participation in health services depends on local and state patterns.

"During the past hundred years," the prelates said, "general education, sponsored by states and communities, religious groups and private bodies, has come very near to the goal of providing adequate educational opportunity for every American. It would be blind prejudice to refuse to acknowledge, in this connection, the tremendous accomplishments of the public educational agencies. . . . The plain physical fact of the school system is a matter for unanimous congratulation.

"But if the unparallel growth of the schools supported by public funds is a mighty tribute to American zeal for learning, no less astonishing has been the growth and accomplishment of private and church-related schools."

The statement was signed in the bishop's names by the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference. Members of the board are:

Cardinal Edward Mooney, archbishop of Detroit; Cardinal Samuel Stritch, archbishop of Chicago, Cardinal Francis Spellman, archbishop of New York; Cardinal James Francis McIntyre, archbishop of Los Angeles; Archbishop Karl J. Alter, of Cincinnati; Archbishop Francis P. Keough, of Baltimore; Archbishop John J. Mitty, of San Francisco; Archbishop Richard J. Cushing, of Boston; Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter, of St. Louis; Archbishop John F. O'Hara, of Philadelphia; Bishop Emmet M. Walsh, of Youngstown; Bishop Thomas K. Gorman of Dallas-Fort Worth; Bishop Matthew F. Brady, of Manchester, and Bishop Michael J. Ready, of Columbus.

By the Associated Press.

The statement was issued a week in advance of the start of a White House conference on education called by President Eisenhower. Delegates to the conference are expected to go into the long-disputed argument over public funds and private schools.

The Supreme Court has held that public tax funds may not be used to benefit any sectarian institution, including the parochial school. But it has held also that there is nothing in the Constitution to prevent using public money for services for children in parochial schools.

SEATTLE CRASH CAUSED BY PROP NOT 'FEATHERING'

Pilots of DC-4 Tell of Struggle to Adjust Blade of Engine That Had Failed.

SEATTLE, Nov. 19 (UP) — The pilot of the non-scheduled DC-4 airplane that crashed in a southern Seattle suburb early Friday killing 27 of 74 persons aboard, says his "inability to feather the prop on a run-away engine" caused the tragedy.

William McDougall, and his co-pilot, Fred Hall, both of Miami, Fla., today told Civil Aeronautics Board officials what happened.

"We absolutely could not feather the prop on the Number Four engine, which ran away from us shortly after take-off," McDougall said.

"The drag on the wing pulled us to the right and started us downward, despite our efforts to keep the plane level."

Hall confirmed this and said he tried "desperately" to feather the propeller on the number four engine.

McDougall said there was no "overloading of the plane, and weather conditions (snow at the time) were not the cause, adding:

"Everything was in order when we took off. We had obtained 135 mph speed on the take-off and made our first power reduction when the number four prop ran away and went into full pitch. The RPM's increased and the faulty engine began to whine. The prop flattened out and the wing began to drag.

"We continued to try to feather the prop on the bad engine, but it wouldn't feather, only continuing to produce high R.P.M.s and low pitch. The plane lost its lift and I told the co-pilot we were going down."

"Feathering a prop," adjusts the propeller blades to a position where they do not bite into the air. As in taking an automobile out of gear, the power remains but there is no driving force.

National experts on aviation accidents were here to investigate the wreckage of the plane to establish the definite cause of the crash.

The plane had been chartered by 66 soldiers just home from duty in Korea. They were anxious to get home in time for Thanksgiving. Twenty-six of them were killed, along with a civilian pilot, who was "deadheading" a ride east with his wife and three children, who survived.

The plane was owned by Peninsular Air Transport Co.

CITY ALREADY HAS CONTRACTS LET ON 20 BOND ISSUE PROJECTS

Work Awarded So Far Totals $1,383,214 — Streets, Lighting of Playfields, New Firehouse Included.

St. Louis, moving fast to obtain long-needed public improvements, already has let contracts for 20 projects in the $110,639,000 bond issue program approved by its voters last May, city officials reported yesterday.

St. Louis county will act with equal dispatch to get new highways, bridges, public health facilities and other improvements if voters approve the proposed $39,712,000 bond issue next Tuesday, leaders of the county bond issue drive stated.

Citing the decisiveness with which St. Louis is moving ahead, campaign officials pointed out that the city has awarded contracts totaling $1,383,214, and intends to put almost $11,000,000 more work under contract before the end of the 1955-56 fiscal year next spring.

Tax Increase Small.

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker has proposed that the city limit sale of its bonds to $12,000,000 a year for the first six years, so that no more than a 5-cent increase in the property tax rate will be needed for debt retirement. Increase in the county, if the full program is approved, is estimated at 13 cents.

Projects on which a start has been made in St. Louis by awarding contracts were listed as follows:

Widening of Forest Park avenue from Grand boulevard to Kingshighway—$159,587.

Widening of West Florissant avenue between Bircher and Riverview boulevards—$132,430.

Repair of Kingshighway viaduct between Manchester and McRee avenues—approximately $200,000.

Floodlighting nine playfields in parks—$11,500 for drafting plans and supervising construction.

New Fire Station.

A new fire station at Tenth street and Delmar boulevard—$190,910.

Repair of Riverview drive from Scranton avenue to Chain of Rocks Bridge—$27,500.

Painting community center donated to the city by the Neighborhood Association—$7280.

New street lighting—$66,500 for drafting plans and supervising installation.

Addition to garbage grinding plant—$113,123.

New garbage grinding equipment—$71,100.

Underscaling Riverview roadbed—$17,980.

Resurfacing Riverview from Broadway to the bridge—$72,522.

Resurfacing Arsenal street from Fifty-ninth street to Jamieson avenue—$22,509.

Six branch libraries—$5000 for study of sites and drafting of preliminary plans.

Air-conditioning Municipal Courts and Coroner's Court Buildings—$10,200 for plans.

Widening of Chouteau.

Widening of Chouteau avenue from Jefferson avenue to Grand —$110,458.

Spring avenue viaduct across Mill Creek Valley—$45,000 for preparation of plans.

City Hall modernization — $13,960 for preparation of plans to inclose five stairwells and install four new elevators.

New Fairgrounds Park field house—$90,655.

Forest Park drainage improvement—$15,000 for engineering study.

Improvements: Under Way and Needed

This $132,430 city bond issue project is adding two more traffic lanes to the east side of West Florissant avenue between Bircher and Riverview boulevards. View to the south shows the grading of the abandoned streetcar right-of-way beside Calvary Cemetery.

Northbound traffic on the recently widened 48-foot section of West Florissant avenue opposite Northland Shopping Center in St. Louis county, two miles west of the section the city is widening, is forced to a single lane to pass beneath Wabash Railroad overpass at edge of Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. plant. One of St. Louis county bond issue projects is to widen West Florissant to 48 feet to U.S. Highway 66.

SUIT AGAINST TRUCK LINE HERE SETTLED FOR $60,000

A consent judgment for $60,000 against Southwest Freight Lines, 4800 Bulwer street, was entered in Court of Circuit Judge John K. Regan yesterday for injuries a Denver (Ia.) woman suffered in a traffic accident near Pittsburgh, Kan., last Feb. 15.

The settlement was accepted by Mrs. Gertrude E. Guenther, 52 years old, who was injured when the automobile in which she was riding was struck in the rear by a truck operated by the St. Louis firm. She had filed suit here for $115,000 damages. Her mother, Mrs. Bertha M. Akins, was killed in the collision.

Mrs. Guenther alleged she suffered injuries of the head, back and chest. Her husband, Rudolph J. Guenther, was driving the automobile on their return from Barstow, Calif., where they had visited their son.

CHILD, 5, DIES OF BURNS WHEN CLOTHES CATCH FIRE

Beanna Kay Stanley, 5-year-old daughter of Mrs. Claudie Stanley, 3721 Westminster place, died at City Hospital yesterday of burns suffered Nov. 8 when her clothing caught fire while playing in the kitchen of their basement apartment.

The landlady, Mrs. Thelma Jordan, who was baby-sitting at the time, found the child screaming in the rear yard with her clothing afire. Mrs. Jordan and her son wrapped the girl in a blanket to extinguish the flames. The child's mother was at work at the time.

St. Louisans were urged to start their Christmas mailings immediately by Postmaster Bernard F. Dickmann yesterday.

Dickmann pointed out that copies of a new booklet on packaging and wrapping of parcels are available free of charge at all post office branches and stations in the St. Louis area. Proper packing, wrapping and addressing of parcels are the keys to easy and trouble-free Christmas mailing, he said.

RISE IN CLASS I PREMIUM MILK PRICE RECOMMENDED

Prices paid for class I premium milk will be increased 16 to 18 cents per hundredweight if a recommended decision by the Deputy Administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Service favoring an increase to milk producers in this area is made final, it was announced yesterday.

Russell E. Spaulding, general manager of the Sanitary Milk Producers, said the decision was a result of a recent emergency price hearing requested by the producers.

One of the conclusions in the decision stated that adjustment to the Class I price on the basis of the ratio of receipts from producers to Class I sales should be modified to reflect a combination of changes in recent months.

TAXICAB DRIVER ROBBED

A Black & White Cab Co. driver, Edward Voisey, was robbed of $35 yesterday by a passenger who produced a revolver and ordered him to pull to the curb at St. Charles road and Endicott avenue, St. John, Voisey told police.

Voisey said the man, whom he had picked up at Goodfellow boulevard and Easton avenue, forced him to get out of the machine and then drove it away. The taxicab was recovered in Wellston.

DRUGGIST FIRES AT FOUR FLEEING WITH $400 LOOT

Disregards Gardenville Robbers' Warning — Auto Found With Bullet Dent in Door.

Harry C. Eggers, proprietor of a drug store at 7712 Gravois road, Gardenville, fired three shots yesterday at four men as they drove away at a high speed after holding up the store. More than $400 was obtained in the robbery.

Eggers, who lives at 4132 Alma avenue, told police he disregarded a warning not to move from a back room of the store, into which he had been forced along with a customer and an employe. He grabbed a .32 caliber revolver and ran to the front door, then fired at the robbers.

County police found the getaway car abandoned at 8120 Morganford road, its engine still running, 10 minutes after the holdup. They said one of the bullets had struck it on the right side, below the door window, ricocheting and leaving a dent in the door.

The car, owned by Edward E. Becker, 8926 Arvin place, Affton, had been stolen yesterday from Hampton and Gravois avenues where it was parked, police said.

Police said three of the robbers entered the store, each armed with an automatic and holding a hand up to partly conceal his face. The fourth man remained on guard in a vestibule outside the front door of the store.

Two of the men took Eggers into a rear prescription room and forced him to show them where the safe was. It was standing open, and they removed a metal cashbox from it. The holdup men also forced a clerk, Mrs. Mary Chinnock, 5206 Holly Hills avenue, to open two cash registers in the store.

In addition to more than $400 from the safe and the cash registers, the robbers took a billfold from Mrs. Chinnock's purse containing $7. The billfold, empty, was recovered later about 10 blocks away from the abandoned getaway car.

While the holdup was in progress, a customer, Charles Kubik, 4950A Winona avenue, entered the store. The robbers also took his wallet, which contained $9.

Kubik, Mrs. Chinnock and Eggers were forced into the rear room and told, "Don't move and no one will get hurt." A 14-year-old clerk, Alan Thomas, 9123 Wayne avenue, Affton, was also in the store at the time of the holdup but was not molested.

County police said the holdup men overlooked an additional $110 which was concealed in the back room. Mrs. Chinnock said she had taken it from one of the store cash registers early in the afternoon and hidden it, as a routine precaution.

Washington University Outlines 10-Year Building Program

New Library Given Priority Under Program — Second Entrance From Forsyth to Campus Proposed.

A master plan for constructing new student buildings, athletic fields, dormitories and parking lots at Washington University under the university's Second Century Development Program, which seeks $50,000,000 over a 10-year period, was announced yesterday by Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley.

Priority in the plan is given to a new library, dormitory facilities for undergraduate and graduate students, a university union building and a university community center with a large auditorium.

The exploratory study, as Shepley called the plan, would focus extra-curricular activities at the west end of the campus with a proposed second entrance to the campus from Forsyth boulevard. Both community and university events would be held in the community center.

Dormitory facilities for 400 men, 400 women and 200 married students are proposed for the 40 acres the university owns south of Forsyth and north of Wydown boulevard. With dormitory buildings concentrated in that one area, food service for all students also could be consolidated there.

Area for Athletics.

The area south of Forsyth includes space for expanded intramural athletics. The plan calls for seven football fields and eight baseball diamonds.

Recommended construction includes a new library on the campus and a residence hall at the university's medical center on South Kingshighway. The library, to be built west of Eads Hall, was given priority because of the inadequacy of the present Ridgley Library.

Other new buildings contemplated are a 2000-seat auditorium, including lounges and meeting rooms, and a little theater. Both would be at the west end of the campus. A studio building would be adjacent to Bixby Hall, and an art center would connect Bixby and Givens Hall. The center would contain an art gallery, a combined fine arts and architecture library and a lecture hall.

With construction of new dormitory facilities, McMillan Hall, dormitory for women, would be converted to offices for student activities, university service offices and guest accommodations, the study recommended.

The Women's Building, east of McMillan, would continue to house campus sororities, but the gymnasium would be remodeled into a student lounge and ballroom. A new building would be erected to join McMillan and the Women's building, making a university union-community center. The connecting building would contain cafeteria facilities for 675 persons and a banquet hall for 900.

Plans call for a new gymnasium adjacent to the Field House, where physical education facilities would be concentrated for both men and women students.

Lee, Liggett Hall Changes.

Liggett Hall, now a men's dormitory, would be converted for use by the departments of music and drama, and Lee Hall, also a men's dormitory, would become a classroom building with space for the teaching staff of the College of Liberal Arts.

The plan also calls for expanded facilities for the School of Engineering with an extension of Sever Hall and an addition to Cupples Engineering Laboratory.

Under the proposal, the Student Activities Building, 50 prefabricated housing units and three quonset huts would be torn down.

Shepley said further study is being given to the best permanent location of Fraternity Row. The plan suggests the university's varsity football field, Francis Field, be re-aligned in a north-south rather than an east-west direction.

He added that the plan, first comprehensive restudy of the university campus since 1900, was the result of numerous surveys of the school's needs by the administration and a faculty committee, studying long-range goals and objectives.

The plan will be presented to workers in the Second Century Development Program tomorrow at a meeting at 4 p.m. in the Women's Building. They will be shown a scale model of the present campus with the proposed new construction superimposed on it.

William Akin, president of Laclede Steel Co., is chairman of the development program.

3 CHILDREN DIE IN HOME FIRE AT ROBERTSON

Fourth Child Burned Seriously—Neighbors See Flames, Carry Two Victims Out.

Three children were burned to death and a fourth was burned seriously when flames swept their four-room home at 301 (rear) Hall street, Robertson, last night.

They were the children of Mrs. Eldora Ball, a Negro, who lived at the Hall street address with Namon Ball, a filling station attendant and father of one of the children.

The dead were Andrew, 19 months old; Louis, 5 years, and Samuel, 3. The survivor was Katherine, 5 months old.

Mr. and Mrs. Ball told St. Louis county police they had left home about 6 o'clock to go shopping. At the time, two visiting neighbor girls, Miss Cecile Price and Miss Willa Mae Donnell, were in the home. Miss Price left shortly afterward and Miss Donnell about 45 minutes later, they told police.

Miss Donnell said the four children were asleep and the television set was turned on when she left.

At about 7:30 o'clock, the Price girl and another neighbor, Mrs. Naomi Brooks, noticed smoke and flames coming from the Hall home.

They rushed inside and managed to gather up Katherine and Andrew, the two youngest, but did not see the other two children, they told police.

Mr. and Mrs. Ball returned while the fire was in progress. The two children carried out of the house were rushed to St. Louis County Hospital where Andrew was pronounced dead.

After the flames had been extinguished by the Robertson volunteer fire department, firemen found Samuel face down in another bedroom and Louis on the floor of the living room near the front door.

Cause of the fire was not immediately determined. Ball suggested the possibility that defective wiring may have been responsible inasmuch as he had had trouble with wiring on a previous occasion, police said.

The interior and furnishings of the rented home were destroyed but the roof and outside walls remained intact. There was no estimate made of the damage.

TEXT OF BAR REPORT ON INQUIRY IN AIRMEN'S DETENTION

Following is the text of a report of the Criminal Justice Committee of the Bar Association of St. Louis concerning its investigation of the cases of two Scott Air Force airmen who were held in jail by the Circuit Attorney's office for more than two months without being given a preliminary hearing:

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

RECENT news articles have focused attention upon the situation of two service men who were arrested and charged with the commission of a felony. Neither of these men was able to arrange for bail and they were held in custody. On preliminary examination in the Court of Criminal Correction upon complaints which had been filed against them, they were ordered discharged. Immediately thereafter new complaints were filed against them and they were rearrested and continued to be held in custody. The new complaints had indorsed on them "Hold for Grand Jury," since it was the intention of the Circuit Attorney to present the cases to the grand jury for possible indictment. Preliminary examinations were not held on the new complaints and, unfortunately, an inordinate period of time elapsed before indictments were returned against them.

These circumstances led to criticism of the Circuit Attorney's office. It has been charged that these men were illegally detained and that there has been a denial of their civil rights.

Bill of Rights.

The Bill of Rights of the Constitution of Missouri provides:

"That in criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to appear and defend, in person and by counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation; to meet the witnesses against him face to face; to have process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf; and a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county."

The delay in securing indictments against these men or in according them a preliminary examination upon the new complaints within a reasonable period of time has certainly interfered with their right to have "a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county." It is the opinion of your committee that it is the duty of the Circuit Attorney, as well as the courts, to see that all of the rights guaranteed by the Missouri Constitution to persons accused of crime shall be fully protected. This is especially so where the person accused is not represented by counsel.

While your committee believes that it is important to determine the responsibility for any interference with the civil rights of persons accused of crime, your committee is also of the opinion that it is even more important to determine, if possible, what steps can be taken to prevent a repetition of such occurrences. Accordingly, your committee has examined the facts and circumstances to determine not only the reason for the delay in the prosecution of these defendants but to ascertain if it is not possible to bring about a change in practices which would prevent a reoccurrence of such cases in the future.

A meeting of your committee was held on Tuesday, Nov. 8, 1955, which was attended by Mr. Edward Dowd, the Circuit Attorney. Mr. Dowd related the circumstances regarding the two cases which had been mentioned in the Press. He pointed out first that his office was in disagreement with the acting judge of the Court of Criminal Correction who ordered a discharge of the defendants on preliminary examination, since his assistants were of the opinion that the facts presented warranted holding these men for trial in the Circuit Court.

New Complaints.

Accordingly, according to the practice of his office, new complaints were filed against them and they were immediately rearrested. He stated that it was the intention of his office to present expeditiously the facts to the grand jury for a possible indictment. His explanation for the delay was that the grand jury was involved in the investigation of the Police Department of the City of St. Louis.

In addition, he stated that the matter had been partly presented to the grand jury but could not be completed because of the unavoidable absence of a key witness. After the key witness was available, he stated that the grand jury did not wish to be distracted from the Police Department investigation.

He conceded, however, that there was an element of oversight so far as his office is concerned and agreed that his office should have proceeded more diligently so that the delay in obtaining indictments should not have occurred.

Your committee discussed with Mr. Dowd the various steps that could be taken to avoid such occurrences in the future. Mr. Dowd expressed his complete willingness to co-operate in any steps that could properly be taken to avoid such occurrences. Out of the discussion came the suggestion for the possible adoption by the Court of Criminal Correction of a rule of Court which will presently be discussed.

Before doing so, it may be well to examine briefly the practice of the Circuit Attorney in filing new complaints and ordering the re-arrest of defendants who have been discharged after preliminary examination on an original complaint. It is the opinion of your committee that the Circuit Attorney has the right to follow such a practice in the exercise of reasonable judgment.

Right to Disagree.

In other words, the Circuit Attorne yhas the right to disagree with the action of the Court in discharging such a defendant and in initiating proper steps to hold such a defendant in custody until either an indictment may be returned by the grand jury or another preliminary examination held on the new complaint.

It is the opinion of your committee that the practice of filing a second complaint after discharge on preliminary examination should be followed only in those cases where the Circuit Attorney has a substantial basis for belief that the case should be prosecuted and that it can be prosecuted successfully upon indictment.

After discussing this with Mr. Dowd, it appears that he is in agreement with this view of your committee. He is also in agreement that the practice of filing a second complaint and ordering re-arrest in all case where a defendant had been discharged upon preliminary examination, the Circuit Attorney would render useless the function of the Court of Criminal Correction in conducting preliminary examinations of persons charged with the commission of a felony to determine whether there is probable cause to hold the accused for trial in the Circuit Court or whether, on the other hand, there is no probable cause for holding the accused, so that he should be discharged. Mr. Dowd has assured your committee that he is in agreement with this principle.

Rule 23.03 of the Supreme Court provides, in effect, that a preliminary examination on a felony charge shall be held as soon as possible. Rule 23.06 makes provision for the postponement of a preliminary examination for "good and sufficient cause" and provides that each postponement shall be for a period not exceeding 10 days. Having these rules of the Supreme Court in mind, your committee has proposed to the judges of the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction the adoption of the following rule:

"A preliminary examination shall be had on all felony charges within 10 days after the filing of said charge in this Court except the preliminary examination may be postponed from time to time, not to exceed 10 days at one time, upon request and with the consent of both parties, or upon a finding of good and sufficient cause therefor, supported by a written memorandum signed by the party requesting said postponement."

This proposed rule has been discussed by your committee with Judges Fitzgibbon and Comerford of the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction and with Mr. Dowd. The judges of the Court of Criminal Correction have indicated their willingness to adopt this proposed rule.

Your committee has also discussed with the judges of the Court of Criminal Correction and with Mr. Dowd the procedure to be followed under this proposed rule and the results which are expected to follow. They are as follows:

When a new complaint (or information as it is called under the local practice) is filed against an accused who has been discharged after preliminary examination, the complaint will not be indorsed "hold for grand jury." The complaint will be complete in all respects so that it will be possible for the court and the Circuit Attorney to conduct a preliminary examination upon the basis of such new or second complaint. Under the proposed rule, it will be set down for hearing within 10 days.

If the Circuit Attorney has not obtained an indictment within such period of time, he will not be able to obtain a postponement of hearing on the complaint unless he can convince the court that there is good and sufficient cause for a continuance. If there is no sufficient cause for such a postponement, the preliminary examination will proceed or, in lieu thereof, the defendant will be discharged.

Postponement Cause.

If the court deems that there is good cause for postponement, a memorandum will be filed by either the Circuit Attorney or the defendant, depending upon which has asked for the postponement, recording the basis or reasons for such postponement. If the postponement has been granted at the request of the Circuit Attorney, Mr. Dowd intends that additional copies will be made of the memorandum filed in court so that the assistant in charge of the grand jury will be advised of the necessity of presenting the matter promptly or proceeding with preliminary examination when the matter is next set for hearing.

In any case, Mr. Dowd has assured your committee that if an indictment is desired, he intends to have the matter presented to a grand jury promptly so that, in most instances, an indictment will have been obtained before the date upon which the second complaint is first set for hearing.

Your committee stressed quite strongly to Mr. Dowd the importance of seeing that the office of Circuit Attorney does everything possible to protect the rights of persons accused of crime and, particularly, to see that accused persons who are confined are afforded the opportunity of getting the charge promptly laid and a trial promptly held.

Mr. Dowd expressed entire agreement with these principles and assured your committee that all steps will be taken to set up administrative practices within the office of Circuit Attorney to make sure that undue delay shall not occur in presenting matters to grand juries for possible indictment or in seeing that complaints are promptly handled through preliminary examinations.

It is the opinion of your committee that when the proposed rule of court is adopted it will be enforced strictly, but with fairness, and that, with the co-operation of the office of Circuit Attorney, there will be no re-occurrence of the unfortunate cases which led to the preparation of this report.

Following is the text of a statement issued by T. Hartley Pollock, president of the Bar Association of St. Louis, after the association's Criminal Justice Committee issued its report:

The Committee on Criminal Justice of the Bar Association of St. Louis headed by Mr. Frank P. Aschemeyer has completed its report to the executive committee of the Bar Association of St. Louis. The executive committee has approved this report with strong commendation for Mr. Aschemeyer and his committee and with the recommendation that the Court of Criminal Correction and the Circuit Attorney take steps to put into effect without delay the recommendations of that report. We have been assured of their hearty co-operation and action to this effect.

Constitutional Rights.

The preservation of all the constitutional rights enjoyed by the people of this community is a matter of the greatest importance to the Bar Association of St. Louis. We deplore any deprivation of these rights arising from any cause in this community and regard as intolerable the continuance of the causes leading to such deprivation.

Because of the importance of the matters which have been brought to our attention by the press, Mr. Aschemeyer and his committee, with considerable dispatch, have formulated a report which not only takes cognizance of the pertinent facts but also proposes and reaches a solution to prevent the recurrence of any such situations in the future.

We believe that the public interest will best be served by the immediate adoption of the rule proposed by the committee's report along with strict enforcement and diligent action by the Circuit Attorney's office and the courts consistent with the spirit of this report.

In this investigation the committee has had full co-operation of the Circuit Attorney and the judges of the Court of Criminal Correction.

BROAD COUNTY PROGRAM RESTS ON BOND VOTE

E. E. Pershall of Hazelwood, which took over after the county council approved the recommendations of two earlier committees. These groups, after exhaustive studies, pared down proposals aggregating more than $80,000,000.

Hope From St. Louis Vote.

Bond sponsors, mindful of the whopping majorities by which St. Louis voters approved a $110,639,000 public improvement bond issue last May, were hopeful that county voters would react similarly.

Arrangements have been made by the committee with county fire departments and with municipalities that have air raid warning signals to sound their sirens for a brief period at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday as a get-out-the-vote reminder. Sterling P. Davidson Jr., president of the St. Louis County League of Municipalities, is in charge of the project.

Indorsements of all the bond propositions have been voted by a large number of organizations—civic, business, professional, labor and political.

As in the case of the 1954 bonds, County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews has announced that a supervisory or "watchdog" citizens' committee will be established if the bonds are approved. Nucleus of this committee will be members of the earlier group. Its co-chairmen are Pershall and Donald L. Barnes of Chesterfield.

Estimates by the Governmental Research Institute, a privately financed fact-finding agency, are that the bonds would add 13 cents to the tax rate on each $100 of assessed valuation. This amounts to $3.12 a year in taxes on a home assessed at $2400, $4.68 on $3600 and $7.80 on $6000. Calculations were based on issuance of 20-year bonds over an eight-year period, with the levy starting when the first bonds are issued and ending with retirement of the final batch, possibly 28 years hence.

Highway Program.

The three propositions dealing with highways, which dollarwise constitute about 87 per cent of the program, are intended to meet the county's growing traffic problems. Major surgery is planned on the antiquated system of highways whose inadequacy has slowed traffic in many parts of the county.

Proposition No. 1 would provide $8,500,000 for the county's one-half share of right-of-way costs for three radial expressways — Mark Twain, Daniel Boone, and Ozark — and for right-of-way costs for a north-south Outer Belt throughway west of Lindbergh boulevard.

Proposition No. 3 — for $9,837,000—calls for widening and resurfacing of 42.69 miles of streets and roads, building 14.55 miles of new pavement, buying 43.89 miles of right-of-way, constructing four new railroad grade separations, widening three others and building or improving a large number of bridges in many sections of the county.

The third and largest highway proposition, No. 6, for $16,100,000, includes $8,000,000 for purchase of 18 miles of right-of-way and $8,100,000 for construction of 4.64 miles of limited access, four-lane, divided Inner Belt highway connecting the northern and southern parts of the county. The central stretch of this highway would be west of the city of Clayton and several miles east of Lindbergh boulevard.

Three Expressways.

For the three expressways the federal and state governments are ready to put up $43,562,500 for the other half of the right-of-way costs and for all construction, or at the rate of $6.50 for each $1 in county money.

Opposition to the expressways proposal is largely by owners of property on and near the proposed Daniel Boone connection from the highway's present dead-end at Brentwood boulevard in Richmond Heights, to the express highway in Forest Park.

Critics of the Inner Belt proposal argue that the part to be built "doesn't go anywhere." Sponsors reply that the 4.64 miles, from Page boulevard on the north to a new feeder road on abandoned street car tracks, 1500 feet south of Eager road, would be in the congested central part of the county. Purchase of the right-of-way for future Inner Belt use is urged on the ground that cost will be prohibitive within a few years.

This will be the second submission of a major highway bond program to voters within two years. On Feb. 9, 1954, a $32,124,000 proposal, covering expressways and a highway network roughly similar to the present program, was defeated by a vote of 52,309 for to 33,527 against, short of the required two-thirds majority. Voters also rejected by narrow majorities bond items for government buildings and parks, but approved $5,108,500 in bonds for hospitals, voting machines and refuse disposal landfills.

The road program being submitted Tuesday contains a larger number of individual projects, with a substantial number in the northern and southern portions of the county, where there was opposition in the 1954 election. Also eliminated is the Central Parkway proposal through Clayton and University City, which set off bitter opposition by nearby residents.

No substantial opposition has risen to the five non-highway propositions. But proponents were apprehensive over the reaction of some taxpayers to the state-ordered increase in real assessments, which has resulted in some tax increases. County officials have pointed out that local tax rates were reduced to compensate for the assessment rise and that the bulk of the tax increases actually are the result of higher school and library levies approved by the voters themselves.

Of the $800,000 provided in Proposition No. 2, $200,000 would go for a home for temporary care of neglected and abandoned children, pending their settlement in foster homes. The remaining $600,000 would be spent for an institution for care and treatment of delinquent children whose cases are not deemed serious enough to justify sending them to a state reformatory. Need for these institutions has been emphasized by citizen welfare agencies.

Proposition No. 4 would provide $2,000,000 for purchase of 100 neighborhood playgrounds and athletic fields in both incorporated and unincorporated areas and $200,000 for small park-like picnic areas at turnouts along major highways.

The $675,000 provided under Proposition No. 5 would permit purchase of 400 voting machines, in addition to the 400 bought with $650,000 in bonds voted in 1954. Those bought initially, at $1688 each, were found insufficient, as 757 will be needed for the November election next year and additional ones later as the county continues its rapid population growth. The machines now on hand will not be used in Tuesday's election.

Proposition No. 7 would add $1,500,000 to the $3,458,500 voted for hospital construction at the February 1954 election. At that time a $5,000,000 program was contemplated, with the Federal Government providing $1,500,000 under the Hill-Burton Act. However, there has been a delay in availability of this money and the Citizens' Supervisory Committee for the 1954 bonds has recommended that additional bonds be voted to permit completion of the urgently needed construction. Later, when the federal subsidy is received, sponsors say, it can go to retire the bonds.

The over-all hospital program includes $3,500,000 addition to County Hospital to house 50 mental and 150 chronically ill patients; $700,000 for a health department building, $400,000 for a medical staff residence and $400,000 for miscellaneous improvements.

Civil defense needs, covered by Proposition No. 8 for $100,000, consist of $50,000 to pay the county's one-third share of the joint St. Louis-St. Louis county alternate control center building at Howard Bend waterworks on the Missouri river, $12,500 for radio and other equipment and $37,500 for air raid warning signals for unincorporated areas.

In Poison Case

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

MISS ANNA MARX (top) who died Oct. 21 of arsenic poisoning. MRS. JUANITA WILLIAMS (bottom) admitted putting the poison in a cup of water as they lunched together Oct. 20, police said. Both were employed by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Levis, 9 Wydown terrace, Clayton. A warrant charging Mrs. Williams with murder was issued last night.

their hearty co-operation and action to this effect," he said. Adoption of the rule, he added, will prevent recurrence of similar situations in the future and take care of persons who are now in jail under similar conditions.

One of the two men held for 18 days at Police Headquarters is Richard W. Buhrman, 21-year-old metal polisher of the 1300 block of Bayard avenue, who was arrested Nov. 1 suspected of stealing a fender skirt, worth $10, from an automobile. In this case, Prosecuting Attorney William J. Geekie's office failed to file a warrant against Buhrman, which would have made it possible for him to have been arraigned and, if held, given a preliminary hearing.

Larceny Warrant.

A warrant charging him with petty larceny, a misdemeanor, was filed late Friday in the Court of Criminal Correction and Buhrman is still in jail. Judge Louis Comerford said he would be given a hearing as soon as the case is brought to his attention by the Sheriff's office and the prosecuting attorney's office, in any event within 10 days.

The oher prisoner is James Crews, 23-year-old Negro laborer of 2230 Biddle street, who also has been in the holdover since Nov. 1, when he was arrested suspected of selling a revolver without a permit.

Failure of the Circuit Attorney's office to file a warrant against Crews made it impossible for him to be arraigned or to obtain a speedy preliminary hearing. A warrant charging him with selling a revolver without a permit was finally filed Friday after the case was brought to the attention of Judge McLaughlin.

The case of Buhrman also was called to Judge McLaughlin's attention. In both cases he ordered Joseph Noskay, assistant director of the Public Defender Bureau, to prepare petitions for writs of habeas corpus to free the two men.

Meanwhile, however, Assistant Circuit Attorney William J. Shaw checked on the case of Crews, at Judge McLaughlin's direction, and learned that all the information in the case was available in the circuit attorney's office, but that it had not been filed in the form of a warrant in the Court of Criminal Correction. The warrant was filed a few minutes later.

Associate Prosecuting Attorney Thomas W. Shannon, checking on Buhrman's case, recalled that he had forgotten to file a warrant against him in the Court of Criminal Correction.

Other procedural errors were made in Buhrman's case. The police had him listed as a prisoner of the circuit attorney, when in fact he was held for the prosecuting attorney. This confused the records, so that neither office knew whose prisoner he was.

In Crews's case, Dowd said he did not handle the matter himself, but that one of his assistants told him that police had informed the assistant that Crews was at liberty on bond. Dowd told a reporter police probably confused Crews with a man named Crowe who was held in the holdover. Police records, however, show that no one by the name of Crowe was confined in the holdover from Nov. 1 to the present.

Crews was arraigned yesterday before Judge Comerford, who said he would be given a preliminary hearing by Judge FitzGibbon within 10 days.

The holdover is intended as a detention room for short confinements. Prisoners there are not permitted shaving equipment; they cannot smoke; there are no sheets or blankets on their beds, which consist of a sheet of steel hung from the wall with iron bars supporting it, and they are given no change of clothing unless it is brought to them by their families.

Had these men been in jail they would have had bed clothes, mattresses, clean clothes when needed and would have been allowed to shave and smoke.

Judge McLaughlin, presiding in the criminal assignment division of the court, criticized Dowd's office for not reducing felony charges in cases where the circumstances justify it in the last three weeks. Prior to that time charges were reduced in some cases.

"Dowd did not come and tell me he was reversing his policy," the judge said. "We must have reductions in some of these cases to avoid congestion at the jail and to break the log jam on the dockets."

He also was critical of Dowd's policy for not empowering his assistants to reduce charges under justifying circumstances.

"I know of 15 cases which could have been disposed of," Judge McLaughlin said, "but attorneys for the prisoners postponed hearings until the atmosphere is more clear than it has been for the last 10 days in the Municipal Courts Building."

RULE TO PROTECT PRISONER RIGHTS PUT IN EFFECT

not sufficient cause, the report said, the preliminary hearing will be held, or the defendant will be discharged.

Dowd assured the committee in a conference that if an indictment is desired he will give the matter to the grand jury before the 10-day period for a hearing expires.

Following the release of the committee's report, T. Hartley Pollock, president of the Bar Association, praised the Post-Dispatch for "rendering a real public service" in bringing the condition to the association's attention.

The executive committee of the association, he said, approved the committee's report and recommended the immediate adoption of the new rule and the method of procedure under the rule to the circuit attorney's office and the judges of the Court of Criminal Correction.

Eisenhower and Top Advisers To Confer at Mountain Camp

President Will Meet With Security Council Tomorrow and Cabinet Tuesday on Defense and Security Problems.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Nov. 19—President Eisenhower will review the nation's defense and security policies in a meeting Monday with 20 of his top advisers, then follow it with a session of the Cabinet Tuesday, the White House announced today.

For the first time, helicopters will be use to transport some of Mr. Eisenhower's Cabinet members and chief defense planners from Washington to Camp David, the isolated, closely-guarded presidential retreat where both meetings will be held.

The convalescing Chief Executive will drive from his Gettysburg farm home to Camp David in the Catoctin mountains 22 miles south of here.

He will preside Monday afternoon at a meeting of the five-man National Security Council, augmented by other top-level assistants, and will stay overnight at the mountain lodge for the Cabinet meeting.

The two conferences will bring together the largest number of high-ranking Government officials Mr. Eisenhower has seen at one time since he suffered a heart attack eight weeks ago.

Full-Scale Discussion.

The expected full-scale discussion of defense strategy will come five days after the close of the deadlocked Geneva Big Four foreign ministers conference.

A fleet of three H-21 "Flying Banana" helicopters will leave the Pentagon helicopter strip about 1:30 p.m. Monday for the 45-minute air trip to Camp David. The shuttle will be repeated at 8 a.m. Tuesday for those cabinet members desiring to travel by air.

Another helicopter, an H-19, will bring Vice President Richard M. Nixon from Washington's Military Air Transport Service terminal early Monday afternoon. Nixon will go to the capital from Florida, where he is vacationing.

The helicopters, piloted by Air Force personnel, will land on a small strip about 500 yards from the President's mountain cottage.

Mr. Eisenhower will be accompanied on the drive to Camp David by Allen W. Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, who will come to Gettysburg Monday morning for preliminary discussions with the President.

Camp David, originally President Franklin D. Roosevelt's "Shangri-la," is high in the Catoctin mountains, six miles west of Thurmont, Md.

Accomodations for 20.

Its winterized cabins will accommodate about 20 persons overnight. Altogether, the camp has about 14 buildings grouped around the President's cottage. A military installation, it is guarded by Marines.

The meetings will mark the first time Mr. Eisenhower has left his farm home for anything but short trips into Gettysburg since he arrived here last Monday. He has not met with the National Security Council since early in August.

Mr. Eisenhower will return to Gettysburg immediately after the Cabinet session, and any details of the meeting will be announced here.

A wet and steady snowfall, Gettysburg's first of the season, kept Mr. Eisenhower indoors today and probably will limit his activities tomorrow to conversation and bridge with a group of old friends visiting him over the weekend.

Among the guests is Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, commander of North Atlantic Treaty Orzanization military forces. It was expected he and the President would spend some time discussing the European defense picture.

His weekend guests, in addition to Gen. Gruenther, were W. Alton Jones of New York, board chairman of Cities Service Corp., and his wife, and William E. Robinson, president of the Coca Cola Co.

STRIKERS CIRCLE PLANT IN AUTOS, WORKERS ENTER

NEW CASTLE, Ind., Nov. 19 (AP)—Jeering strikers drove in circles today on streets around the Perfect Circle Corp. piston ring foundry, scene of a riot last month, but their jeers didn't keep non-strikers from going to work.

Chesley Juday, foundry manager, said 138 non-strikers finally entered the plant, some of them by nudging through, although cars were driving bumper to bumper in two circles, moving in opposite directions.

Juday said a stone hit the car of Bob Gruler, a plant supervisor, but nobody was hurt.

Don Ballard, public relations man for the CIO United Auto Workers here, said he hadn't heard of the demonstration and said there had been no union plans for it.

"We can't control the actions of individuals and small groups," Ballard said, adding that the union itself still stands behind pledges of non-violent picketing made to Gov. George N. Craig Oct. 18.

Police said about 25 cars were in the circling caravan, but there were only five pickets on foot at the gate. That limit was set by a court injunction granted Aug. 1, just a week after the CIO United Auto Workers started their strike.

Two police squad cars patrolled the area, and off-duty policemen were alerted, but the caravan broke up after an hour.

GUIDEBOOK URGES CITIES BE BROKEN APART AND REBUILT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (AP)—The old structure of American cities must be "broken apart and reconstructed" to cope with congestion, blight and failing finances, the United States Chamber of Commerce said today.

In a new 102-page "Urban Development Guidebook," the chamber called on local chambers to take leadership in forming development teams of "leaders and decision-makers" in each city.

Such teams have proved themselves able to provide the driving force necessary to plan and execute a broad attack on city problems, the chamber said, as well as to supply the needed public understanding and support.

Traffic congestion has become both "an intolerable nuisance and an increasingly worse handicap to business," the chamber reported. "The typical city or town is threatened with internal suffocation."

OFFICE EXPENSES COST $25,000 AT BIG FOUR TALKS

GENEVA, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Big Four foreign ministers conference which ended in failure cost almost $25,000 in office expenses alone.

The total covered all expenses of the joint four power secretariat set up for the conference, including interpreters, documents, guards, office rent and administration. It did not include the individual outlay of each government for the travel and accommodation of its delegation.

Secretariat expenses for the three-week conference, which ended Wednesday, totaled $24,991. Each of the four governments was sent a bill for $6247 for its share of the expenses.

Quintuplet Marie Dionne Is Ill And in Hospital for Observation

Father Says She Is Lonely, 'Run Down' —Second Time She Has Left Convent.

—Associated Press Wirephoto.
MARIE DIONNE

MONTREAL, Nov. 19 (AP)—Marie Dionne, one of the surviving quintuplets who has been studying at a Quebec convent, has become ill again and is in a hospital here for observation.

In North Bay, Ont., Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, said today he had been informed Marie's health is "run down" and that she is suffering from loss of appetite and loneliness.

It was the second time in 16 months Marie had left the Roman Catholic convent for the same reasons.

While it was reported that she will be kept under observation for a month at Notre Dame L'Esperance Hospital, where Marie's sisters Cecile and Yvonne are training as nurses, the hospital would not for a time confirm she had been admitted. Confirmation came tonight, however, from Sister Marie Legarde, a nun at the Catholic institution. She told a reporter the girl is under observation.

Marie's family said she left the cloister of the Servants of the Blessed Sacrament in Quebec City, where she has been studying for religious orders, and traveled here with a nurse.

Marie originally entered the convent Nov. 3, 1953, and served six months as a postulant before being elevated to the rank of novice. Poor health, loss of appetite and extreme homesickness were given as the reasons for her return home in July 1954. She went back to the convent last September.

Her father was told about Marie's health in a telephone conversation with Cecile. He said he did not think Marie would return to the convent this time. Marie's quintuplet sister Emilie died in a Quebec convent in August 1954.

The other surviving quintuplet, Annette, is studying to be a music teacher at Marguerite Bourgeoys College. The girls are 21 years old.

ROBBER IS SHOT, ADMITS SERIES OF 15 CRIMES

Says He Got Total of $5000 — Wounded by Detective on Guard at Store.

Hubert Coggeshall, who was shot and wounded while robbing a liquor store at 1000 South Eighteenth street, admitted to police yesterday that he had obtained about $5000 in a series of 15 robberies during the last six months.

He was shot Friday night by Detective Raymond Holtzman who was in the liquor store in compliance with orders from the detective bureau to give strict surveillance to liquor and grocery stores in South St. Louis because the ratio of robberies had increased recently in the area.

Coggeshall, 41 years old, who shot and killed one of three hold-up men in 1952 when he was operator of a liquor store at 4 North Grand boulevard, was taken to City Hospital with a bullet wound of his left shoulder.

Detective Holtzman was in the back of the liquor store on South Eighteenth street and saw Coggeshall enter and go up to the manager, William Silverman, 6601 Enright avenue. He did not see Coggeshall's pistol until the robber transferred it from one hand to another as he reached into the cash drawer.

At that point, Holtzman came into the front of the store. "Drop that gun," he said, pointing his service revolver at Coggeshall.

The robber turned quickly toward the officer. Holtzman fired one shot and Coggeshall fell. At the hospital he was quoted as saying: "If my fingers worked as fast as my mind, I would have shot that policeman, but I'm glad I didn't."

Coggeshall gave an address in the 4500 block of Westminster place.

'POLICE BENEFIT' STILL SCHEDULED FOR WELLSTON

To Be Held Despite Charges Mayor Hayes Embezzled Funds of Previous Ones.

Plans for this year's "police benefit" dance at Wellston were going ahead yesterday despite the fact that Mayor Leo J. Hayes, the principal promoter, has been indicted on charges of embezzling money raised at two previous dances.

William J. Becker, Wellston city counselor and attorney for Hayes, said the dance would go on as scheduled Dec. 9, and predicted that it will be "the biggest we've ever had." The benefit has been an annual affair since 1953.

The head of the firm that has a contract for making the arrangements, Mrs. Irene Myrick, disagreed. She has had charge of selling tickets and advertising for a printed program, but said no more of either will be sold by her concern, "in view of all the publicity" on the charges against Hayes.

She predicted that the dance will lose money, but agreed to go through with it because "a contract is a contract."

Becker said Hayes still has $2500 to $3000 of the $5851 he is accused of converting "to his own use," and that when he is brought to trial "we will lay it on the courtroom table in the coin of the realm."

The remainder of the money has been spent for police uniforms, equipment and charities, Becker said.

The St. Louis county grand jury, which returned the indictments, plans to resume its inquiry Tuesday.

Because of a misplaced paragraph in Saturday's Post-Dispatch, it was erroneously implied that an order for Becker's arrest had been broadcast. The intended reference was to an order for the arrest of Hayes, which had been issued Friday.

INDEPENDENT UNIONS HERE MAY JOIN ALLIANCE

They Are Supporting Move for National Group as Protection in CIO-AFL Merger.

Independent labor unions in the St. Louis area are participating in a national movement to form an alliance of independents for mutual protection against the coming merger of the AFL and CIO, scheduled to go into effect Dec. 5.

Implications of the merger, with possibility of raids during a subsequent all-out organizing campaign, have prompted the Midwest Council of Independent Unions, composed of about 10 unions in the St. Louis area, to support the move to create a national alliance through merger of existing independent bodies.

Roger M. Rettig, president of the council and head of the National Independent Union Council, of which the local group is an auxiliary, told the Post-Dispatch that a committee from the national organization would meet in St. Louis Dec. 18 with representatives of the Confederated Unions of America to plan for unification. Those organizations, although loosely organized, represent the major groups of independents. Efforts may be made to draw some industry-wide federations of independents into the proposed new organization.

Represent 10,000 Employes.

Rettig estimated that independent locals here represent about 10,000 employes. The NIUC, he said, had a mailing list of 2500 independent groups embracing perhaps 1,800,000 members. The Confederated Unions, with headquarters in Chicago, recently announced 75 affiliates representing 75,000 workers. One of the participants in the three-day conference here is to be Eugene Raetz, who also is a board member of the recently organized Chicago Federation of Independent Labor.

The independent organizations, fearful of being gobbled up by the 16,000,000-member AFL-CIO body, represent primarily relatively small individual unions at various plants. They are struggling to preserve autonomy and to remain free from direction from the top.

They are in a different category from the strong independent United Mine Workers, the railroad brotherhoods and the tightly organized independent internationals expelled from the CIO in 1949 because of Communist domination.

The smaller unions have been the forgotten groups of the labor movement. Some of them evolved from company-dominated unions formed during labor's greatest organizing campaign during the New Deal era.

Case of Sink or Swim.

Now their leaders feel they are in jeopardy and are extending an invitation to any who do not wish to go along with the AFL-CIO merger to join the independent fold.

"It is a cast of sink or swim with us," Rettig told the Post-Dispatch," but we feel we have a legitimate place in the labor movement. We are faced with big labor just as the small business man is confronted with big business.

"The main incentive for independent unions is local autonomy.. We do not have rackets or politics or despotism from without. We realize that we lack the funds and the research staffs of the big unions. It is up to us to co-operate with each other.

"Through our national bodies we are trying to get representation on the Secretary of Labor's advisory committee. We feel that we should have a voice on other Government committees in which labor is represented."

Other Officers.

Other officers of the St. Louis organization of independents are vice presidents Allan E. Snyder, head of the Independent Union of Chemical Plant Workers, representing employes of Mallinckrodt Chemical Works, and Truman Davis, business agent of the Alton Paper Workers, composed of workers at the Alton Box Board Co.

John Kline, secretary-treasurer of the Mid-West Council, heads the Independent Union of Salesmen, Chauffeurs and Service Men, including Pepsi-Cola drivers. Rettig is also a leader of the Electrical Workers Independent Union, representing employes of Moloney Electric Co.

Other affiliates of the St. Louis council, all NLRB certified bargaining representatives, include Delmar Warehouse Employes Union, at International Shoe Co.; the Independent Steel Workers, at the Scullin steel plant; the Baldor Employes Association, representing employes of Baldor Electric Co.; the Independent Dairy Drivers, who deal with Adams Dairy, Inc., and the Independent Brotherhood of Packing House Workers, which has affiliations in various sections of the country.

The Midwest Council, organized two years ago basically as a clearing house for information, has aided various members in negotiating contracts through exchange of information. It sent a committee to Jefferson City at the last session of the Legislature to participate in organized labor's successful campaign to defeat the so-called "right to work" bill.

Brainstorm on Weather.

LONDON, Nov. 19 (AP)—The British weatherman, frequent target of criticism, has enlisted the help of an electronic brain in trying to forecast the nation's tricky weather. The meteorological office says the mechanical man has achieved results "comparable in accuracy with normal methods."

MAN AND WIFE KILLED IN CRASH NEAR IMPERIAL

Auto Apparently Veered Across Highway in Front of County Couple's Car.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Miller, 7513 Leadale drive, Greendale, were killed yesterday when their automobile collided head-on with another car on U.S. Highway 61-67 south of Imperial, Mo.

The two occupants of the other car, which state police said apparently went out of control in rounding a curve at high speed, were seriously injured and were taken to St. Anthony Hospital. They were identified by papers in their possession as Robert Renfro, 3317 Lemp avenue, and Robert Tratt, 1741 Waverly Place.

Authorities said the second machine, owned by Renfro, apparently veered across the four-lane highway and struck the Millers' car.

Both Renfro and Tratt were suffering from shock and which one was the driver could not be determined immediately. Renfro suffered a fracture of the right shoulder and Tratt a fractured right thigh.

Miller, 55 years old, died shortly after being taken to St. Anthony Hospital. His wife, 55, was killed instantly. Miller was an employe of the Leschen Wire Rope division of H. K. Porter Co., 2727 Hamilton avenue.

Robert E. Stevenson of Alton, a freshman at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, was killed yesterday when the automobile in which he was riding overturned on Illinois Route 13 east of Marion, Ill., 90 miles southeast of St. Louis.

Stevenson, 23, was the son of Mrs. Muriel Stevenson, 228 Hamilton street, Alton. Werner Knight, 18, of Carterville, Ill., another occupant of the car, also was killed. Police said it was not known who was the driver.

Frank J. McDevitt, president of the Board of Public Service, was in St. John's Hospital yesterday with a broken collar bone, an injury he suffered Friday night when hit by an automobile. The driver did not stop.

The accident occurred at Pershing and Newstead avenues shortly before 9 p.m., when McDevitt was walking his dog. The car was going south in Newstead and struck McDevitt as it turned into Pershing, at high speed.

McDevitt is 72 years old, and lives at 4402 McPherson avenue.

Expert Says a Few Basic Changes Would Improve Congress's Work

Dr. Galloway Urges Steps to Strengthen Leadership, Improve Discipline and Increase Party Responsibility.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—A few basic changes in congressional practices would enable that branch to carry its growing work load more efficiently and with greater responsibility to the electorate, in the view of Dr. George B. Galloway, an authority on the organization and operation of Congress.

Galloway, senior specialist in American government of the Library of Congress, was staff director of the LaFollette-Monroney joint committee that conducted an exhaustive study of the functions of Congress and wrote the congressional reorganization act of 1946.

His recommendations as to further changes were made in a comparative review of the United States Congress and the British Parliament, undertaken with a $10,000 grant from the Ford Foundation and published today by the National Planning Association.

An N.P.A. committee, headed by Robert Heller, also an expert on congressional organization, said of Galloway's work: "At a time when parliamentary democracy faces such potential dangers as instability in France, deadlock in America and cabinet tyranny in the United Kingdom, the question of methods of improving the efficiency of our national legislatures is one of major importance."

1946 Act May Be Reviewed.

In talking with reporters Galloway said there was some sentiment at the Capitol in favor of reviewing the 1946 act in the light of experiences of the last decade, although no formal movement was afoot.

One matter for review, he said, is the "amazing proliferation of standing subcommittees." There are now 187 standing subcommittees, an increase of 55 in the last three years, in addition to full committees and special committees.

"There are 235 committees of all types," Galloway said, "as against 230 ten years ago. So in that respect we are right back where we were in 1945. Recently Senator Monroney said that 'evidently the process of fission has gone too far; the remedy, a task of the parent committees, is to consolidate many of the subcommittees.'"

The reference was to Senator A. S. Mike Monroney (Dem.), Oklahoma, who, as a member of the House, was vice chairman of the joint committee on the organization of Congress. The chairman was the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette Jr., (Prog.), Wisconsin.

The problem of reducing the number of committees was one of the major obstacles to passage of the 1946 act. The LaFollette-Monroney group proposed to reduce the number of standing committees in the Senate from 33 to 16 and in the House from 48 to 18, eliminating the chairmanships of many powerful politicians. There is now a total of 34 standing full committees.

Vast Payroll Involved.

"Apparently," Galloway commented, "the committees have found the subcommittee system the best way of handling their business. The House Agriculture Committee, for example, has 16 standing subcommittees, one for each crop. The Senate Judiciary has 14 subgroups with a total staff of 160 persons, larger than the entire staff of the Congressional Legislative Reference Service, and a budget of $1,000,000 a year."

Galloway estimated the total number of persons employed on the staffs of members of Congress, congressional committees and auxiliary groups at 3250 organized in 10 categories and accounting for an annual payroll of $24,000,000.

The 1936 "streamlining" of the committee system has not been entirely nullified, Galloway said, by the increase in the number of standing subcommittees from 130 in 1945 to 187 today, but he pointed out that in some respects the intent of the reorganization act has not been followed. For example, he said, it was contemplated that each senator should have (with certain exceptions) not more than two assignments to standing committees. Senator Theodore Francis Green (Dem.), Rhode Island, who is 88 years old, has at present 12 committee assignments of all types, he said.

M.P.s Have Only Lockers.

The gains in staffing in the last decade have been "striking," however, Galloway observed. He found American congressional staffs and office space were the envy of members of the British House of Commons, who are furnished with lockers in a corridor but who have no allowance for clerk hire or office space. Also, he noted, members of the House of Commons receive $2800 a year as compared to the $22,500 paid a congressman.

Most of the changes in practice suggested by Galloway were designed to reduce weaknesses in the structure of party leadership. If party government is a desirable feature of the American political system, he said, a more efficient mechanism must be found to help the majority party develop and carry out the campaign pledges on which the voters base the selection of their representatives in Congress.

A reporter suggested that perhaps party responsibility would not be as desirable in a large country governed by coalitions as it would be in England. Galloway replied his proposals do not involve any basic constitutional changes. He said he considered it "beyond the realm of practical politics to think that the people of the United States would now accept fundamental changes in their form of government." Additional party responsibility and discipline is, however, desirable in the United States, he said, and one means of approaching it might be by a revival of the binding caucus of party members.

Lack of Firm Control.

Galloway noted in his report that there are marked advantages in the United States system of dividing congressional labor among more committees than in Parliament (which has five) but he pointed out that Parliament has retained greater control over its committees and policies than Congress, which has delegated many of its legislative and investigating functions to standing committees.

Congress as a whole could recover control in three ways, Galloway said: by determining the main principles of legislation in open debate on the floor of Congress, leaving the elaboration of the legislative details to its standing committees; by the adoption and enforcement of a code of fair procedures for the regulation of legislative investigations, and by assigning the appointment of committee chairmen to the chief elective officers of the Congress the Speaker of the House and the majority leader of the Senate—with power to change the chairmen from time to time.

The last proposal would be a substitute for the seniority system under which members of Congress with the longest service automatically become chairmen. The LaFollette-Monroney committee studied this problem, conceded the seniority system had many faults, but never could devise an acceptable alternative.

Reporters questioned Galloway on whether his proposal would not result in the charge that the Speaker was a czar as in the time of Speaker Cannon 50 years ago. He replied he thought his proposed system could be made to work, as it does in Britain.

With regard to the investigative functions of Congress, Galloway proposed that the conduct of fact-finding inquiries be delegated to mixed commissions of government officials and private citizens. The constitution of these commissions would be similar to that of the British royal commission and the two Hoover commissions on Organization of the Executive Branch.

The British cabinet controls planning and timing of the legislative program in Parliament, Galloway said, but in the United States legislative proposals originate in scattered sources in and out of Congress. In the United States the majority and minority policy committees operate chiefly as steering committees, he said. Genuine party policy committees in both houses could overcome existing handicaps to leadership, he thought.

Advance planning and scheduling of legislation by policy committees would speed the legislative process, Galloway said. He suggested these methods of reducing the congressional workload: The restoration of home rule to the District of Columbia, the delegation of settlement of private immigration and naturalization cases to the Department of Justice, voting by electrical devices in the House of Representatives and extension of the occasional practice of holding joint hearing by twin committees of the two houses.

All divisions of St. Louis and Washington universities will be closed Thursday until Monday, except for the medical and dental schools of both universities, which will reopen Friday.

Public offices, banks, stores, libraries and industrial firms will be closed as usual Thanksgiving day.

Post offices also will be closed. There will be no mail service, other than special delivery mail, except for the usual lock-box service to renters at Central station, Plaza station and the main post office. There will be one collection of regular mail.

In the annual accident-benefit football game, for the aid of injured high school players, St. Mary's High, again the champion team of the Catholic Athletic Conference, will face the champions of the St. Louis Public High School League at 2 p.m. at Public Schools Stadium.

East St. Louis Senior High and Belleville Township High School will play their traditional Thanksgiving day game at 10 a.m. at Parsons Field, East St. Louis.

Other Contests.

Turkey dinners will mark the holiday for patients at city hospitals and inmates of the jail, workhouse and other institutions. A free turkey dinner for needy persons will be served by Father Dempsey's Charities from 12:30 to 4 p.m. at Father Dempsey Hotel, 3427 Washington boulevard.

With prices about the same as last year, retailers reported turkeys selling briskly.

REPORTS WATER DISTRICT FUNDS STOLEN FROM AUTO

A total of $1500 in cash and a number of checks were reported stolen Friday night from the automobile of a Cahokia water district employe in Maplewood Park, a suburb of East St. Louis.

Lawrence Parker, the employe, reported he had put the money in the glove compartment of his car after closing the district office and that he headed for a bank in East St. Louis. On the way, he told the St. Clair county sheriff's office, he stopped for a sandwich at a Maplewood Park school fish fry.

When he returned to his locked car 20 minutes later, he said, he found a window and the glove compartment door had been pried open and the money gone. The loss is insured, the district said.

INDUSTRY GROUP TO MAKE COLUMBIA BOTTOMS STUDY

A 12-member committee, headed by Kenton R. Cravens, president of Mercantile Trust Co., has been named to study the desirability of converting Columbia Bottoms into a privately-financed industrial district, the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis announced yesterday.

Kravens said use of Columbia Bottoms, at the confluence of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, either as an airport or an industrial site is of great importance to the St. Louis business community.

Serving on the committee with Kravens are Arthur B. Baer, John C. Baine, Walter B. Bortelow, W. W. Horner, Clark Hungerford, Arthur C. Hoehn, Milton M. Kinsey, Merrill Skinner, Erwin P. Stupp, G. C. Taylor and C. P. Whitehead.

TWO DRUGS SAID TO HELP BREAK NARCOTICS USE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 19 (UP)—Development of two revolutionary drugs for use in combatting narcotics addiction was disclosed yesterday before a United States Senate investigating subcommittee. The hearing will continue in Chicago Monday.

Existence of the two drugs was disclosed by F. L. Braumeller, California Bureau of Narcotics agent, who said their use can be a "potent weapon" in fighting narcotics addiction.

The two drugs are nalline, which detects the presence of narcotics up to five days after use, and thorazine, which relieves heroin addicts of all pain usually suffered during withdrawal from narcotics use.

VA REMINDS KOREA WAR VETERANS ON BENEFITS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Veterans Administration reminds veterans studying under the Korean G.I. bill that they must fill out "the certification of training" form each month in order to receive their allowance checks.

In a list of "helpful reminders," the VA also advised veterans eligible for higher allowances because of dependents to "submit evidence of dependency as soon as possible."

SUMMER RESERVE PROGRAM PROPOSED

Youths Could Serve Two Three-Month Periods With School Year Between.

Rear Adm. Daniel V. Gallery, chief of Naval air reserve training, has recommended a program whereby young men may fulfill their six-month active duty obligation under the new Reserve Act in two successive summers, sandwiching a school year in between, he said here yesterday.

The admiral and Brig. Gen. Arthur F. Binney, commander of Marine Air Reserve training, conducted an annual inspection of 1500 reservists last night at the Naval Air Station, Lambert-St. Louis field.

In Adm. Gallery's suggested program, volunteers under 19 years of age could receive training as Naval airplane mechanics in two three-month periods. They would then, under the law enacted by Congress last July, serve 7½ years in the ready reserve.

"We feel we can adequately train good airplane mechanics in that period," the admiral said. He added that the Naval air reserve differed from certain other types of service in that it was "not make believe—we're playing for keeps."

He explained, at a press conference with Gen. Binney at the Park Plaza Hotel, that the student mechanics, when they had completed their six-months course, would be qualified to deal with combat-type aircraft because they had actually worked on such equipment.

"We're not looking for a way to compel people to enter our program," Adm. Gallery said of the "Weekend Warrior" units. "There is no way you can compel people to come out on weekends and fly military aircraft. They must want to do it."

Economical Defense.

Both he and Gen. Binney emphasized that a strong reserve was a sensible and economic way of keeping up the nation's defenses. Gen. Binney said Marine reserve fighter squadrons, one of which is stationed here, could be maintained for a sixth the cost of a regular squadron.

Adm. Gallery pointed out the Navy had an investment of $70,000 in each pilot it trained. The average active reserve pilot receives only $600 annually, he said, and this obviously is cheap insurance on a major training expenditure.

The two officers were accompanied here by a 12-member inspection team. Naval Air Reserve Patrol Squadron 921, under Commander C. E. Stiver of Cape Girardeau, received a bronze and mahogany plaque for making an outstanding safety record in the fiscal year 1955. A reception and dance followed last night's inspection, which was viewed by several thousand civilian guests.

BRITISH USE TEAR GAS ON MOBS OF CYPRUS STUDENTS

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Nov. 19 (UP)—British troops and police fired tear gas into mobs of stone-throwing students today in a drive to break up a wave of terrorism that has swept this island for six days.

Uniformed reinforcements patrolled the rubble-strewn streets of this strategic British outpost.

More than 50 bomb explosions were reported in a day of rioting that spread over the entire Mediterranean island. At least one British soldier was killed and dozens of persons were wounded since yesterday.

All leaves were canceled for British troops. Informed sources said military authorities feared reprisals by the angry soldiers against the civilian population following the killing of a British sergeant last night.

Greek students demonstrated at Larnaca today against the death sentence handed down last week against a Cypriot found guilty of murdering a police constable.

EMPLOY A COMPETENT PAINTER AND PAPERHANGER

U.S. in Worst Peril Since Korea, Stevenson Says

we did not mean what we said, then we were bluffing.

"Small wonder that distrust and fear of us became so widespread that the world received with profound relief President Eisenhower's assurance at Geneva that America was really and truly a peaceful nation. But let us not forget how people had been led to think otherwise."

Stevenson, who toured the world after his defeat in 1952, did not spell out what steps he would take to attain peace and security. His general remarks were:

"To guard the ramparts of freedom we must uphold the stability of our alliance and maintain our military strength. But martial strength is not an end in itself. It can only be the firm base from which we are prepared to negotiate, whenever negotiations seem fruitful, and from which we will seek to create with tireless patience a workable system of controlled disarmament."

World Must Understand.

To the budget cutters and isolationists, he said:

"We must play our generous part in the bettering of the human lot; and we must do so not just to compete with Communism, not to preserve colonialism and not to impose Americanism. We must make the world understand again what it once knew—that at the roots of our faith we recognize that we belong, all of us, to the family of man."

Attacking "prosperity" claims of the Republican slogan makers, Stevenson made only a few of the quips for which he was criticized by some politicians in the last presidential campaign.

He spoke tonight as a politician to politicians although his words, alone of other leading Democrats on the platform, were carried on two national television and radio networks. Unlike Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee and Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, the two other top Democrats mentioned for the presidential nomination who spoke, Stevenson did not deal in Democratic personalities.

His first reference to President Eisenhower was indirect and part of a comparison between the Republican and Democratic parties. Noting that the Democratic leaders had been here for three days at sessions of the national committee, the state chairmen and advisory groups, the candidate observed that the party discussions had been about policies and principles and not men.

Party Stands Alone.

"The happy truth," he wisecracked, "is that the Democratic party maintains an essential unity of purpose which does not depend on individuals who carry its standard. And no other political party, I might add, can make that statement."

His principal charges against the Eisenhower Administration followed traditional Democratic lines but he spoke with his usual clear and polished prose. He asserted that the present Administration was run by businessmen for businessmen while the Democratic aim is, as it has been, the widest distribution of well being by a Government representing all groups.

"In whatever direction we look — tax policy, regulatory policy, resources policy, credit policy or what not," he said "we see the sharp outlines of what can only be described as special interest government in Washington, something we have not seen since the Republicans were there last. We are coming to realize that we are being treated more as customers than as partners—gullible customers, susceptible to the huckstering advertiser arts for a special interest."

He claimed that the Roosevelt-Truman administrations were responsible for the present prosperity and that today's troubles were caused by changes made by the Republicans.

G.O.P. Inherited Prosperity

"We climbed together," he said," from the trough of depression which we Democrats inherited from the Republicans. And today most Americans dwell upon the plateau of prosperity which the Republicans inherited from us."

He told his audiences that it was not the broken Republican campaign promises of 1952 which hurt but those which were kept, and he asserted that "the only reason we have a stable general price level is that rising industrial prices are offset by falling farm prices."

Observing that the balance of our interdependent economy is threatened by low farm prices, he said that "the well-being of 20,000,000 Americans is sinking while Republican cheer leaders shout: 'Everything is booming but the guns.'"

He did not offer his own solution for the farm situation beyond saying that farm price supports, "firm or collapsible" are not the whole answer to a healthy farm economy.

Many Measures Needed.

Advocating a "many many pronged attack," he said that "we (Democrats) have always contended, as we do now, that price supports must be employed in conjunction with a whole series of both supplementary and complementary measures. The real key to the farmer's welfare is an intelligent, sensitive and responsive administration of agriculture on a day-to-day basis—and that is something that can only be accomplished by the party which is in office."

Stevenson took a "moderate" approach to business men, in comparison with some of the denunciations by former President Roosevelt and Truman. He said he did not question their honesty, their good intentions or their right to hold office. He questioned, however, the "breadth and variety of their collective vision," adding that "this republic is imperiled when government, which belongs to all the people, falls into the hands of any single group."

Answering those who advise against rocking the boat of prosperity, he agreed that it is "a time for catching our breath" and "for moderation."

But, he added, we must not confuse moderation with mediocrity or settle for half answers to hard problems.

Can't Stand Still.

"A democratic society," he said, "can't stand still, and the world won't stand still. Both are living things and the meaning of life is in growth, in working always toward something better, something higher. Moderation, yes. Stagnation, no. As the history of nations reminds us, nothing fails like success."

In conclusion, Stevenson outlined a program of human welfare in which all segments of the country, especially the low income groups, would share in the prosperity of an expanding economy.

"Are we really prosperous," he asked, "when our national income is going up but our schools are becoming more crowded, our teachers more outnumbered, our hospitals more inadequate, our roads more dangerous, our conservation more timid, our slums more contagious?

"Sure, the figures on the paycheck are important, but is a family really prosperous if it lives in an urban jungle where juvenile delinquency takes growing children for its prey."

To correct these conditions, he said, is the job to be done and the approach to the job reveals the different philosophies of the two political parties. He ended by quoting Woodrow Wilson's words that "we do not desire special privilege because we know that special privilege will never comprehend the general welfare."

For himself, he asserted that "democracy serves no one except that it serves us all."

2 MEN AND $800 FOOTBALL BETS SEIZED IN POLICE RAID

Two men were arrested suspected of setting up and keeping a common gaming house yesterday after police raided the Delmar Confectionery, 6150 Delmar boulevard.

Those arrested said they were Louis Kitchen, of the 6100 block of Enright avenue, owner of the store, and Edward Raff, of the 6600 block of Enright, University City. Both men denied any part in gambling operations.

The gambling squad, led by its acting head, Sgt. Robert Matteson, seized bets totaling about $800 on yesterday afternoon's football games. Raff, who denied he was a clerk for the betting, tore up a $110 bet slip on a particular football game when the gambling squad arrived, police said.

GIRL, 4, FOUND DEAD IN SHED; MOTHER'S FRIEND HUNTED

WEST GREENWICH, R.I., Nov. 19 (AP)—A 4-year-old girl, reported missing yesterday, was found dead today in a shed back of her home and police sought a male friend of her mother's for questioning.

Deborah Conlon, one of three children of Mrs. Beatrice Conlon, a divorcee, died of internal injuries, according to a medical examiner.

State police found the child's body wrapped in a white bedspread in a search of the area.

State police said investigation showed that the man sought was left at home with Deborah Friday after Mrs. Conlon went to work as a waitress and the other children left for school. Police said a note found near Deborah's body told of the child being hurt in an accident on a swing, police said, and that the man had left since nobody would believe him because he had a police record.

UNITED FUND'S FINAL REPORT TO BE TUESDAY

Drive Leaders Optimistic About Success of Drive if Coverage Is Complete.

The final report meeting of the United Fund campaign will be held at noon Tuesday at Hotel Jefferson, with fund leaders expressing optimism yesterday that the St. Louis area's first "One Gift . . . for All" drive will be successful if all volunteer workers complete their coverage diligently.

As of last Wednesday, the campaign had raised $5,475,242, or 66.4 per cent of the $8,245,925 goal, for support of 114 health and welfare agencies in the St. Louis area.

Workers were urged to collect as much as possible of the $2,770,683 balance from business firms and individuals whose gifts are still unrecorded.

William A. McDonnell, general chairman of the campaign, predicted success in view of the fact that most gifts received so far, particularly those of firms and their employes, reflect increases over previous years sufficient to achieve the goal.

The large firms division led other divisions of the drive last Wednesday with $3,448,450, or 76.7 per cent of its goal. Additional thousands have been reported since these.

A second encouraging factor, McDonnell said, is that hundreds of firms remain to be solicited, or are now in the midst of their in-plant campaigns, and if their giving follows the pattern of the ones reached earlier, the division should be able to reach its quota.

McDonnell attributed this year's increases in gifts to careful explanation of the United Fund idea to companies and individuals by "our truly magnificent army of volunteers."

WORK ON WORLD'S HIGHEST DAM IS STARTED BY NEHRU

NEW DELHI, Nov. 19 (AP)—Work on the world's highest dam was formally started this week by Prime Minister Nehru. He pressed a button that started concrete pouring into the huge basin on the Sutlej river 150 miles north of New Delhi.

The dam—known as the Bhakra-Nagal irrigation and power propect—will take at least four years to build and cost about $327,000,000. More than 500,000,000 cubic feet of concrete and masonry will go in to it, and the height at completion will be close to 750 feet. Hoover Dam in the United States, at 726 feet is now the world's highest dam.

India is footing the entire bill. American engineers, led by Harvey Slocum of Alhambra, Calif., have been employed by the Indian Government as advisers. Some 30 to 40 Americans have assisted in the preliminary construction and planning the last three years.

The 67-year-old Slocum, construction boss at such big United States dams as Shasta and Grand Coulee, describes Bhakra as probably the most difficult dam ever undertaken.

This is because of the remoteness of the site, the geological formations in the gorge and the lack of sufficient trained personnel to supervise a work force of more than 70,000.

MARQUIS JAMES DIES, NOTED BIOGRAPHER

Succumbs at 64 to Cerebral Hemorrhage—Won Two Pulitzer Prizes.

RYE, N.Y., Nov. 19 (AP)—Marquis James, one of the nation's top biographers and historians, died today.

His death was attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage. He died at his home where he had been convalescing since an earlier attack in August. He was 64 years old.

The noted author had won two Pulitzer prizes, one in 1930 for "The Raven," a biography of Sam Houston, and the other in 1938 for a two-volume biography of Andrew Jackson.

Other Works.

He also published a number of other successful works, and produced much material for magazines and radio. He had just completed research for a biography of the famous Negro educator, Booker T. Washington.

Mr. James was the third Pulitzer prize author to die this week.

Heart attacks claimed Bernard de Voto, 58, historian, last Sunday night, and Robert Sherwood, 59, playwright and biographer, on Monday morning.

Aside from his Pulitzer prize volumes, James's better known works included "Andrew Jackson, the Border Captain" in in 1939, "Alfred I. duPont: the in 1934, "Mr. Garner of Texas" in 1939, "Alfred I duPont: the Family Rebel" in 1941 and "The Cherokee Strip" in 1945.

The latter was an autobiography which recounted his boyhood days in Enid, Okla., where he got his first newspaper job, a summer job on the Enid Eagle before he entered high school.

Worked on Other Newspapers.

After finishing his public schooling he moved on to work on such papers as the Kansas City Journal, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Chicago Inter-Ocean, St. Louis Republic, New Orleans Item, Chicago Tribune, Chicago Daily Journal and New York Tribune.

World War I took him away from the newspaper business. During 19 months in France he rose to the rank of infantry captain.

After the war he set out to help the fledgling American Legion, serving as its national publicity director from 1919 to 1923.

During the next 10 years he was on the staff of the Legion's monthly magazine.

James, who was born at Springfield, Mo., was married twice. His first marriage to Bessie Williams in 1914 ended in divorce a few years ago. They had one child, a daughter, now Mrs. John Hugh Norwood of Rye.

Early last year James married Jaqueline Parsons, who also survives.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Twins Born Prematurely Die.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Nov. 19 (AP)—The second of twin boys born prematurely died today despite an incubator rushed here last night from Butler, Mo. One of the boys, sons of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Moore, died before the equipment arrived. The other, placed in the incubator shortly after its arrival, died today.

THOMAS SCHIPPERS CONDUCTS SYMPHONY

Makes Strong Impression in His First Appearance Here.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

Thomas Schippers, an American conductor who at the age of 25 has already worked up an impressive backlog of experience in the United States and abroad, made his first appearance as conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra last night. The concert, given as usual in Kiel Auditorium, offered a program that was well balanced between familiar and unfamiliar works. Though the program lacked one of the great trial pieces from the standard repertory, it was exacting and varied enough to provide many tests for a conductor's skill, knowledge and musical cultivation.

In general, Conductor Schippers made a strong impression in all departments. Beginning with Schubert's "Alfonso and Estrella" overture, Mr. Schippers exercised a thorough-going control of the orchestra that was evident not only in solid attacks and sharp releases but in the sort of internal precision that produces cohesion in all sections and in the whole ensemble.

The playing, too, was marked by alertness and vitality. In brief, the orchestra was tightly integrated, precise, balanced lively in movement throughout the concert.

As for his conception of the music he was communicating, it was always satisfying and cultivated. Nothing on the program, except possibly the Hindemith "Symphonia Serena" required any profundity of insight. This was a complex and wonderfully organized composition full of serious ideas, and somewhat taxing on the listener at a first hearing. Mr. Schippers was gratifyingly successful in keeping its contrapuntal lines clear and audible and in keepingly properly balanced the several sections as they moved against one another. The heavy scoring called for great depth of sound at times and the orchestra responded with a sound that was both deep and rich.

Schippers evoked a crisp and zestful performance of Bizet's C Major Symphony. A notable control as well as a sensitive feeling for texture was evident in the lyrical slow movement where a kind of langurous serenity made both a deliberate tempo and a sustained flow of sound imperative. Schippers also got fine results in the bustling passages, where articulation is difficult, and in bringing to the fore latent dramatic possibilities of the score.

The program also included two interludes from Menotti's opera "The Island God" and the Overture to Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Schippers is tall, slim and graceful in motion. Though he was an active if not an athletic conductor and made many gestures, all of them meant something.

INQUIRY INTO TIGHTENING OF CREDIT ON HOUSING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (AP) — Senator Sparkman (Dem.), Alabama, said today Eisenhower Administration officials would be called upon to explain publicly the recent tightening of credit policies on housing.

"There are signs that federal credit restrictions may be jeopardizing the orderly growth of the home-building industry," Sparkman, chairman of the Senate Banking subcommittee on housing, said in a statement. He promised a complete exploration of government "credit policies on residential construction and home financing" Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 28 and 29.

Government agencies recently ordered higher down payments and shorter maturity periods on government-insured mortgages.

Miss Wallop's father is Oliver M. Wallop, son of the Earl of Portsmouth, who has had a farm in Wyoming for several years. The couple met last year when Miss Wallop visited friends in England.

$82-$127 RENT CONSIDERED FOR PLAZA HOUSING

Urban Redevelopment Corp. Lists Proposed Charge for Apartments.

A scale of rentals ranging from $82 to $127 is being considered by the Urban Redevelopment Corp. of St. Louis in its plans to build approximately 1150 air-conditioned apartments in the Plaza area.

This was disclosed yesterday with the circulation of a questionnaire by Roy Wenzlick & Co., real estate economists employed by the redevelopment group to gather information about the types of housing desired by prospective tenants.

Scale of Rentals.

The housing site of five and one-half blocks has been cleared and soon will be offered for sale. If the corporation organized by civic and business leaders is selected as the redeveloper, it plans to offer apartments with these rentals:

Efficiency apartment—$82 a month. This will have a living room 17 by 18½ feet, a Pullman-type kitchen and bathroom.

One-bedroom apartment—$105. This will have a living room 16 by 15¾ feet, a bedroom 12 by 14½ feet, a kitchenette, dinette and bath.

Two-bedroom apartment—$127. This will have a living room 17 by 19 feet, one bedroom 12 by 14 feet and another bedroom 12 by 12.

The rentals, still tentative, will include heat and all utilities except electricity. Each apartment is to be especially wired for television, and will be decorated and equipped with modern kitchen appliances and tile baths.

No tenant applications are being solicited yet, the questionnaire being designed merely to ascertain potential demand for apartments in this rental range. The survey is being made among various employe groups.

Rehabilitation of the blighted Plaza area is the city's first urban redevelopment project conducted with federal aid. The city already has begun development of a three-block park which will link Aloe and Memorial Plazas and provide a recreational area for the apartment tenants.

The housing project will cover most of the area between Fourteenth and Seventeenth, Olive and Chestnut streets.

U.S. LINES UP WITH 5 BAGHDAD PACT COUNTRIES

tegic Middle East countries will meet Monday to plan a common defense against Communist aggression.

Full security measures were ordered at the railway station, airport and other areas of this ancient city.

The prime ministers of Iran, Iraq, Pakistan and Turkey—all neighbors or near neighbors of Russia—are to meet with British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan for the initial conference of the five-nation Baghdad defense alliance.

The pact, completed only last month with the adherence of Iran, links with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to the West and the Southeast Asia defense alliance to the East in what is virtually a globe-girdling defense system.

All the visitors, including Foreign Ministry officials and military chiefs, are due in Baghdad tomorrow in time for an afternoon reception offered by 20-year-old King Faisal of Iraq.

Hussein Ala, premier of Iran, who escaped with a scratch from a would-be assassin Thursday, is scheduled to arrive by train. Macmillan and Premier Menderes of Turkey and Mohammed Ali Chaudhri of Pakistan and their staffs are coming by air.

Macmillan told reporters on leaving London tonight, the meeting "is an opportunity to show how many countries of diverse races, religions and histories, all interested in the future of the Middle East, are determined to work together for peace and prosperity."

He said he considered the meeting "of considerable significance and importance," and added the pact will be both military and economic.

The first council meeting, with Prime Minister Nuri Said representing Iraq, is scheduled for Monday morning in the Al Zahour (Flower) palace across the wide Tigris from central Baghdad.

The Baghdad conference, due to end Wednesday, is expected to be devoted largely to setting up a NATO-style permanent organization to implement the alliance.

The four Middle East members, with a total population of about 125,000,000, now have an estimated 50 divisions under arms.

Attacks From Moscow.

In Moscow, the Literary Gazette condemned the pact as "the creation of a new aggressive alignment" and as "a subsidiary of NATO."

It was the latest of a series of Soviet attacks on the alliance.

The Literary Gazette accused the United States of inspiring and organizing "aggressive alignments in the Near and Middle East," and described Britain as a "pretender to that role." It said, "the fact that the financing of the enterprise under the guise of military assistance was carried out by Uncle Sam puts all and sundry in its place."

It accused the United States of using "the utmost pressure" and "political blackmail" to bring Iran into the alliance.

The article, under a three-column heading, "Baghdad pact—a subsidiary to NATO," said:

"The anti-Soviet nature of the Baghdad pact is obvious. It has not been hidden even by the Western press.

"The Baghdad conference, where the mechanism of a new aggressive alignment will be created, convenes just one month after Iran joined the (pact). . . . Ruling circles in Washington and London do not attempt to conceal their satisfaction."

HARTFORD MAN MADE OFFICER IN ARMY NURSE CORPS

Second Lt. Weldon J. Bishop of Hartford, Ill., the second male officer to be commissioned in the Army nurse corps, has begun training at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, Tex. He was sworn into the Army as an officer at Chicago Oct. 10.

Lt. Bishop, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Bishop of Hartford, worked as an orderly at Wood River Hospital after his graduation from high school in 1950. Then he took three years of training at St. Joseph's Hospital, Alton, finishing the course in September 1954.

Before going into the Army, Lt. Bishop, 22 years old, was employed as a nurse by Kellogg Construction Co. and the Lincoln-Mercury plant here. His wife also is a nurse. She is a graduate of St. Luke's Hospital in St. Louis.

"We're very proud of him," Lt. Bishop's mother commented yesterday. The first man to become a commissioned Army nurse outranks Lt. Bishop by only a few days. He was Edward L. Lyon of Kings Park, N.Y.

MIRACLE HEARING AID INVENTED BY ENGINEER
NO CORD!
Worn Entirely in the Ear

Audiphone Company Exclusive! A completely new type of hearing device has been announced by Mr. K. A. Dahlberg, president of hearing aid manufacturing firm bearing his name.

This new "Miracle Ear" can be worn in the ear, he said. There are no cords, wires or tubes in any manner connected with the device, and the complete unit weighs less than ½ ounce.

Mr. Dahlberg added that no longer do the hard of hearing have to put up with bulky batteries or headbands. It absolutely eliminates clothing noise because there is nothing at all worn in the clothes.

It is truly a miracle ear, and for the first time true, panoramic hearing is possible, eliminating the blind spots in hearing.

Mr. Dahlberg continued that this is something for which hard-of-hearing people have waited a long time, and states that his company is proud to be the first and only company to offer this electronic miracle to the hard of hearing.

NARCOTICS RING IN COPENHAGEN IS BROKEN BY SCOUTS

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 19 (UP) —Six Danish Boy Scouts turned sleuths to smash a narcotics ring that had been operating under the noses of Copenhagen police, it was disclosed today.

Police said they have arrested an undisclosed number of persons. The detective work, however, was done by the Boy Scouts.

It began when a Scout saw a shady character selling morphine to an addict on a downtown street. He followed the peddler to a coffee bar where addicts and narcotics salesmen seemed to meet. That night he rounded up five of his troop friends, and they sat up a daily watch on the coffee bar.

One, an amateur photographer, snapped photos of the gang.

They ran into trouble one day when they shadowed the ringleader to his home and were discovered taking pictures.

All were threatened, but they talked their way out of the situation by explaining they were tourists who wanted to snap a "beautiful old building."

1,773,485 SALK POLIO SHOTS NOW READY FOR USE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (AP) —A total of 1,773,485 cubic centimeters of Salk anti-polio vaccine, most newly released and some reallocated, is now available for use.

The Public Health Service announced last night that 1,592,400 cubic centimeters — enough for that many inoculations—is ready for immediate use, together with 28,692 cubic centimeters from previously underestimated allocations and 152,393 not used in areas to which it was originally assigned. Missouri is allotted 39,741 cubic centimeters, Illinois 86,742.

The service's latest action brings to 12,442,437 cubic centimeters the total vaccine released to the states and territories for children under 15 and expectant mothers.

An additional 13,542,441 cubic centimeters have gone to the national foundation for infantile paralysis for its free inoculation program for children who were first and second grade pupils last spring.

NEW ST. LOUIS FURNITURE MART

REPORT PRAISES CITY ON HUMAN PROGRESS

National Group Cites School Desegregation, Urges Community Be on Guard.

St. Louis has made highly encouraging progress in human relations during the last year, but the community must be on guard against development of new tensions contributing to prejudice, the National Conference of Christians and Jews declared yesterday in its annual report on operations in the Missouri region.

The orderly manner in which desegregation has been accomplished in the public schools here has brought commendations from all parts of the United States, it was pointed out. In another example of cooperation, most of the religious civic and educational leaders put aside differences and joined in the campaign for passage of the $110,639,000 city bond issue.

Still another achievement cited was the plan for establishment of police-community committees to improve co-operation between community organizations and law enforcement agencies.

"Although St. Louis has peacefully accepted school integration," the report added, "much remains to be done before most St. Louisans will be prepared to demonstrate their full support for school integration through individual and organizational conduct.

"For example, each year an increasing number of persons are moving to St. Louis from rural Missouri, most of whom have previously had a minimum of contact with persons of other religions and races. This sudden move to a community made up of persons of many backgrounds has been followed by misunderstandings and harmful prejudices, a situation which has been further aggravated by the tendency of these new residents to live apart from the rest of the community.

"More attention must be given to helping both these new St. Louisans as well as 'old' St. Louisans to adjust to this new situation so that energies wasted on misunderstandings and prejudices may be channeled to co-operative efforts in the interests of a better community."

1100 PUPILS GET TUBERCULIN TESTS, 45 REACT POSITIVELY

About 1100 pupils of two St. Louis public elementary schools were given tuberculin patch tests last week in the first tuberculosis case finding survey in the city this year, sponsored by the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis and the department of health and hygiene of the public schools, it was announced yesterday.

Positive reactions were found in 31 of 800 pupils tested at Curtis School, 2824 Madison street, and in 14 of about 300 students at Herzog School, 5831 Pamylin avenue. A positive reaction indicates the person has been exposed to tuberculosis germs, but does not mean he has contracted the disease. All positive reactors were urged to have chest X-rays taken.

Patch testing materials, health education literature and free chest X-rays from the society's mobile unit are furnished with funds raised in the annual Christmas Seal campaign.

CITY STABLES BEING RAZED FOR OFFICE AND WAREHOUSE

The old city stables at the northeast corner of Vandeventer and Forest Park avenues is being razed by the Van Park Realty Co. for a proposed warehouse and office for a local electrical distributing firm, it was announced yesterday.

Present plans are that a modern building will be constructed with parking facilities on the site of the 55-year-old structure, Dr. William G. Swekosky, a dentist whose hobby is the study of the old buildings, said the property was originally owned by Edward Butler, who had the garbage contract and shoed all horses and mules owned by the city.

The city leased the building in March 1904 and purchased the property in May 1907, Dr. Swekosky said. It was sold to Van Park Realty Co. earlier this year, he said.

HUSTON C. SMITH LECTURER ON TV AT STEPHENS COLLEGE

Huston C. Smith, associate professor of philosophy at Washington University, has been named visiting lecturer for the closed circuit television course, "Ideas and Living Today," at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., it was announced yesterday. He will teach during the second semester of the present school year.

The course is the first in an American college in which closed circuit television is utilized so that all members of the first-year class may participate. Course lectures are delivered twice weekly.

Smith conducted the first televised accredited college course, "The Religions of Man," in St. Louis. The program was heard over educational television station KETC.

GEORGE H. SIMON DIES

Mr. Simon, who for the last 40 years had his shop next to the courthouse in Belleville, was well known by the judges, lawyers and county officials who had business in the courthouse. Text of Bishops' Statement on Schools

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. Following is the text of a statement entitled "The Place of the Private and Church-Related Schools in American Education," issued by the Catholic Bishops of the United States at the close of their annual meeting:

FREEDOM under God is America's dearest treasure. Its roots lie deep in her Christian heritage, and its germ is the concept of man's personal responsibility to his Creator for his temporal and eternal salvation. Here in America freedom has flowered in an ordered democracy, which guarantees to her citizens the widest latitude of individual expression within the framework of commonly held principles of justice, decency, and law.

To preserve freedom America must teach freedom. It is in the schools of the nation, preeminently, that this educative process is carried on. It is in the classroom that the principles underlying our Christian concept of human liberty must be defined and inculcated, if future generations are to appreciate, defend, and preserve it. But that this be done, it is an absolutely necessary condition that the schools of America should themselves be guaranteed their rightful freedom to teach the truth.

Historically and actually our nation has been blessed with educational freedom. Her school system is not a closed, unitary creation of the state, a servile instrument of governmental monopoly, but one which embraces, together with the state-supported schools, a whole enormous cluster of private and church-related schools, including many of the most honored names in the entire educational world, and devoted to the education of many millions of the nation's youth.

An Integral Part.

That these private and church related schools serve a minority in America, by sheer numerical computation, is a purely incidental factor, and it is plainly unrealistic thinking to discount their importance on that score. Indeed, it is unrealistic to belittle in any way the schools in which more than 5,000,000 young Americans are currently receiving their education. These schools, emphatically, are an integral part of the American educational system. And so long as our nation is faithful to her principles of justice and due process of law, these schools will remain a permanent part of that system.

It is not without significance that the private and church-related schools were the first in the field of American education. For well-nigh two centuries, during our colonial and early national periods, they occupied that field alone. It was from such schools, as from fruitful seed-beds, that there came the guiding intellectual and moral impulses which led to the definition and establishment of American freedom, no less than the leadership which launched the young republic on her career in history.

The familiar pride of a Daniel Webster in his alma mater, which was both private and church-related, is echoed by countless other Americans in all walks of life and at all stages of our growth. And it is demonstrably a faulty interpretation of the mind of such a liberal theorist as Thomas Jefferson which would present him as champion of a monopolistic state system of education.

Bishop Carroll Recalled.

As Catholics, our memory is stirred by the recollection of the valiant efforts of our religious founders in this country to provide, out of their slender resources, for the educational needs of their people. We think of young John Carroll, destined to be our first bishop, conning his lessons at Bohemia Manor, in colonial Maryland. The torch he grasped there was to be carried by myriad hands to enkindle brighter fires from end to end of our expending nation.

It is with honest pride that we survey the development of Catholic education in America, so intimately a part of her cultural growth, so deeply intertwined with the traditions and aspirations of her people. The Catholic school has matured with the church, a joint product of the foresight of the bishops and the enlightened generosity of her faithful. It is no foreign importation, no alien growth, but a sturdy native plant, a conspicuous example of a common religious impulse working under the favorable conditions of our Republic.

The rise and vigorous expansion of the American educational system is cited, correctly, as one of the major achievements of western civilization. During the past hundred years, in particular, groups and private bodies have come very near to the goal of providing adequate educational opportunities for every American.

Public Schools Praised.

It would be blind prejudice which would refuse to acknowledge, in this connection, the tremendous accomplishment of the public educational agencies. Whatever uneasiness may or must be felt on the score of educational theory and philosophy as illustrated in large areas of American teaching, the plain physical fact of the school system is a matter for unanimous congratulation. This, at least in part, is what freedom has achieved.

But if the unparalleled growth of the schools supported by public funds is a mighty tribute to America's zeal for learning and her ambition to build an intelligent democratic society, no less astonishing has been the growth and accomplishment of the private and church-related schools during the same relative period. In candor, it deserves to be said that their record affords an even more impressive example of the American spirit at work, for it has been brought about not by the advantage of public funds nor by the spur of legislative mandate, but by the free cooperation of those convinced of their importance and necessity.

It is, incidentally, wholly erroneous to conceive that these schools represent a diminishing force in the American educational system. Their growth today, proportionately, equals where it does not actually exceed that of schools maintained by public authority.

Existence by Right.

Let this be fully understood: Private and church-related schools in America exist not by sufferance but by right. The right is implicit in the whole concept of American freedom and immunity from totalitarian oppression and in the constitutional framework of our Federal Government and of the several states. Under attack it has been rendered explicit by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the celebrated Oregon School Case.

Thus far, happily, the right of the parent to educate the child has not been successfully challenged in any American court. The country agrees that this right is basic to the definition of freedom. Be that education provided by the state-supported school, the private school, or the church-affiliated school, the choice of the parent is decisive. If the state has a concurrent right to decree a minimal education for its citizens, as a vital necessity in a modern democratic society, that right does not extend to an arbitrary designation of the school or the educational agency. It is, rather, a general right, limited by the primary right of the parent to exercise his choice according to his best wisdom and his conscience.

Indeed, it is worth remarking that while the state may usefully engage in the business of education, as demonstrated in our national experience, it has no authority either to mobilize the field or to arrogate to itself privileges and powers. The state, by definition, is not itself primarily an educative agency.

Parents' Right Natural One.

The right of the parent to attend to the child's education is, moreover, antecedent to any human law or institution. It is vested in his very nature and is demanded as a fulfillment of his actual parenthood. In this it reflects the inviolability of the human person and his freedom under God. It is indeed a right which must be exercised in accordance with sound reason and consistently with the just demands of society, but it remains fundamentally intact in the parent's keeping. It is a manifestation of the law of nature in concrete action. So it is that private and religious education in America rests upon the law of nature as well as upon the law of the land.

For Catholic parents there is an additional imperative. As they willingly accept the obligations of their faith, they realize that the mind of the church on so important a subject as education cannot in conscience be ignored. As this mind is interpreted for them by their spiritual leaders, the bishops, they know that the circumstances of modern life demand the positive training of their children in the fundamentals of religion, a training which cannot be soundly imparted elsewhere than in schools dedicated to the purpose. As conscientious Catholics, they "think with the Church;" with supreme confidence in a divine wisdom, and with magnificent generosity, they have provided the indicated means, the Catholic school.

Not A Monopoly.

It is dangerous thinking to suppose that the existence of the private school is an infringement upon the domain of the school supported by public funds. The private school is a concrete demonstration of the fact that education is not a monopoly of public authority. It should be added, moreover, that the private school provides a saving and challenging variety in the total system, beneficial to the whole and manifestly fruitful in its effects. Those who would seek to abolish the private school would not only sin against justice, they would destroy something very precious in American life.

Neither is the church-related school a limitation on the right of the state to insure an educated citizenry. It exists not only to fulfill the function of education in our democratic society, but specifically to educate the Christian for his dual citizenship in time and eternity. It exists to teach not only the content of the accepted curriculum, but that which the tax-supported school under present conditions may not teach, namely, positive religion.

Other nations, with varying success, have attemped general educational systems in which provision is made for religious instruction in separate church-related schools. Practical considerations, in view of wide differences, almost from the outset prevented the American tax-supported schools from following this pattern. There are those now, even among public school educators, who regret the development, involving, as it has, the risk of religious indifferentism and secularism.

The solution of the problem is indeed difficult. The alternative, so far as the religious bodies who believe education essential to their mission are concerned, is the school under religious auspices.

Earlier Decisions by Bishops.

The Catholic Church in America, to cite only a major example, recognized this alternative as far back as 1852, when the First Plenary Council of her bishops earnestly recommended the parochial school as the necessary safeguard of the faith of her children. Thirty-two years later, at the Third Plenary Council, the recommendation was strengthened and enacted as law: the school was to be a part of every well-organized parish.

Today, with a total enrollment, from kindergarten to graduate school, of more than 4,000,000 American youth, the vision of the fathers has taken on monumental impressiveness. Fully in keeping with the American tradition, it is perhaps the greatest achievement in general education under religious auspices and without government support the world has ever known.

The fact, we submit, bears repetition: The private and church-related school are part of the American system. Manifestly, they exist; they exist by right; and they are unquestionably carrying a large share of the educational burden. Their teachers, religious and lay, have dedicated themselves to a high purpose, have labored hard to acquit themselves worthily, and the entire nation is their debtor. These schools have every claim in fact and in justice to be recognized as powerful contributing factors in the building of a better and freer country.

TEXT OF BISHOPS' STATEMENT ON SCHOOL RIGHTS

Bishops Answer Critics.

They have their critics, and among them none more vocal than those who assert that these schools introduce an element of divisiveness into American society. It were idle to attempt to argue the point with those who deliberately employ it to foment disagreement, but for the sake of those who are honestly confused, it is worth examining the charge. Upon what does it rest? It is justified in the observation that private schooling and religious education have actually tended toward a sundering of the bonds of civic unity and common loyalty?

It is true that in the case of the religious schools there is a difference, inasmuch as they exist to teach positive religion as the integrating element of the curriculum. But surely, religion itself is not a discordant factor itself in American life. Surely, Christianity, with its primary inculcation of love of God and love of neighbor is not divisive. Only those who teach hatred teach division; those who teach love teach unity.

How can it be, then, that religion in the school should be accused of sowing the seeds of national discord? Rather, is it not obvious that positive Christian training, with its emphasis on the sanctions of divine law, of the natural law, and of civil law, on the social nature of the virtues of justice and charity, on the moral obligations of patriotism and public service, provides the strongest cement that can possibly bind a nation together? Criticism of these schools at times seems to forget that we are a pluralistic society that postulates not uniformity but rather unity in variety.

Church-related schools reflect nothing so clearly as that American spirit which demands unity in the essentials of citizenship while defending to the death those things in which the citizen is guaranteed his freedom.

What, then, is the place of the private and church-related schools in America? Their place is one dictated by nothing more than justice and equity, and accorded the recognition of their worth. They have, we repeat, full right to be considered and dealt with as components of the American educational system. They protest against the kind of thinking that would reduce them to a secondary level, and against unfair and discriminatory treatment which would, in effect, write them off as less wholly dedicated to the public welfare than the state-supported schools.

The students of these schools have the right to benefit from those measures, grants, or aids, which are manifestly designed for the health, safety and welfare of American youth, irrespective of the school attended.

This statement is submitted in quiet confidence that the national sense of justice will stand firm, and that a cordial appreciation of private and church-related schools, both for what they are and for what they have done for America, will see to it that they are preserved and upheld so long as this is a nation of free men.

8 YOUNG WHOOPING CRANES SIGHTED IN TEXAS REFUGE

AUSTWELL, Tex., Nov. 19 (UP)—The biggest brood of young whooping cranes—eight—ever seen at the Aransas national wildlife refuge near Austwell raised hopes today for the survival of the last remaining flock of the nearly-extinct birds.

J.J. Harman, assistant refuge manager, said "we are pleased as we can be."

The young birds have moved into the sprawling 50,000-acre refuge during the last month, along with 20 of the 22 adult birds which left here last spring for the long flight to the whoopers' summer nesting grounds at Buffalo National Park in northern Canada.

The fate of the missing adult birds is unknown, but there still is hope they will show up at the refuge within the next few days.

But the presence of eight young birds, all hatched last summer in Canada, has more than overshadowed the disappearance of two adult members of the flock.

"We have two sets of twins and our single young ones," Harman said. He added that whooper family usually hatches only one or two eggs during each nesting. "If two eggs hatch, we regard the young ones as twins," he explained.

IRAN FANATIC TO BE HANGED FOR TRYING TO KILL PREMIER

The army held the assault amounted to a revolt against the government, punishable by death. No trial was mentioned.

ST. LOUIS CALLED NEXT TO NEW YORK IN ART COLLECTING

Collecting of art objects from many different cultures and at all price levels is going forward faster in St. Louis than in any other American city except New York, William N. Eisendrath Jr. said yesttrday at City Art Museum. "Cleveland is our closest rival," he added.

Eisendrath, himself a lifelong collector and now assistant to the director of the museum, spoke as he supervistd unpacking of 367 small sculptures, paintings, drawings, prints and examples of decorative art in preparation for the museum's "Collectors' Choice" exhibition. This sale and show will open Dec. 3 and close Dec. 18.

Charles Nagel, director of the museum, and Eisendrath said they spent about two weeks in New York selecting each piece with the same care used in making purchases for the museum. None of the work chosen is available here, they said.

The coming display, which will be augmented by museum-chosen pieces from recent works of about 40 prize-winners in the museum's last 10 annual Missouri shows, is being organized to provide guidance for St. Louis collectors desiring it. "We'd be delighted," Nagel said, confirming Eisendrath's estimate of St. Louis as an art center, "if some of these objects eventually found their way back to the museum as gifts."

WALTER REUTHER BACKS STRIKING SHOE WORKERS

Support of union shoe workers who are striking against the International Shoe Co. and the Brown Shoe Co. in a dispute over provisions in a new contract was extended yesterday by Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO.

Reuther said the CIO United Shoe Workers had joined with the AFL Boot and Shoe Workers union for "economically sound goals." The CIO president, who also heads the United Automobile Workers, asserted that the companies were engaged "in a cynical campaign to destroy both the CIO and AFL unions at the same time."

Negotiation sessions between the unions and representatives of the International Shoe Co. are scheduled to be resumed tomorrow in the office of federal conciliator A. E. Johnson. About 17,000 International employes and 9000 workers of the Brown Shoe Co. are on strike.

KANSAS CITY BOY DROWNS IN POOL IN BACK YARD

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 19 (AP) —A 6-year-old boy drowned today in a backyard swimming pool.

The pool is in the rear of a home occupied by Francis L. Allegri.

Russian Leaders in India
Visit Is Seen as 'Challenge to the West'

Indians Are Pleased—Had Been Turned Down by Eisenhower Before His Heart Attack.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1955, Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 19.

THE two top salesmen of Communism, Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Nikita Khrushchev, first secretary of the Communist party of the Soviet Union, are here in India in the course of a concentrated swing through Asia. Nothing could more aptly illustrate the tremendous change that has taken place in Moscow than that No. 1 and No. 2—in whichever order you care to rank them—should be out on the road working hard at winning friends and influencing peoples.

Nor could anything demonstrate more clearly the challenge to the West than the Asian tour of Khrushchev and Bulganin. From India they go to Burma and Afghanistan. In Afghanistan the ground has already been prepared and the seeds of disaffection sown. A Communist offer of arms to Afghanistan threatens to create the same situation that resulted from the deal between Czechoslovakia and Egypt. The long arm of Communist power and persuasion is thrust out beyond the Middle East into this area of new states where the inheritance of colonialism is still a dark shadow on the land.

INDIA AND BURMA are uncommitted. Their leaders have both said repeatedly that they do not want to become part of either of the two power blocs. But the effect of this visit, on a people sensitive to every current of opinion and eager for approbation and for co-operation in equal partnership, cannot be discounted.

The government of India had hoped, this reporter has learned here, that President Eisenhower would visit India. The invitation from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru was conveyed to the White House informally by Indian Ambassador G. L. Mehta in Washington. This was prior to the President's illness.

Eisenhower aides explained that such a visit would scarcely be possible. The President is after all under the Constitution the head of state and he cannot leave the country except for short periods of time, as he did in July during the summit conference at Geneva, when Congress is not in session.

This word was received here with genuine disappointment. Respect for the President has increased immeasurably since the Geneva conference of last summer and it had been Nehru's sincere wish that he come even though the visit would of necessity have to be brief. In the fall of 1949 the Indian Prime Minister went to Washington and followed his talks there with a quick tour around the country.

The current mission of Khrushchev and Bulganin must be put in the perspective of Indian attitudes, Indian hopes and fears, the almost abnormal sensitivity of a people who have been independent for less than 10 years with their independence trembling in the balance of internal disorder and economic dislocation. While the need for economic aid is great, with the second five-year plan for development of dams, irrigation projects and industry putting an almost intolerable strain on the economy, it may be that the symbol of the Soviet visit is more important. It is a flattering tribute to Indian pride that the Russians should have returned so quickly the visit that Nehru made to Moscow in May.

Sooner or later, during their scheduled stay of 17 days, the Russians are almost certain to hold out the promise of assistance in one form or other. The combination of the visit and the proffer of help will have an immense influence. It comes at a time when some of the most influential members of the Eisenhower Administration are urging that American economic aid be scaled back on the eve of election promises to balance the budget and cut taxes.

If we as Americans will think back to our own early past immediately after our revolutionary struggle for freedom, we can get some idea of the impact of this visit. We were a young, struggling people, menaced from various quarters, deeply resentful of adverse criticism and almost pathetically anxious for flattery and approval. Distinguished foreigners who came to our shores and said kind things we took to our bosom.

Imagine if in that stage of our development Napoleon, let us say, had come to America at the height of his powers to tell us that we were a great people with a great future and that France wanted to do everything in her power to help us. This analogy may not be altogether apt. India had a long and fabulous history prior to the colonial era. But it may nevertheless be illustrative.

NO OSTRICHISM should conceal what it means for the free world. It is well put in an editorial in the current London Economist: "What the free societies of both the West and Asia now face is a challenge to mortal combat—no less mortal for being non-military." That is surely not an exaggeration.

"Stalin Goes to India to Woo Nehru and Indian People." That headline would simply have been impossible in the Stalin era for the crafty old dictator in the Kremlin was not interested in wooing anyone. It is a measure of the radical change that has occurred that Bulganin and Khrushchev should be here starting out on a strenuous tour of the old and the new in this country which may well be the pivot for the future of all of Asia.

After Stalin's death most of us waited to see what would happen in Moscow. Would there be an upheaval with the Communist regime thrown out? Hope of such an eventuality was raised by rumors of conflict over Lavrenti Beria and the role of the secret police so powerful under Stalin. But Beria was liquidated, the power of the police restrained, a new group of triumvirs came in and yet the same iron grip was maintained.

Therefore, it was easy to conclude, nothing had changed. This was to be more of the same. The stubborn intransigence of Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov at Geneva just now will for many seem to confirm this conclusion.

To accept that view is to cherish a dangerous error. The smiling Bulganin and the pushy, aggressive Khrushchev draped with flowers as a welcome to India are proof that something radically new has been added. It is scarcely less than a brand new approach to the goal that has never varied since the Bolsheviks seized power in 1917—the communization of the world. And because it is more subtle and partly just because it is new, a radical departure from the Soviet past, it is far more dangerous than the threat of naked power in the Stalinist period.

While it is an oversimplification to say that Moscow is using American tactics, there is some truth in this statement. Soviet diplomacy is offering arms, economic aid and technical help to those countries where the need is great and where neutralist doubts are likely to bring large dividends from a small investment.

In Egypt the arms deal was only a part, and perhaps the lesser part, of the Soviet blitz. The Soviet Ambassador to Cairo blandly offered to build the great Asswan Dam on the Upper Nile.

For many months Cairo has been seeking help for this great irrigation project—from the International Bank, from Washington, from Britain, from West Germany.

In offering to supply arms and economic aid, the Soviets have several advantages over the United States. They do not need to go through any parliamentary process either to make the offer or to obtain the funds. Too often in the past congressional carping and sniping—the inflammatory statements of congressional and military leaders, have nullified the aid that has been provided. It has seemed to come grudgingly and with all sorts of strings attached.

RUSSIAN POLICYMAKERS need not concern themselves in the slightest with public opinion at home. They can make deals of the most cynical and barefaced nature with regimes that contradict everything Communism professes to believe. They are in fact in process of making such deals with no risk of any outcry from the Russian people.

Most important of all, they can absorb the raw materials of raw material producing countries in return for technical assistance. Egypt's cotton and Burma's rice are two conspicuous examples. The United States has overflowing surpluses of both cotton and rice and of many other commodities. The threat of American dumping of agricultural surpluses sends a tremor of fear through many capitals in countries dependent on the export of wheat or cotton or rice.

It is not all plain sailing for the Russians on the new course they have charted. The Chinese Communists, themselves urgently in need of technology and technicians, must mutter when they read of Soviet offers spread hither and yon. The very fact that Khrushchev and Bulganin have come to Asia to peddle their diplomatic wares must cause a certain resentment in Peiping. Asia should be the sphere of the new China.

But even with these and other reservations the West is witnessing a formidable challenge to its authority and its power. The Asian tour of Moscow's No. 1 and No. 2 is part of a diplomatic offensive that must surely be unprecedented. And there are many reasons to believe it is just the beginning.

Stevenson Campaign for 1956 Given a Professional Touch

Preconvention Manager, Finnegan, Has Record as Good Politician — Wide Support in East.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.

ADLAI STEVENSON is a more experienced office seeker today than he was in 1952 and his presidential campaign is going to be vastly different from his unsuccessful efforts three years ago.

Those efforts were unsuccessful on two major points. First, he fought against taking the Democratic presidential nomination; he wanted to be re-elected Governor of Illinois and most reluctantly bowed to a presidential draft by the Democratic National Convention. Second, after his nomination he was so inexperienced in national politics and surrounded himself by so many others in the same category that veteran politicians and political writers shuddered at mistakes that violated the most elementary rules of national political organization.

His announcement Tuesday of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination makes him the official front runner of both parties in next year's race. He becomes the foremost rival now of all aspirants, and their supporters, particularly those in his own party, who will do their utmost within the rules of political fair play to cripple him.

To be the first avowed candidate is a calculated risk, but the preparations evident here at Chicago show that the calculations were both broad and intensive. Politics is a profession, and the more experienced Stevenson has already surrounded himself with associates with reputations for professional work at national and state levels.

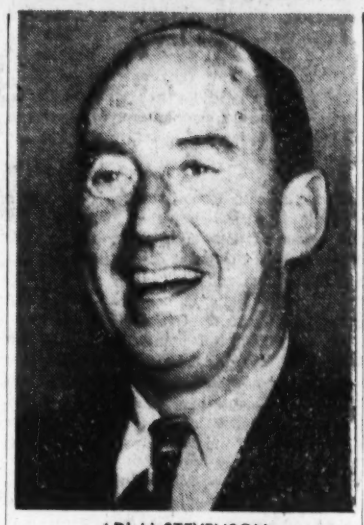
IN SELECTING James A. Finnegan of Philadelphia as his preconvention manager he got a young professional with an outstanding record. He also soothed whatever wounds remained among eastern political leaders who supported Finnegan for the national party chairmanship against Stevenson's successful candidate, Paul M. Butler of Indianapolis. The appointment brought nearly all, if not all, members of the important Pennsylvania delegation, with such effective leaders as Gov. George Leader, Mayor David Lawrence of Pittsburgh, who is also the Democratic National Committeeman, and Mayor Joseph F. Clark Jr., of Philadelphia, under the Stevenson colors.

Finnegan, 48 years old, has not had much national experience but he, Mayor Clark and Mayor-Elect Richardson Dilworth passed a near miracle in ousting the traditional Republican organization from the Philadelphia City Hall. He first attracted national notice when, as chairman of the Philadelphia party organization, the city turned in a 160,000 majority for Stevenson over Gen. Eisenhower, in 1952.

This Democratic victory was a reversal of the national trend three years ago, and it focused attention on the locally spectacular job Finnegan and his associates had done earlier in electing the first Democratic Mayor, Clark, in 67 years. This month the Democratic control of the city was assured when Dilworth was elected to succeed Clark by a majority of more than 130,000 votes. When the trio started to rehabilitate the party in 1947, Dilworth was defeated for Mayor by more than 92,000 votes.



ADLAI STEVENSON
In Chicago — some changes.

Finnegan's relationship with Stevenson will be similar to that of James A. Farley with Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932—the last time Democrats entered a campaign without their President in the White House. They will have an advantage over 1932. Then, Roosevelt and Farley had to overcome the opposition of Democratic National Chairman John J. Raskob who was running the headquarters for Al Smith. Present committee headquarters are under the chairmanship of Butler, himself a Stevenson selection. Most of the Washington organization is thought to be "neutral" for Stevenson.

Finnegan, like Farley, began as a precinct worker and conforms to the popular picture of a political manager. He is slightly above medium height and weight, with graying hair and light blue eyes that look directly at the person with whom he is speaking. His voice is husky and his answers are direct.

After attending Philadelphia parochial schools and the University of Pennsylvania, where he majored in accounts and finance, he spent most of his life at political and governmental work.

Beginning in the State Department of Revenue, he advanced to secretary of the Navigation Commission for the Delaware River, administrative assistant to former Senator Francis J. Myers, president of the Philadelphia City Council and secretary of the Commonwealth.

From 1942 to 1946 he was in the Air Force serving in England and France. He was released from active duty as a lieutenant colonel and is in the Air Force reserve.

In political organizations he was for four successive terms chairman of the Fifty-first Ward Executive Committee, president of the Philadelphia Young Democratic Clubs, administrative assistant to the chairman of the County Executive Committee, chairman of the city organization and registration and organization chairman for the state in the year preceding the election of Gov. Leader.

Finnegan told the Post-Dispatch that his acquaintanceship with national and regional political leaders had been confined to national committee and other such gatherings. He said the amount of traveling he will do for Stevenson will depend on circumstances as they arise.

STEVENSON HIMSELF traveled extensively over the country after his campaign trips, which took in all sections. Many local leaders are beholden to him for speeches at numerous fund-raising dinners to which he drew large crowds.

To fill in the gaps on national acquaintanceship, Stevenson and Finnegan selected Hyman B. Raskin, young Chicago lawyer, as Finnegan's deputy. Raskin spent two years in Washington as the executive assistant to Democratic Chairman Stephen Mitchell, who resigned to resume his law practice.

Raskin is an impressive figure with prematurely white hair and a ruddy complexion. During his work in national headquarters, he made a wide circle of political acquaintances in Washington and throughout the country. He knows which political leaders are important and which are not—a valuable contribution to any campaign.

These two professionals will have the help of Jacob Arvey, National Committeeman for Illinois, whom Stevenson kept under wraps in the preconvention campaign in 1952. Arvey talks the language of the big city politicians. Next year he will not be under the restraints of three years ago.

For the southern and middlewestern leaders, Harry Ashmore, editor of the Arkansas Gazette, has been selected as Stevenson's adviser and speechwriter. Not much is known about his political ability.

More important perhaps than Ashmore's appointment, so far as political writers and commentators are concerned, was Stevenson's selection of Roger Tubby, a White House press secretary during the Truman Administration, as publicity director. Tubby realizes the demands of campaign publicity, such as interviews with the candidate, early advance texts of major speeches so that deadlines can be made, and the need for reliable answers to questions.

Publicity was the weakest point of Stevenson's campaign in 1952 and only the fact he was the underdog in the campaign kept traveling correspondents from exposing and criticizing the many mistakes made by those in charge, including those by the candidate himself.

Another important Stevenson associate will be Thomas K. Finletter, former Secretary for Air, who will be able to furnish valuable information on national defense, governmental questions and international affairs. Finletter, an accomplished writer and speaker, took an important part in the nomination and election of Averell Harriman as Governor of New York. When it became evident, however, that Stevenson had serious intentions of becoming a candidate for the presidential nomination, Finletter, like Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, also of New York, announced his support of the former Illinois Governor.

At his press conference Wednesday, Stevenson announced he would continue to look for "continuous advice and counsel" from Steve Mitchell and Wilson Wyatt. During the preconvention campaign in 1952 he put Mitchell in as chairman of the National Committee, and Wyatt, former Mayor of Louisville, was his personal manager after his nomination.

Stevenson announced this week he would enter the Minnesota primary of March 20 but said he was undecided about the New Hampshire primary of March 13.

THESE PRIMARIES could have a profound effect if Stevenson and Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee entered both. Kefauver won the New Hampshire primary against Truman in 1952—a result Truman has not forgotten or forgiven—and is said to have the edge there now against Stevenson.

If Stevenson contested New Hampshire and lost, he could recoup to a limited extent by a Minnesota victory. But it is one of the vagaries of politics that politicians believe that if Kefauver won New Hampshire without a contest and lost Minnesota to Stevenson his chances for the nomination would be greatly diminished.

Favorite sons—Governors or Senators—will have the edge in some primaries and the state conventions. A high total of votes are tied up in these nominal candidacies that involve personal vanity and bargaining power at the national convention.

It is far too early to guess the probable convention strength of any candidate. Stevenson starts with the edge of publicity taken by every front runner. One of his great handicaps is that he was defeated in 1952. Even young people remember Dewey's two defeats and older people recall the three defeats by William Jennings Bryan. But Grover Cleveland came back in 1892 after his defeat by Republican Benjamin Harrison in 1888.

Finnegan told the Post-Dispatch he was not worried by the "defeat" argument. Bringing history up to date, he remarked that Dilworth was defeated for Mayor of Philadelphia in 1947 by 92,000 votes and came back in 1955 to win by 131,000.

Lightening the Presidential Load: Changes Indicated

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S illness may well leave a permanent mark on the executive branch of the Government regardless of whether the Chief Executive runs for a second term. The ultimate consequences of the Sept. 24 coronary thrombosis are by no means clear, but some lines of approach are indicated.

Measures that will be discussed or put into effect include further presidential delegation of authority and responsibility, constitutional delegation of powers, means of easing the burdens of the White House, greater care in the selection of vice presidential candidates and better training of vice presidents for the presidency.

During Mr. Eisenhower's convalescence, and probably for a following period of indefinite length, efforts will be made to bring to the President's attention only those matters that cannot be handled by anyone else.

Authorities on the presidency as an institution often have decried the fact that a Chief Executive's attention must be diverted so often from affairs of state to ceremonial and other duties that seem to have little real importance. Even before his illness, Mr. Eisenhower turned over many jobs to Vice President Richard M. Nixon. A White House aid put the problem this way:

"There are many matters that try the President's patience rather than take up his time. The number of formal state dinners can be cut down and the President can reduce his acceptances of invitations to unofficial Washington social functions. Over the years these activities have become traditional and it is difficult to break precedent, but on the other hand there is no point in continuing to do things just because your predecessor did them. People will come to realize that."

Mr. Eisenhower's custom was to see 10 or 12 visitors a day; the number is likely to be reduced to three or four. There will be fewer speeches before audiences and a larger proportion of television addresses originating at the White House. Press conferences are likely to be rare and unproductive, as reporters will hesitate to put sharp questions. Long reports will be condensed even further by the White House staff. Nixon will take on more ceremonial duties, like dedicating buildings.

Part of the problem stems from the fact a President wears several hats. He has duties set by law and by the Constitution. He holds a political office, in that he is head of his party. He is a world leader. He is the focal point for many official and unofficial ceremonials, and Commander in Chief of the United States forces.

This week Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh, a top Democratic strategist, declared "This country cannot be led and governed by a semi-retired chairman of the board—its President must be President." Lawrence said it was "nonsense" for Republicans to "babble" about easing the burdens of the presidency. The most powerful office in the world carries "life-and-death responsibilities" which may not be put aside, he said.

This is partly true. The President must sign a number of documents; his name cannot be signed for him. Congress passed a law several years ago permitting the President to authorize some administration officials to sign papers which formerly went to the White House. Only the President can declare a national emergency in order to bring certain stand-by powers into operation. Under the Constitution the President must make certain appointments, but the preliminary screening can be done by others.

Under the authority given by Congress the President has been allowed to delegate to the Secretary of Agriculture the authority to order disposal of farm surpluses, to the Secretary of Defense the authority to call reserve armed forces units to active duty, and to the Secretaries of State and Defense and the head of the International Co-operation Administration the authority to discharge 45 specific functions set out in the Mutual Security Act of 1954.

Gerald D. Morgan, White House special counsel, has said there are nearly 100 additional presidential duties now under study by the Department of Justice, which is trying to determine how many can be delegated to agency heads. These include certification of international air routes, issuance of Federal Government personnel regulations, receipt of and action on administrative reports, the signing of thousands of routine papers and the signing of hundreds of so-called private bills passed by Congress.

As to the delegation of major powers, the Constitution says the Vice President is to take over "in case of the removal of the President from office or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office."

The difficulty with this, in the opinion of Edwin S. Corwin, formerly jurisprudence professor at Princeton University and an expert on constitutional law, is that there is no agency authorized to state when the President is unable to discharge his duties.

Prof. Corwin has suggested Congress constitute the Cabinet, the National Security Council or the group of persons named in the 1947 succession to act as a tribunal to inquire into the situation and make findings. If the tribunal finds the President is "unable" to function, then the Vice President should take over, Prof. Corwin says.

This question arose immediately after Mr. Eisenhower's seizure, of course. The possibility of a need for a delegation of powers was raised first by James C. Hagerty, presidential press secretary, and this brought political as well as constitutional considerations to the fore. The Republican faction opposed to giving Nixon any assistance toward gaining the party's nomination for President in 1956 felt that no delegation was necessary; this view was expressed by Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. Sherman Adams, the Assistant to the President, assumed the real authority below Mr. Eisenhower.

The situation might have turned out differently under other political circumstances, but it dramatized once again the need for more careful selection of vice presidential candidates.

Candidates for Vice President seldom if ever have been chosen because they were qualified to become President. They have been selected for geographical or factional reasons, "to balance the ticket," to satisfy some group to which the presidential candidate was indebted or because of the personal preference of the presidential candidate. The choice usually was made in secret and in the past no one has cared very much about it.

The feeling of complacency about the vice presidency was jolted when President Roosevelt died in 1945 and Vice President Truman took over. It received a second jolt when Mr. Eisenhower was stricken and the indications are strong that next year politicians will be forced to satisfy a demand for truly capable vice presidential candidates. It is possible a decisive number of independent voters will be influenced in 1956 by the choice of a Vice President.

The trend away from the Throttlebottom-type Vice President, which has been given much impetus under the present Administration, is likely to continue and to be intensified. When Truman became President he complained he had not had an opportunity to familiarize himself with the job.

That has not been true of Nixon. The present Vice President has traveled to the major trouble-spots at home and abroad and has regularly sat in the highest councils of the Administration. Regardless of his presidential qualifications in other respects, he is intimately acquainted with Government operations.

Should Mr. Eisenhower be succeeded by a strong-willed, vigorous President more skilled in and more interested in politics than Mr. Eisenhower, the trend toward "decentralization" of executive authority might be reversed.

It is likely, however, that no future President would wish to bring back to the area of White House responsibility the routine tasks that are in process of being handed to subordinates. Future Presidents may credit Mr. Eisenhower's illness with affording them a little more freedom than they otherwise would have had.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

For the Bond Issue

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Our home, modest though it may be, has been assessed at $600 higher than the FHA appraised it two years ago. Nevertheless our family will vote Yes on the County Bond Issue.

I hope others who feel so strongly about increased taxes will change their minds and do likewise. Vote Yes. The county needs these things badly and we can't let personalities interfere with good judgment.

After all, we'll get our chance next election to vote out the whole mess of inefficient hacks now in office. M. M. GOMBAS.
Ferguson.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

By entirely proper coincidence, I have read in the Post-Dispatch (1) Eight Reasons for County Bonds, among which the committee lists three provisions for more and better roads; and (2) how a recent survey reported at Kansas City brought out criticism of doctors for their reluctance to make house-calls.

To a St. Louis pediatrician, at least, the connection is obvious.

Of course, there are times when house-calls should be made, especially on sick children; and still more especially when a contagious disease is suspected.

So, the fact that not long ago it took me two hours to get through the traffic-jams to Kirkwood-and-return was important mostly to me. But it led me to meditate on whether a pediatrician's time is well spent inching along Clayton or Brentwood with his car in low gear.

Everywhere, people who work in the cities are taking their families into the country. Suburbias wax larger and less accessible.

The more progressive do something about their problems of transportation. PEDIATRICIAN.

DeVoto's Living Memorial

(Telegram.)

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The death of Bernard DeVoto is a major loss to conservation at a time when the remaining natural resources of the United States are under greater pressure than ever before.

With his pen, DeVoto was at the forefront of the modern conservation movement. Although he voted in Massachusetts, his principal realm of service was in the Far West where remain such natural assets as timber, mountain ranges, scenic watersheds, wild life and upland meadows.

Bernard DeVoto had done more than any other living American to alert his fellow citizens to the danger that these resources might be exploited and looted. He had helped to prevent and thwart schemes for such exploitation which were aided and fostered by some in high places.

The Western outdoors is DeVoto's monument. None could wish for a finer living memorial.

The Lost Cause

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Reared in the bosom of the Missouri Confederacy, I feel that I must chide you for the levity with which you recently approached the subject of Gen. Joseph Shelby. I was not surprised, of course, since you publish in St. Louis, and it was St. Louis and St. Louisans that kept Missouri from taking her rightful place in the Confederacy.

At the very least, you should have mentioned that Shelby was the most illustrious military genius that Missouri has produced.

The sheer force of men and materiel overwhelmed him as they did Gen. Lee. But he chose not to surrender and in the last great quixotic gesture of the last great quixotic war he crossed the Rio Grande with his tatterdemalion Missourians to seek refuge with Maximilian.

Many of us find that good; romantic, perhaps, but good, and now you and Prof. Gardiner would make light of our romance. So Hamlet has been taken to the psychoanalyst; the modern, mechanistic mind is fearful of emotion, abjures the grand gesture and seeks to reduce, not only ourselves, but our past heroes, to the common stew of Main street.

Asphalt vs. Cement

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It was surprising to see the Post-Dispatch take up the Portland Cement Association's torch recently dropped by Look magazine in the race for the highway dollar.

Even the most casual reader couldn't fail to see that the article in The Mirror of Public Opinion on "We Can Really Build Good Roads Now" was the hysterical work of the propaganda mills of the cement interests. The article was kind enough to mention, fleetingly, that there was some competition in the highway field by a product known as asphalt.

The public should be entitled to facts not fables, to proof not wild claims.

It is a fact, as published by the Bureau of Public Roads, that 85 per cent of the nation's paved roads are asphalt surfaced. It is likewise a fact that the mileage of cement concrete highways is decreasing annually and that these concrete roads are deteriorating faster than the maintenance crews can cover them with asphalt. A Time for Reappraisal

Most Americans must have been glad indeed to hear Secretary Dulles report that the failure to achieve agreement at Geneva does not mean an increased risk of war. Neither does it mean that the "spirit of Geneva" is dead, he said, nor that our military and mutual security policies must be suddenly changed, nor that negotiations with the Soviet Union are at an end.

For all those assurances, which plainly had President Eisenhower's indorsement and perhaps even his inspiration, the country is grateful. They put the foreign ministers' conference in proper perspective, as one step but not the last step on a long, hard road to peace. And the President's message, read by Mr. Dulles, reassured the world that the United States will be deterred by no setbacks from marching along that road.

Mr. Dulles had to be nimble when he came to the question of whether the cold war is now to be resumed in full vigor. A hasty Administration spokesman, even before Mr. Dulles got back from Geneva, had already answered in the affirmative. Now the Secretary of State says the cold war will inevitably go on, but in the form of peaceful competition, with perhaps much less animosity and hostility than in the past.

That kind of cold war, of course, is not a cold war at all. We are happy that Mr. Dulles set the anonymous spokesman right, for at this point he touches the heart of the new relationship between East and West.

Whatever it be called, a condition of peaceful competition between the Communist powers and the free world demands of us sharply different policies and methods from those which are appropriate to a state of cold war bordering on hot. The central problem of American policy at this moment is the adjustment of our official thinking to the new situation which Mr. Dulles acknowledges.

It is not too much to say that the whole range of American foreign policy now requires reappraisal and a fresh approach. Our German policy, for example, may have been correct and effective up to now, but as the danger grows that Bonn and Eastern Germany will drift into direct negotiations under Soviet sponsorship, we must ask whether it is now enough to base our German policy on the demand that the Russians change theirs. For it would avail us nothing to go on demanding German reunification on our terms if in the end the Germans unified their own country on Russia's terms.

Equally essential is an agonizing reappraisal of our policy toward the underdeveloped and ex-colonial lands of Asia and the Middle East. The good will visit of Bulganin and Khrushchev to India, Burma and Afghanistan confirms what the sale of Red arms to Egypt had suggested—that the Russians have embarked on a shrewd campaign to win these nations, not necessarily as Red satellites, but as allies or friends or neutrals.

That campaign is all the more effective for being based not on threats and bluster but on friendly relations and assistance—not on forced communization but on mutuality of national interest. And it simply cannot be checked by merely throwing up a ring of military alliances.

The challenge to the West is to frame a policy that will be more than anti-Communist, more than "containment," more than defense pacts and rearmament. To go on repeating the old slogans will profit us little if meanwhile the Soviets win by diplomacy what they could not win by power.

But Will They Use That Vote?

In becoming the second state within 12 years to lower the voting age from 21 to 18, Kentucky may revive national discussion of the question of permitting citizens to have the right of ballot when they reach the age of 18. It would not be at all surprising to see the question become an issue in the national election next year, particularly since both Gen. Eisenhower and his opponent, Adlai Stevenson, expressed themselves in the 1952 campaign as favoring a lower voting age.

It is estimated that between 150,000 and 200,000 Kentuckians who are 18, 19 and 20 will be eligible to vote in the coming national election. To expect anything like that number to vote would be unduly optimistic judging from the record of Georgia which in 1943 became the first state to lower the voting age. Of Georgia's 2,114,000 citizens eligible to vote in the 1952 election, about 177,000 were 18, 19 or 20 years old.

But only 655,800 persons of all ages voted despite the infusion of new blood, and Georgia ranked 45th among the states in percentage of potential voters actually casting ballots. It is well to remember that while the 1952 election brought the largest turnout of voters in the country's history, the 62,042,747 ballots cast represented only 63 per cent of the nation's adult population.

The newly enfranchised young Kentuckians have a splendid opportunity to do something about this voter apathy that is so often cited as a handicap to democratic government in the United States. In addition to studying the issues in the coming election they can form get-out-the vote groups and otherwise set an example for their elders. They may expect that the eyes of those who favor ballots for 18-year-olds and those who are opposed will be watching to see what the junior voters of Kentucky do with their new and sacred privilege.

Time-Table for the Charter

The easiest way to keep St. Louis from getting the new charter it so badly needs is the silent way of doing nothing at all. Active opposition would be difficult since it is easy to overcome arguments against basic charter reform. So it would be the opposition's most effective strategy to prevent the voters from having even a chance to express themselves at the polls.

Not without some evidence, Mayor Tucker fears that this is the strategy being followed in the Board of Aldermen where a bill for the election of charter freeholders is now languishing. Afraid perhaps of a total frustration of the public will, the aldermanic leaders may submit at the eleventh hour an amendment or two to the present charter. But this would be about as damaging as offering no choice at all.

If this misrepresents the implications of current aldermanic inactivity, the members of the board can easily correct the impression. They can authorize a charter election as quickly as possible. The Mayor has suggested March 6 as the date for this special election. That is less than four months away.

Further advances in the physical rehabilitation of the city will be discounted if St. Louis does not also get an efficient substitute for its present antiquated and inadequate government. The community knows this. So it is to be doubted that a majority of the aldermen really will risk the indignation which would come with the wrecking of the charter time-table.

Overwhelmingly 'YES'

The St. Louis county bond issue campaign now closing has brought out many powerful reasons for voting "Yes." Only a few arguments for a negative vote have been advanced, and none is persuasive.

One source of opposition is not an argument at all, but a gripe. This is the vague feeling that taxes are high and assessments unfair, and why give those so-and-sos in the courthouse money to spend, anyway? Voters who make up their minds on rational grounds cannot let themselves be swayed by this sort of fuzzy emotionalism.

As analysis by the Post-Dispatch has shown, the chief reason for increased taxes in many county areas is not higher assessments but higher tax rates approved by the voters themselves. In other areas, city property wrongly classified as rural acreage did receive an inequitable assessment boost, but this was knocked out in court and new tax bills are to be sent these owners. True, a general reassessment to iron out long-standing inequities is needed. But the bond issue is also needed. The case for it stands on solid ground quite independent of the tax and assessment questions.

Only two of the eight bond propositions have aroused significant objections. A small band of home owners opposes the Daniel Boone expressway, which is one of four expressways provided for in Proposition No. 1.

The merits of this route have been extensively debated. For the great majority of citizens, the Boone route, which would link up dead-ended Highway 40 with the Express Highway, is essential for ready access to the city. And it would be a tragedy if local opposition to this one route killed a general expressways program under which the expenditure of $1 by the county will bring about expenditure of $6.50 by the state and federal governments.

Proposition No. 6, providing for an inner belt highway, has also been opposed by some county citizens, most of whom, however, favor Proposition No. 1. Their principal objection is that the route for this thoroughfare has not been established in detail.

We agree that final and specific plans would be desirable. But engineering costs money and the county will have no money for engineering until the bonds are approved. Anybody who fights congestion, stop-signs and dead-ended streets to get from south to north or vice versa knows how badly the inner belt highway is needed. The only way to make a start on it is to approve Proposition No. 6, and rely upon the citizens' watchdog committee to supervise the project.

The bond issue campaign, in our judgment, has conclusively established the case for a favorable vote. It is up to county citizens to finish what city voters began when they approved a much bigger bond issue last May. And since it takes two "Yes" votes to offset one "No," county voters who care about progress for the metropolitan area must go to the polls in large numbers.

Vote YES on the county bond issue Tuesday.

Candid Advice to a Party

The kind of candor which young Gov. Fred Hall of Kansas displayed at a New York National Republican Club meeting may not be relished by some Republicans, but it offers a realistic approach to the '56 campaign.

Gov. Hall said, in summary, that too many Republicans were "out of step with the President" and those who voted for him. "At a time when we can ill afford the loss of a vote," he said, "we are alienating . . . labor and agriculture. We are fighting with the farmers. We are fighting with labor."

In his own state Gov. Hall had already established himself with the more progressive wing of his party, to the dismay of many right-wing Republicans. He did this not only by beating the party organization in winning his nomination, but also in courageously vetoing a "right-to-work" bill. This brought him the enmity of conservatives and the support of labor.

Gov. Hall's political pattern is not the pattern of some of his party's leaders but it has so far been successful at the polls. Now he is beginning to make himself heard on a national platform. In the Sunflower state the Republicans already know better than to discount his blunt advice.

Putting Science in Its Place

Time was when chemistry professors announced that water was made up of hydrogen and oxygen, and they did not take a vote to learn whether a majority of the class agreed. Indeed, they might even say in an aside that the difference between a scientific law and a political law is precisely the fact that the former cannot be established or disestablished by a plebiscite.

But times change. Comes now an examiner of the Federal Trade Commission to say that the scientific findings of Dr. Allen V. Astin and the Bureau of Standards are not sufficient to maintain the Government's false advertising charges against AD-X2, the battery additive, in view of the "overwhelming weight" of testimony from satisfied users.

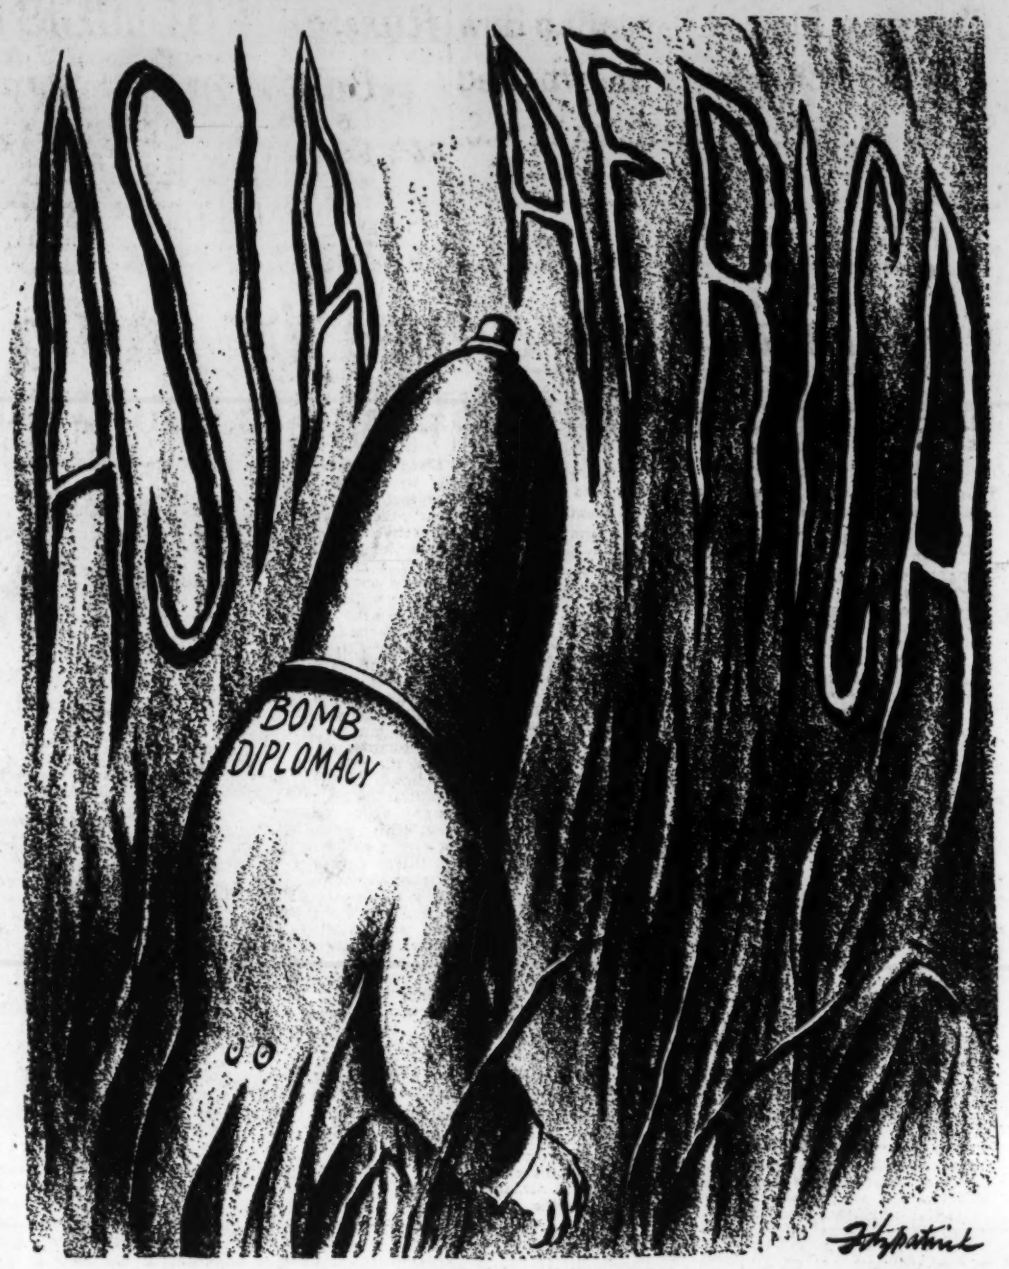
How about voting, say in the United Nations, in favor of the proposition that Messrs. Fermi, Szilard, Urey et al did not know what they were talking about when they said they had achieved atomic fission? Thus by a rousing shout of "Ayes" it could be established that the A-bomb is an impossibility.

Stop Signs and Street Signs

Sometimes it seems that Traffic Commissioner Gonter's office ought to be renamed the "Commission for Consideration and Re-Consideration of Stop Signs." The aldermen are ready to ask for yet another "study" of the yellow and red octagons. They are also debating several individual signs.

The subject really is not frivolous. It involves the expeditious movement of traffic and the prevention of accidents. Signs at street intersections once notorious for collisions have brought about substantial improvement. Others serve no purpose but aldermanic courtesy and the interruption of traffic flow.

But if stop signs are going to be surveyed once more, perhaps a little thought can also be given to the zany way street markers are placed at so many intersections. Although meant for the motorist seeking a given street, the signs often are placed at the far corner, their blank backs toward him. He must look back to read. Why can't they be on the near corner, facing the approaching driver? What about lettering both sides, thus also serving persons already on the street?



GETTING NOWHERE FAST

The Anthropology of Manners

Edward T. Hall Jr., Former Professor of Anthropology in the State Department's Foreign Service Institute, Now With American University, in Scientific American

The Goops they lick their fingers and the Goops they lick their knives;
They spill their broth on the table cloth—
Oh, they lead disgusting lives.
The Goops they talk while eating, and loud and fast they chew;
And that is why I'm glad that I am not a Goop—are you?

Americans are shocked when they go abroad and discover whole groups of people behaving like Goops. When this happens, we may (1) remark on the quaintness of the "natives" (a term cordially disliked all over the world) or (2) try to discover the meaning of the differences of behavior.

One rather quickly discovers that what is good manners in one context may be bad in the next.

An Arab diplomat who recently arrived in the United States from the Middle East attended a banquet which lasted several hours. When it was over, he met a fellow countryman outside and suggested they go get something to eat, as he was starving. His friend, who had been in this country for some time, laughed and said: "But Habib, didn't you know that if you say, 'No, thank you,' they think you really don't want any?"

Where the Trouble Comes In

In the interest of intercultural understanding various United States Government agencies have hired anthropologists from time to time as technical experts. The State Department especially has pioneered.

Twenty years of experience in working with Americans in foreign lands convinces me that the real problem is not with taboos, which they catch on to rather quickly, but rather with whole congeries of habits and attitudes.

Can you remember tying your shoes this morning? Could you give the rules for when it its proper to call another person by his first name? These examples illustrate how easy it is to get into trouble in another culture.

A simple illustration is the meaning in the tone of voice. In the United States we raise our voices not only when we are angry but also when we want to emphasize a point. But to the Chinese, for instance, overloudness of the voice is most characteristically associated with anger.

Two Attitudes Toward Space

The Latin Americans do not understand our mixing business with informality and recreation. We like to put our feet up on the desk. To a Latin American this whole behavior is shocking. All he sees in it is rudeness.

Differences in attitudes toward space—what would be territoriality in lower forms of life—raise a number of other interesting points. United States women who go to live in Latin America all complain about the "waste" of space in the houses. United States visitors to the Middle East complain about crowding. Everywhere we go space seems to be distorted.

In the United States we distribute ourselves more evenly than many other people. We have strong feelings about touching and being crowded; in a streetcar or elevator we draw ourselves in.

In Latin America, where touching is more common and the basic units of space seem to be smaller, the wide automobiles made in the United States pose problems. People don't know where to sit.

North Americans are disturbed by how close the Latin Americans stand when they converse. The Latin Americans, for their part, complain that people in the United States are retraidos (withdrawing and uncommunicative).

Our Senses of Time

If you are a Latin American, talking to a North American at the distance he insists on maintaining is like trying to talk across a room.

The interesting thing is that neither party is specifically aware of what is wrong when the distance is not right. They merely have vague feelings of discomfort or anxiety. As the Latin American approaches and the North American backs away, both parties take offense without knowing why.

The difference in sense of time is another thing of which we are not aware. A middle-class business man meeting another of equivalent rank will ordinarily be aware of being two minutes early or late. If four minutes late, he will mutter something by way of apology; at five minutes he will utter a full sentence of apology.

Now among urban Arabs in the Eastern Mediterranean the unit that corresponds to our five-minute period is 15 minutes. Thus when an Arab arrives nearly 30 minutes after the set time, by his reckoning the tardiness will not amount to one significant period.

See You How Much Later?

How long is one expected to stay when making a duty call at a friend's house in the United States? While there are regional variations, I have observed that the minimum is very close to 45 minutes, even in the face of pressing commitments elsewhere, such as a roast in the oven. In Arab countries an American paying a duty call at the house of a desert sheik causes consternation if he gets up to leave after half a day.

Informal units of time such as "just a minute," "a while," "later," "a long time," "a spell" are not as imprecise as they seem. Any American who has worked with someone else for six months can usually tell within five minutes when that person will be back if he says, "I'll be gone for a while."

Few of us realize how much we rely on built-in patterns to interpret messages of this sort. An Iranian friend of mine who came to live in the United States was hurt and puzzled for the first few years. The new friends he met and liked would say on parting: "Well, I'll see you later." He mournfully complained: "I kept expecting to see them, but the 'later' never came."

Hennings Inquiry Revealing How Loyalty Control Has Snowballed Until It Affects Millions in U.S.

Distinguished Witnesses Warn That Constitutional Guarantees Are Eroding — More Than 300 Organizations Now on Attorney General's List of 'Subversives.'

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.

BACK IN 1947, Herbert E. Gaston, then chairman of the Federal Interdepartmental Committee on Employe Investigations created under an executive order by President Truman, warned that to give screening agencies or investigating agencies the power to bar from federal service those who merely hold political views not consonant with those of the examiners and the investigators would set up an intolerable tyranny which the advocates of democracy and liberty most strongly condemn.

This week, a Senate subcommittee on constitutional liberties, headed by Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr., began uncovering evidence that Gaston was indeed prophetic.

A security system run wild, the subcommittee found, has resulted in an internal situation never contemplated when the Government first undertook under President Truman to set up safeguards against the dangers of subversion and infiltration.

Never before in the history of the United States has the loyalty of so many Americans been subject to arbitrary judgment by so many agencies and investigators.

And the committee heard appeals from distinguished members of the bar to use its influence to help harness a spreading movement which they foresaw as eroding constitutional guarantees, perhaps beyond repair in this generation.

Millions of Lives Affected.

It was a graphic story the witnesses told, of how the original intent of the Government loyalty security program has spread out uncontrolled until it now reaches into the lives, directly or indirectly, of 20,000,000 Americans, the overwhelming majority of whom have not the remotest connection with the nation's international or internal safety.

And at the root of the burgeoning movement, as outlined by the witnesses—from a mechanical standpoint at least—is the so-called Attorney General's list of "subversive" organizations. Within a few years this listing of proscribed organizations has grown from a handful of groups, definitely labeled subversive, to more than 300.

The organizations on this list, aside from the Communist party, have a rather vague standing in the Attorney General's office. They are held generally at one time or another dating back over a period of 20 years or more to have been under Communist domination or influence. Most of them no longer are in existence.

Yet, as shown this week in testimony brought out by Hennings and his subcommittee's counsel, Lon Hocker of St. Louis, states and municipalities, as well as federal agencies, have accepted it as the yardstick by which the political nonvirtue, at best, and the disloyalty, at worst, of millions of Americans are measured.

Damage That Can Be Done.

As developed by Hennings and Hocker, an anonymous note dropped in the mail coupling a citizen with one of the proscribed organizations may deny him a passport, cost him his federal, state or industrial job, bar him from an honorable discharge from the armed services, prohibit his appearance on certain college campuses and, in some instances, result in his arrest if he fails to register with the police.

Moreover, these latter day reprisals for an association which may have existed many years ago may extend to the alleged miscreant's friends or relatives, as has been demonstrated in recent months in the cases of young men failing to receive armed services commissions because of the alleged misdeeds of parents, or of soldiers having their honorable discharges revoked because relatives were shown to have been affiliated with one or another of the groups listed by the attorney general.

Though Hennings has an oft-expressed hostility toward the security program as it now operates, because of its lack of basic constitutional protections found in criminal law proper, he is not in these hearings attacking it. Rather, he is systematically diagnosing it so that for the first time since its inception its shortcomings may be laid out in the open for a detached appraisal by the American people, in whose ultimate good sense he has profound faith.

Some Hennings Antipathies.

Hennings abhors the principles of guilt by association and by kinship in determining security risks. He strongly opposes the use of secret witnesses who cannot be confronted or cross-examined. He is scornful of any proceedings which shifts the burden of proof to the accused. He believes that the federal security-loyalty program constitutes, in effect, a novel and wholly undesirable development in the law which he calls "administrative criminal law." This, he says, is incompatible with the traditions of Anglo-Saxon justice. Its extension, in his view, amounts to creeping statism.

In all of these positions, the Missouri Democrat received ample support from distinguished witnesses before his subcommittee this week.

There was Dr. Linus Pauling, one of the world's leading scientists, describing in detail for the first time how he had been having trouble with the passport office of the State Department since 1952 because, the officials said, they had information that he was a follower of the Communist party line.

Three times he was given permits for limited travel abroad. Three other times he was turned down. Finally, in October 1954 he was informed that he could not get another travel permit. The reason: the State Department had secret information that he was a "concealed Communist." A month later, however, when he was awarded the Nobel prize in chemistry he was granted a passport for unlimited travel abroad.

Acting on Unevaluated Data.

This up-and-down behavior by the State Department prompted Hennings and Hocker to inquire with considerable skepticism of Scott McLeod, State Department security officer, as to the existence of any real evidence against Dr. Pauling in the light of the department's sudden flip-flop.

While getting no explanation for the department's change of heart, the interrogators did establish publicly for the first time that the department will deny a passport to an individual on the basis of unevaluated information from informants who are not even known to the department.

Dr. Arthur Holly Compton, of Washington University, St. Louis, also a Nobel prize winner, described the screening and loyalty procedures as applied to scientists as damaging the true security of the United States.

In withholding passports on the basis of secret information, as it did in the case of Dr. Martin D. Kamen, also of Washington University, the State Department was depriving American scientists of the opportunity of acquiring new ideas through interchange with other scientists and thus setting back American scientists in their quest for knowledge which someday might be useful to the defense of the nation, Dr. Compton said.

He implied strongly that had he not attended an international congress of scientists in Brussels in 1931, he would not have become aware at that early date of the potential of atomic development, a circumstance which was to prove its usefulness to the nation in wartime years when he worked on the project which led to the atom bomb.

Passport Cases Significant.

In Hennings's opinion, the passport cases, of which the above are only two of the most important, have an important bearing upon his undertaking, for they represent a phase of the operation of the security program in which individuals are penalized for alleged unorthodox views or associations which may, at the moment, be in disfavor with the Washington Bureaucracy but which, nevertheless are their right—not privilege — under Article One of the Bill of Rights.

Four distinguished experts in constitutional law have set the tone for the Hennings hearings. They are professors Zecheriah Chafee of Harvard University; Alexander Meiklejohn, former president of Amherst College and now chairman of the Experimental College of the University of Wisconsin; Thomas I. Cook of Johns Hopkins University, and Morris Ernst of New York.

In general, they propounded a pure legal philosophy that the right to associate, to speak, to listen and to advocate is absolute under the Bill of Rights. They drew a sharp distinction between advocacy of a cause and incitement, which would constitute an illegal act.

As Meiklejohn stated it:

"To advocacy, the (First) Amendment guarantees complete freedom. To incitement the amendment guarantees nothing whatever."

Lesser of Two Dangers.

In the opinion of these lawyers, the dangers to the American system which might arise from political freedom are less to be feared than suppression of political freedom, a doctrine which, as the Hennings committee is demonstratng, appears to be in juxtaposition to the philosophy behind the current loyalty-security program.

The hearings over which Hennings is presiding are a model of congressional decorum seldom witnessed here. They are being held in the ornate, marble Senate caucus room whose interior became familiar to millions of televiewers during the boisterous Army-McCarthy hearings in 1954.

Wire service and other correspondents are providing ample coverage but the learned nature of the testimony and the almost complete detachment of Hennings and Hocker in their handling of witnesses do not lend themselves to generating big headlines.

Hennings, a stickler for the rights of witnesses, has gone out of his way to accommodate McLeod, the state department's principal witness thus far, even when McLeod was openly being coached by three State Department lawyers seated behind him as he testified.

Hocker Making Impression.

Hocker, a courteous though tenacious interrogator, has impressed observers with his knowledge of the complexities of the loyalty-security program, a sure sign that he had done his home work.

What good will come of these hearings, and the ones to follow next year on other articles of the Bill of Rights, is a matter of conjecture.

That some beneficial results already are accruing is evident in the fact that on Aug. 1, several weeks after Hennings let it be known in a letter to Senator Arthur V. Watkins (Rep.), Utah, that his committee was going to delve into the handling of passports by the State Department, the passport office drafted for the first time a set of rules for appeals procedure.

Hennings and Hocker noted with raised eyebrows that the rules were titled:

"Procedure for Denying Passports."

Also apparently an early accomplishment for the Hennings effort was the Defense Department order, issued Friday, revising its military personnel security rules so that the services will investigate for possible security risks before putting people in uniform, instead of afterward.

The effect of this, it is hoped, will be to avoid branding service personnel with security discharges for something that happened long before they entered the service.

Russian Reluctance to Reach Accord on Reich Based on Its Strategic East European Position

Reds Fearful of Exposing Czechs, Seek to Consolidate Satellites.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Retired)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.

THE foreign policy of the Soviet Union, like that of Germany under Hitler, has always been the handmaiden of its strategic maneuvers for expansion. If one assumes, as our policy makers do, that the objective of Communist domination of the world remains in effect, a glance at the map of Europe shows why the Soviet leaders will make no agreement on Germany that will permit free elections and a unified Germany allied with the West.

For the same reason, the failure of the Geneva conference probably was inevitable.

In a strategic sense, according to our military planners, the Russians may well believe that the Western allies are planning the reconquest by political means of eastern Europe, in just the same steps that Hitler followed, in taking it over a nation at a time.

Hitler's first move, after rearming and occupying the west bank of the Rhine, was anschluss with Austria. When this was accomplished, Czechoslovakia was three-fourths surrounded. Czechoslovakia fell next; the allies were unwilling to try to save it by going into a general European war.

Polish Conquest.

Germany, the Baltic sea and Czechoslovakia then comprised three-fourths of Poland's borders. Poland's conquest took three weeks of war as the German armies poured in from converging directions. Hungary and Romania fell without fighting. Yugoslavia and Greece were isolated and easy conquests.

The sequence today for the reconquest by the western allies of eastern Europe, by successive political steps, would not be quite the same, but the idea might appear to be similar, in Moscow.

Russian troops have been withdrawn from the weak Austrian state but Austria offers no threat to Czechoslovakia by itself, despite their extensive common boundary. But if a Western-oriented and unified Germany were permitted, Czechoslovakia would find itself, as in Hitler's time, partially surrounded. Czechoslovakia would be subject to political pressures against the dictatorship of the Soviet stooges that rule it by force and secret police.

If Czechoslovakia overthrew its Communist government, then Hungary would be three-fourths surrounded by Yugoslavia, Austria and Czechoslovakia. Poland would find itself in the same situation as it did when Hitler started World War II.

In most of the eastern European satellites, there would be little difficulty in stirring up a revolt against the Communist regimes if the people thought there was a chance of support from the West. The spontaneous revolt in eastern Germany in June 1953 was a sign of what could happen in any satellite.

If even one satellite were able to free itself from bondage, all might follow in a chain reaction of uprising of oppressed peoples.

The death of Stalin gave the new Soviet leaders—the Malenkov-Beria combination—a chance to change his bankrupt policies of constant pressure and threat. Stalin's policies—and Molotov's—had succeeded in arming the free world against Soviet expansion. In almost every direction the Soviets turned to push they were met by alliances sponsored and armed by the United States. The Communist agression in Korea showed that the West, almost on its final defensive line, was willing to fight.

Malenkov and Beria attempted a relaxation of international and internal pressures. In three months the East German revolt proved how unloved the Communist governments were; Beria was liquidated as a result of this error of judgment.

According to Isaac Deutscher, writing in the Reporter Magazine of Sept. 8, Malenkov had hoped to make an orderly withdrawal from East Germany, abandoning the East German Communist regime, to persuade the Western powers to withdraw their forces from Germany and to retain Soviet positions in eastern Europe.

The Malenkov - Khrushchev combination, which followed, fell in February 1955 following the agreement to add an armed Western Germany to the Western European union and to NATO. The Malenkov policy was bankrupt as far as the Soviets were concerned, with its failure to prevent the rearmament of Germany, and it was followed by the Khrushchev-Bulganin regime now in control of Soviet policy.

Khrushchev continues the policy of external friendliness—the smiling nyet—but is making no retreats. In fact, Soviet expansion is being pressed in the Arab states, in Afghanistan and the Russian leaders are making visits of state to Afghanistan, India and Burma.

Thai Infiltration.

In Thailand, the Red Chinese are the Communist agents and have set up a free Thai government in South China, headed by one of the royal Thai family, waiting the next opportunity.

The insincerity of the Soviet "new look" could not have been shown better when it is realized that while they were being agreeable to President Eisenhower at the meeting at the summit in Geneva, they at the same time were negotiating arms deal with Egypt, Syria and Saudi Arabia to stir up trouble there.

Does this mean that the Soviet leaders do not want some relaxation of tension and that they do not have serious internal problems to solve? It does not, according to our Russian experts. Nor does it mean that they would welcome war.

According to good authority, Stalin discounted the effect of atomic weapons. Indeed, he prided himself as a military theorist and would have had to rewrite his essays on military affairs if he admitted that atomic weapons were more important than masses of soldiers.

The present Soviet rulers have quite a different attitude. They realize the destruction that could take place in a few weeks on the Soviet Union in an all-out nuclear war would far exceed that of the four years war with Germany.

Pressures Continue.

They do not want a nuclear war; the West does not want a nuclear war. Therefore the Communists are free to continue their pressures without fear that the West will unleash a war. Our deterrent strategy is an invitation to boring from within and to Communist revolutions.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles proclaimed an obvious truth when he said that a divided Germany in the middle of Europe is the greatest cause of tension, and ultimately of war, in the world. It cannot get better, but can only grow worse so long as Germany remains divided.

The West Germans are determined, as one German deputy told the writer, to rescue their brothers and sisters in East Germany from slavery. The violence of their feeling cannot help but increase.

In East Germany probably not over 10 per cent of the population support the Communist regime. The supporters are the rulers, and others with a vested interest, in Communist control.

The Russians are aware of all this and realize that there is little chance utimately of keeping East Germany as a Communist state.

But at the present time they can retain control in East Germany without fear of war. And while they retain control they continue to complete the Communization of the East European satellites. These have been under Communist domination for 10 years now. In another 10 years Eastern Germany could be surrendered in some fashion without danger of a chain reaction toward freedom in Eastern Europe. Even now the men being drafted into the satellite armies have known nothing but Communism since they were 10 years old, and have been taught only what is favorable to Communism.

Thus if the Soviet leaders can, by smiling or any other means, obtain a comparative reprieve from the danger of war with the West for a few years yet they will be able to make their conquests in Eastern Europe solid.

Soviet Assistance.

Eastern Europe, China, North Korea and North Viet Nam all are expecting Soviet assistance toward industrialization and improved standards of living. At the same time the Soviet Union is straining in its efforts to continue the armaments race and to increase its basic industry.

The Russians are undoubtedly sincere in their proposals for the elimination of armaments. They want to abolish nuclear weapons. If these were agreed to, the United States would lose its only means of exerting serious military power in a war with the Soviet Union. At the same time the Soviet Union and its satellites would be supreme in conventional arms and armed forces in Europe.

Our Russian experts see the Soviet strategy as calculated not only to hold what they have, but to continue expansion by less brutal and obvious means than Stalin's. They did not share the President's optimism after the meeting at the summit. They see Soviet policy guided by fundemental strategic considerations that do not change. This does not forego a retreat if one is necessary. But they see the West too divided and too fearful to make a Soviet retreat prospect.

Mansfield Commends Dulles For Statesmanship at Geneva

Declares, However, That Administration 'Most Decidedly' Should Revise Defense and Foreign Policies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (AP).

SENATOR MANSFIELD (Dem.), Montana, said today the Eisenhower Administration "most decidedly" should revise its defense and foreign policies.

Mansfield, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, complimented Secretary of State John Foster Dulles "for the statesmanship" displayed at the recent Big Four foreign ministers conference in Geneva. And, he said, the failure of that meeting to produce results should not be played for political advantage.

He declared, however, there is need for a "facing up on the part of the United States and its allies to the realities of the world situation." The free world must insure itself against being "taken in by the smiles of the Soviet leaders," he said.

Critical of Cutback Plans.

Mansfield was critical of planned United States manpower cutbacks and of reductions by other free nations in defense forces and budgets.

Without more strength and unity, he said, "it is quite possible the days of NATO will be numbered." If the North Atlantic Treaty Organization withers, he added, Germany will be unified, but on Soviet terms.

Mansfield said U.S. foreign policy "must be reappraised very carefully and on a day-to-day basis." He called for "some new ideas" and asserted:

"To my knowledge, no new proposal has been furnished by the policy planning staff in the state department in the past three years."

Russian strategy in the Middle and Far East and other areas, he predicted, will be "to start the possibility of fires and keep fanning them" in the belief the big powers are in a military stalemate.

George Approves.

Senator George (Dem.), Georgia, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, gave his approval to Dulles's report to the nation last night.

"I am gratified at the tone of his report and especially the attitude of the President toward the great problem of world stability and peace," George said at his home in Vienna, Ga.

Senator Young (Rep.) of North Dakota said he agrees with Dulles that the conference impasse has not restored the cold war "as we've known it in the past." Senator O'Mahoney (Dem.) of Wyoming said, however, the "spirit of Geneva" never was very much alive and is "now dead."

George said that he believed "on the whole Mr. Dulles has made a good report under the disappointing circumstances he found to exist in Geneva."

By the United Press.

At San Marcos, Tex., Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (Dem.) of Texas said Russia's representatives entered the Geneva conference "under a mistaken impression"—a belief that the illness of President Eisenhower "would divide and weaken the United States."

The Senate majority leader, in a speech at Southwest Texas State Teachers College, said the Soviet assumption was "logical . . . for Communists."

"In their country, the illness of a leader is the signal for the pack to turn on each other and fight to the death," he said.

Johnson said the high hopes with which the Geneva conference opened "have been largely disappointing. The major objectives for peace have not been achieved."

He said Americans have adopted "overwhelmingly the concept of bipartisanship in foreign affairs" and predicted foreign policy will not be a partisan issue in the 1956 election.

PAZ FAMILY WILL REGAIN LA PRENSA, OFFICIAL SAYS

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 19 (TP)—A member of the new Argentine provisional government said tonight the newspaper La Prensa will be handed back to the Gainza Paz family very soon. It was expropriated during the dictatorship of Juan D. Peron and given to his labor organization, the General Confederation of Labor.

The Cabinet minister, who asked not to be identified by name, said he spoke on the basis of a general impression in government circles.

Provisional President Pedro Aramburu told a visiting party from the United States on Thursday that the paper would be returned to its rightful owners as soon as possible. Dr. Alberto Gainza Paz is in New York waiting to be called back as editor.

BRITAIN HOPES FOR ATOMIC AIRCRAFT WITHIN 5 YEARS

LONDON, Nov. 19 (UP)—Britain is working on an atomic aircraft and hopes to have such a plane on the runways within five years, it was disclosed today.

The Hawker-Siddeley Co., which produces the Hawker Hunter jet fighter, announced that a team of scientists was working on a preliminary survey of the plane at the government's atomic energy research establishment at Harwell. The company said it is negotiating for a site for a permanent research station.

Informed sources said that a "breeder" reactor, which provides more atomic power than it consumes, may be the elementary power unit in the new plane. The reactor can be built as small as a boot box, the sources said.

30,000 IN BERLIN RALLY DENOUNCE GERMAN DIVISION

BERLIN, Nov. 19 (AP)—More than 30,000 West Berliners rallied today in protest against failure of the Geneva conference to unify Germany. The rally—held in front of the West Berlin city hall—had the official blessing of the city government.

Mayor Otto Suhr led off the demonstration by declaring it has become necessary to remind the world that Germans will never be satisfied with a divided homeland.

"We have the right, indeed a duty, to speak, since we have had our own experiences with Soviet methods of behavior," Suhr asserted. "We want nothing more than a United Nations' guaranteed right to determine our own destiny through free elections."

In East Berlin, the Communists held 20 rallies last night. East German Premier Grotewohl, speaking at one rally, said free elections cannot be held as long as West Germany is "remilitarized and bound to the Paris war pacts."

Indonesia Judicial Pay Issue.

JAKARTA, Nov. 19 (AP)—Indonesia's judges are irked over a new pay system putting them on the same level with prosecutors. The judges claim their wider responsibility merits more money.

NEW GERMAN COINS HONOR MAN WHO FOUGHT FRENCH

BONN, Nov. 19—French authorities in Germany are raising their eyebrows over a new series of 5-mark coins. The coins, roughly the equivalent in size and value of a silver dollar, bear the portrait of the Margravs Ludwig Wilhelm I of Baden, a 17th century field marshal. Two hundred thousand of the coins have been minted.

The Margravs Ludwig made his reputation in wars against the French. The other side of the coin shows the motto, "Shield of the Reich," and the German eagle imposed on a likeness of the Margravs's castle in Rastatt. Rastatt was one of the centers of the French occupation.

On Trade Mission in Asia.

ROME, Nov. 19 (AP)—Foreign Minister Gaetano Martino is off on a 17-day tour of Japan and Thailand with hopes of drumming up trade between Italy and the Far East.

MOSCOW LITERARY GAZETTE SHIFTS EDITORS IN SHAKEUP

MOSCOW, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Literary Gazette has a new hand at the helm. A shakeup in the editorship of the Soviet Union's leading cultural newspaper came to light today.

Former editor Boris Rurikov has been moved to an unspecified job in the Ministry of Culture and replaced by Valdimir Kochetov, an author chiefly noted for a story of shipyard workers, "Great Life," which was made into a successful movie.

Rurikov, essentially a critic, took over the editorship a relatively short time ago from another author, Konstantin M. Simonov.

The shift took place at about the same time the magazine Kommunist, bible of world Communist theory, changed editors.

LONDON-MOSCOW AIRLINE TICKETS NOW AVAILABLE

MOSCOW, Nov. 19 (AP) — Passengers may now buy direct air tickets from London to Moscow under an agreement signed here today by Lord Douglas of Kirtleside, chairman of British European Airways, and Marshal S. F. Zhavoronkov, chief of the Soviet airline Aeroflot.

A British spokesman said the agreement meant that tickets bought in London or Moscow would now be valid for the entire journey between the two cities.

Passengers on the route will still have to change from British to Soviet planes at Helsinki, Vienna, Prague and Berlin, but now they will not have to get separate tickets for each stage of the journey.

BURMA BUYING $5,000,000 WORTH OF GOODS IN RUSSIA

LONDON, Nov. 19 (UP)—The Moscow radio said today a Burmese purchasing mission had signed contracts with Soviet foreign trade organizations for 20,000,000 rubles ($5,000,000) worth of goods.

The broadcast quoted a Tass dispatch as saying the goods would include trucks, cars, road building machinery, pumps, compressors, transformers, metals and chemicals.

RUSSIAN TROOPS IN REICH REPORTED SET FOR A-WAR

BONN, Nov. 19 (AP)—Western intelligence sources say Red army divisions in East Germany have been streamlined for atomic warfare.

The 22 divisions in the Soviet zone have been trimmed to an average strength of 7000 instead of 10,000 men, these sources said yesterday, with the excess troops kept as reserves. They said the forces also have been modernized with new equipment from Russia.

Small, highly mobile combat groups are believed better able to survice in atom-bombed areas than massive formations.

JORDAN, TEL AVIV DIFFER ON KILLING OF ISRAELI

JERUSALEM, Jordan Sector, Nov. 19 (AP)—A Jordan military source charged today an Israeli killed by the Arab Legion in a border incident yesterday was one of six soldiers who crossed the border and tried to kidnap Arab farmers.

The Israelis said the man killed was one of a party of farm workers who accidentally crossed the border in a jeep. The incident occurred near Lahav, a Jewish settlement in the Hebron area of the south Judean hills.

HIGH-PRESSURE RECRUITING BAD, AIR FORCE SAYS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (AP) —The Air Force says high-pressured recruiting does not bring the best results.

Reporting on tests designed to determine which men would be good recruiters, the Air Force says "Persons with coercive tendencies—a tendency to force others to act in a manner contrary to their own wishes — did not promote recruiting."

O'Hara's Portrayal of Small Town Is Nostalgic

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch

JOHN O'HARA

TEN NORTH FREDERICK, by John O'Hara. (Random House, 408 pgs., $3.95).

THE central character in John O'Hara's novel "Ten North Frederick" is a good citizen named Joe Chapin. Joe lives and dies in the odor of respectability and he deserves for the most part the good repute in which he is held by his fellow townspeople. In the end, however, he gets little satisfaction in reviewing his life or his life's work. And no wonder.

All that he is and has—his money, his family name, his standing in the community—he owes to circumstance. In his youth he rejects the deepest love of his life because the atmosphere of his first meeting with the girl is "corrupt." In his maturity he aspires to public office but quits before he has really started when the professional politicians say "No."

Mr. O'Hara is wholly successful in describing the oppressive mediocrity of Joe Chapin's career, so successful in fact that Joe becomes both predictable and boring before the story is half over. Fortunately he is surrounded by other characters who are much more purposeful and expansive in dealing with events.

HIS wife Edith, for instance, knows exactly what she wants and gets it. She wants to "own" a man who will provide a solid basis for exercising her limited but ruthless will to power. Edith is unpleasant but fascinating.

Mike Slattery, on the other hand, is distinctly pleasant even though quite as undeviating in executing his plan of life. He is the definitive political boss; he enjoys the reality of power rather than its badges and he is not too particular in his methods of operation. At bottom, however, he is sustained by the conviction that he is serving his people and his country more effectively than the reformers and phrase-makers whom he manipulates.

Chapin's parents and his children also present stronger personalities, as does Joe's closest friend, Arthur McHenry, and a number of others. The true protagonist of the novel, however is the town of Gibbsville, Pa., whose anatomy, spirit and peculiarities are particularized with an ardor that should bring an acute feeling of nostalgia to anyone who has lived in a small town.

It is true of course that Gibbsville seems to have a richness of color, manifesting itself in a variety of ways, that one is not likely to ascribe to his own Gibbsville. The imaginative writer, however, is not abusing his license when he brings to the surface the things that might have happened but probably didn't. On the contrary it is his special function to make his particular milieu a forcing ground for the possibilities as well as the probabilities of human behavior. Even so Mr. O'Hara rarely goes too far beyond the boundaries of plausibility though the vitality of his writing owes a great deal to the surprising and sometimes shocking turn he brings to a situation.

THIS is particularly true of his sexual encounters. Without being too extravagant he manages to preserve a maximum shock value by a casual approach to an unexpected development. The blue-stocking Edith submits to being picked up in a Philadelphia hotel; Joe seduces—or is seduced by—his daughter's roommate; the daughter Ann falls for a raffish jazz musician, and so on.

Some of the brightness of "Ten North Frederick" is provided by the rouge on the surface rather than the coursing blood underneath. This is one way of saying that Mr. O'Hara is not exactly profound; and certainly he is not a discriminating writer so far as use of the language is concerned. One cannot deny, however, that he has a feeling for people and a power to engage one's interest in their behalf.

A Close Look at Morocco

THE PRINCE AND I, by Marvin Howe. (The John Day Co., 252 pgs., $3.50.)

EMILY L. NORCROSS

MOROCCO, much in the public eye at the moment, is a country very difficult to understand. It is neither European nor Oriental. And it is by no means typical of Africa. The minds of the modern Moroccans are directed to the West; their hearts still remain in the East. The thesis of Marvin Howe's book is that the only hope for peace in Morocco lies in the family and supporters of the exiled Sultan, now in process of being restored to his throne. He, she says, can lead the way into modern life.

Miss Howe is a young American journalist who has lived in Morocco since 1950. She went there first as governess with a French colonial family, and was warned against having "native" friends. These orders, however, could not apply when she had the good fortune to become close friends with the Crown Prince and his brother and sisters. Later she met many other Moroccans of all classes, and saw at first hand the people's struggle for sovereignty, the repercussions of strong-arm, outmoded, colonial tactics, and the revolts among peoples and tribes, not enemies, but victims of unscrupulous provocation.

SHE makes, indeed, a very good case for the Sultan and the Prince, banished to Madagascar in 1953. They represent the Nationalist movement, and behind them are many of the thinking French. For the French colonial authorities she has little use, except for Grandval, sent as Resident General in the emergencies last spring. But the arch-colonists continually try to discredit him.

Miss Howe claims that the terrible incidents of the past summer were "arranged" when it became evident that Morocco was backing Grandval, and wanted the return of the Sultan. "Contrary to the opinion of many," she says, "the August massacres were not part of a general uprising of the tribes. . . . It was deliberate killing planned to prevent the inevitable solution of the Moroccan crisis."

"The Prince and I" gives an intimate picture of Fez, Rabat, Casablanca—casbahs, royal villas and camel markets—as well as a studied analysis of the current tensions in Morocco.

Two Doctors In Blood and Mud of War

DOCTOR AT DIENBIENPHU, by Paul Grauwin. (John Day, 304 pgs., $3.50).

WITHOUT SANCTION, by Hans Kades. (Criterion Books, 348 pgs., $3.75.)

Reviewed by
WILL WHARTON

MAJ. GRAUWIN is a French army doctor who was at Haiphong ready to go on leave when word came that a surgeon was needed at Dienbienphu (hereinafter known as "D"). Being a good guy, Grauwin volunteered, and just about that time things began popping at D. The Major stayed on until the end and then some and wound up still probing and slicing, but as a prisoner of Asiatic borscht belt boogeymen.

A forthright realist, Maj. Grauwin would be the first to concede that he could never cop a prize for composition from cats like Walter Pater at Magdalen College. But Grauwin's prose is embroidered with mud, blood, sweat and gruesome statistics. In the 57 days of the D siege a handful of doctors had to handle some 6000 casualties. Dr. Grauwin mentions a colleague who in one day performed 25 amputations.

Dr. Grauwin has painted a depressing and yet inspiring picture of doctors at work in a war. Hans Kades's novel is somewhat related because it tells what happens to doctors after the war. We know that surgeons as well as commanders are made on the battlefield. Back in the 1940s when the Nazis were getting some deserved lessons in the school of experience, any medical student who could slice a tomato was doing major surgery. Kades reveals the plight of one such student who in a few months at the front learned more surgery than many meds do in a lifetime. But while he was learning his ligatures, bombs fell on his school, wiping out his records and some of his instructors. He returns from the wars a skilled surgeon, yet only a penniless student with much of his scholastic work to do over.

THE PASSING SCENE

As Bernard DeVoto Saw It

THE EASY CHAIR, by Bernard DeVoto, (Houghton Mifflin Co., 356 pages, $4).

Reviewed by
ERNEST KIRSCHTEN

STANDING by in tolerant amusement as a young man carefully clipped an item from the paper and pasted it into a scrap-book, the late Carlos Hurd, veteran of the Post-Dispatch city room, finally asked:

"Why do you go to all that bother of cutting and pasting? Don't you know that we newspaper people write in water?"

The observation is largely true of all journalism—daily, weekly or monthly. Perforce, a reporter or commentator deals only with a fragment of a situation. Generally events have not yet run their full course, so he hardly can treat them with the roundness of history. And after a battle is lost or won, what value is left in an editorial written in the heat of the fray, influential as it may have been?

These considerations support no argument that journalism is useless, wasted effort. They only back up the late Bernard DeVoto's saying that, in the long run, journalism is "not important, only indispensable." It has a great function, especially in a democracy which depends on informed opinion, even if that function may have been performed by the time the paste dries in the scrapbook.

Yet there are exceptions, pieces which are more than fragments, which sum up a completed story; others which call attention to a pattern that repeats itself over and over; criticisms which open genuine historical or literary insights, or perhaps articles written with a deftness and charm—or it may be sharpness and satire—which give them a life quite independent of that of a transient subject.

THERE are few better sources of such exceptions than "The Easy Chair" in Harper's Magazine, occupied by DeVoto since 1935. In this space he was historian, literary critic, social observer, reporter or crusading editorialist according to need and mood. His death last week makes it all the more appropriate, if sadly so, that some of this work has been given more permanent form.

BERNARD DEVOTO

He wrote only as he was moved, and such writing is bound to be good, sometimes very good. It is saying a lot about the "girl-behind-the dime-store-counter" standard of the magazine industry, not to mention its political orientations, that DeVoto—who cranked out Saturday Evening Post fiction as well as novels and distinguished works on literature and the history of the West—should have found an outlet for this particular writing only in Harper's, or perhaps the Atlantic. There too few guests shared the feast.

It would be pleasant to believe that more will taste the fare now that about 30 of the "Easy Chairs" have been brought into a book. But if that is only a hope, the republication does prove that some journalism is done with ink rather than with water. Instead of going through the business of "objective analysis" of these selections, I admit at once that they make a great book because among them are a few of my special favorites.

One is "Doctors Along the Boardwalk," a superb account of a convention of the American Medical Association. If this were kept in every waiting-room, there would not only be an end to those limp jokes about ancient magazines, but that sacred doctor - patient relationship would become more realistic than it often is.

Another favorite—and a very sensible piece of advice to the American people in October, 1949—is "Due Notice to the FBI," in which DeVoto announced that he would not let investigators push him into the role of informer. If they wanted information, he said, let them show a court order which entitled them to it. Apparently J. Edgar Hoover did not like this piece at all, but his dislike only provided the material for a tart footnote.

THIS is not the perfect collection of DeVoto essays. He left out some good ones. But those who read the assembled items will realize that there is not much point in saying this of the man who wrote them. He had his own ideas. And he was ever ready to spread them about with gusto. But that is not what made it hard to argue with him. Even though he was largely a classroom product, having taught at Northwestern and at Harvard, he was of the type that goes around looking at things, checking up on the scene, letting ideas come up out of facts. He was good on motels, for example, because he had stopped in so many of them in his wanderings in the West. He just did not sit in his Cambridge house where he could easily get away with writing only about what others had written.

Well, all this rushing around may have preserved his respect for most of his fellow-Americans; it may have fortified his faith in democracy, and it may have given him a rough affability, but it may also have worn him out. Which is a good reason to be thankful for this collection: It preserves the wit and wisdom which never came from an easy chair.

Dark Beauty In Novel of Fisher Folk

THE DAY OF THE FOX, by Norman Lewis, (Rinehart & Co., 249 pgs., $3).

STEPHEN SHERWIN

THERE is a dark beauty in this tale of one man's contest with misfortune. All the people in Norman Lewis's novel live under a perpetual cloud of political and personal tensions, but the one person whose life is most harried is Sebastian Costa who, like his neighbors in the little Spanish town of Costa Brava, is a fisherman.

To the townsfolk, Sebastian personifies everything they dislike. Having been Loyalist sympathizers during the Civil War, they could not forgive Sebastian for having fought for Franco and for having been decorated for bravery. With police everywhere, it was impossible for Sebastian to explain that he had been forced to fight and that his decoration was for something he had not actually done.

Thwarted at every turn, shunned by the townspeople, and deserted by his girl, Sebastian eventually reaches an explosive emotional state. What happens in the end is simply appropriate rather than happy or sad.

Mr. Lewis's polished phrases direct one's imagination so that the sea, the town, the people become almost real enough to touch. The only beauty one finds is in nature—the spectacle of marine life and the countryside. But infused in all is a folly which converts an idyllic setting into a trap of passion and ignorant error.

De Gaulle's Own Story

THE CALL TO HONOR: Vol. I of the War Memoirs of General de Gaulle. (Viking Press, 302 pgs., $5.)

Reviewed by
ALEXANDER NIVEN

THIS book is a must for students of European history, especially of the phase covering events before the outbreak of World War II. Gen. Charles de Gaulle was France's unheeded prophet at first, only to become the man who kept France alive through nothing else but obstinate persistency and deep devotion. De Gaulle's memoirs will explain some controversies into which he got with Allied leaders, though many remain unexplained.

Volume I covers the story of France's collapse until the middle of 1942 when the North African landings were being planned. De Gaulle's actions seemed to have been permeated with the idea of "Prestige" and "La Gloire," two abstract symbols for which Frenchmen fought on battlefields against the enemy, and on the home-front against their own allies. This might explain the reason why De Gaulle at times was more than just a controversial figure. Yet, in reading his memoirs, one cannot help but forgive and forget some indiscretions.

His explanations of his motives that prompted his actions, his nostalgic reminders, his description of personalities (Churchill, President Roosevelt, Adm. Darlan, and many others), all these are written in a beautiful style representative of France's aristocratic culture.

De Gaulle's memoirs are an invaluable supplement to the various records published about Europe's history of that time. That these memoirs were published now instead of earlier is their greatest weakness.

Acheson Explains Why He Is a Democrat

A DEMOCRAT LOOKS AT HIS PARTY, by Dean Acheson. (Harper & Brothers, 199 pgs., $3.)

DONALD GRANT

THIS is a frankly partisan book by the former Democratic Secretary of State. It opens with a conversation between Acheson and an unnamed law client who says: "You are intelligent and experienced—and yet you are a Democrat. How can that be?" Acheson gives his answer in this book. It concerns itself chiefly with two subjects—foreign policy and civil liberties.

As a document of American political life it offers a curious testimony. Acheson has a profound quarrel with the conduct of foreign policy by the current Republican Administration, and with the conduct of the "loyalty" program by that same administration. But, as Acheson acknowledges, both the Republican foreign policy and the Republican "loyalty" programs are but continuations of the programs and policies of the Democratic Truman Administration.

Acheson's quarrel with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, therefore, boils down to the way in which Dulles has carried out the Democratic foreign policy. "Policy has coasted on the momentum of past initiative," he complains.

Likewise, his quarrel with Attorney General Herbert Brownell is based on Republican administration of the "loyalty" program begun by the Democrats:

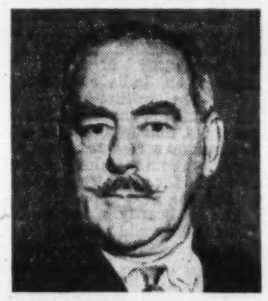
"I WAS an officer of that (Truman) Administration and share with it the responsibility for what I am now convinced was a grave mistake and failure to foresee consequences which were inevitable. That responsibility cannot be escaped or obscured.

"It is true that these measures had strong bipartisan and popular support, indeed insistence, behind them. It is true, also, that the present Republican Administration, and particularly Attorney General Brownell, has continued, defended, and expanded the most harmful aspects of the loyalty program long after their destructive and corrosive consequences were plainly apparent. This does not absolve the Democratic Administration, but it should crowd the mourners' bench."



DEAN ACHESON

Dean Acheson, in this book, is explaining why he is a Democrat—and in effect, urging other Americans to vote Democratic. A voter has the right to ask what the Democratic party would do about the issues Acheson raises. On the issue of civil liberties, Acheson declares:

"Our wish is by no means the only ground for believing that, when the party position is fully expounded and its forces deployed for a national effort, the authentic and historic voice and doctrine of the Democratic party will point the way to sanity and respect for the rights of the citizens. . . . Already the American sense of fair play is awakened. . . . The deeper realization of the full scope of the assault which has taken place on the free intellectual enterprise upon which rests all else that we have and are is still to come."

He believes, that is, that a Democratic Administration would cease the efforts to achieve an impossible kind of security—based on thought control—while not abandoning the attempt to achieve security from actual espionage and sabotage, which is possible.

In the field of foreign policy Acheson has much to say about the errors of the present Administration in the conduct of foreign policy but little specific to offer in the way of recommendation. He finds in Dulles's "instant retaliation" doctrine either a dangerous bluff or a failure to understand that "atomic war has no positive place as an element of policy," and can only be a terrible last resort. He fears that the present Administration is more interested in balancing the budget than in building adequate defenses and supporting our foreign policy.

In the end, his whole argument rests on a belief that the Democratic party possesses a better fund of creativity than the Republican party—and therefore will produce the men who will be able to meet world situations as they arise, on a pragmatic basis.

"IN the Democratic party," he says, "run two strong strands—conservatism and pragmatic experimentation. . . . The effect of (this) combination . . . is nowhere better shown than in the actions taken by the New Deal of President Roosevelt to meet the great depression."

The Republican party, on the other hand, Acheson adds, represents a narrow base in the electorate—the business community—is reluctant to use the powers of government even when indicated, and is hostile to the kind of intelligence necessary for experimentation: "knowledge, perceptiveness, imagination—in other words, brains," toward which the Democratic party is hospitable.

"It is one thing to speak of having 'seized the initiative'," says Acheson, "and quite another to know what to do with it. The stream of ideas, of imaginative thinking, has dried up."

Reflecting Excerpts

TREASURY OF PHILOSOPHY, Edited by Dagobert Runes. (Philosophical Library, $15.)

THIS book, with its 1280 pages, is so thick it is almost a cube. It consists of excerpts from the writings of 379 reflective men, prefaced by a brief biographical sketch of each.

No attempt has been made to arrange the selections by topics — "Why Nymphs, Sylphs, Etc., Exist" follows "The Rights of Man" only because Paracelsus, alphabetized, comes after Thomas Paine. Add to this the fact that the selections average three pages in length and it becomes clear that the reader stands little danger of getting an overdose of systematic philosophy. But he may enjoy a number of pleasant evenings, enlivened by the sweep in time and culture of the thoughts gathered between these covers.

A BRILLIANTLY REASONED AND INSPIRING VIEW OF AMERICA'S OPPORTUNITIES IN A WORLD OF REVOLUTION

Chester Bowles

THE NEW DIMENSIONS OF PEACE

Look at today's papers. One thing is clear. As Communist tactics become more flexible, tactful, urbane, astute, we need more than ever to re-examine our own goals and program. And in THE NEW DIMENSIONS OF PEACE, Chester Bowles shows us the way.

Based on Chester Bowles' intensive participation in world affairs and up-to-the-minute, first-hand observations, THE NEW DIMENSIONS OF PEACE is at once realistic and heartening. For it makes plain that the facts require America's role to be a glorious one, in keeping with our heritage and historic mission.

MRS. KYRA SHIRK

WOMAN FLUNKS $100,000 TV QUIZ, BUT GETS $25,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Kyra Petrovskaya Shirk, who was a World War II lieutenant in the Soviet infantry, tonight failed to win the $100,000 jackpot of the "big surprise" television quiz show.

She was allowed to keep $25,000 of $50,000 she won last week as a consultation prize.

Mrs. Shirk, who was married to an American in Russia and now lives on a farm near York, Pa., was asked a complicated six-part question dealing with the battle of the bulge and the Coral sea in World War II. She answered only four parts correctly.

The questions were prepared for the NBC-TV show by Adm. Chester Nimitz, ret., and by Great Britain's field marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery.

ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY TO STUDY EAST SIDE LABOR, INDUSTRY

A $3000 grant for a study of the relationship between labor-management conditions in East St. Louis and the location of new industry there has been awarded to the University of Illinois Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations by Mayor Alvin G. Fields's labor relations committee.

The institute will be directed to study attitudes of employers and union officials toward each other; the degree of labor-management harmony and friction; effectiveness of contract negotiations and grievances, and comparisons of unionization, industrial disputes, wages and fringe benefits in the city with other industrial communities surveyed by the United States Department of Labor. An attempt will be made to provide a report to the committee within a year.

Milton Derber, co-ordinator of research for the institute, will direct the survey, which is sponsored jointly by the city, Chamber of Commerce and the AFL Central Trades and Labor Union, and is indorsed by the East St. Louis Industrial Union Council.

parade goes to Russia!

Do the Russian people like Americans? How popular are their leaders? Will religion survive? How good are Russian TV sets?

A PARADE magazine editor and photographer have just returned from a 7,000-mile visit inside Russia. Their eye-witness view of the U.S.S.R. in this year of the lukewarm cold war provides answers to these and many more questions about life in Russia today.

A 40-page issue of PARADE—filled with many colorful and unusual photographs—and devoted entirely to a firsthand report of Russia, will be a part of next Sunday's Post-Dispatch.

Winston Churchill in Retirement

By George W. Herald

Sir Winston Churchill will be 81 on November 30. What's become of England's beloved grand old man since his retirement from political life less than a year ago? How does he live and what does he do?

American foreign correspondent George W. Herald answers these and dozens of other questions in a series of three articles beginning next Sunday in the EVERYDAY MAGAZINE.

In this highly informal and entertaining series you'll learn how Churchill always eats breakfast alone; how he appeared in bright red pajamas for a party; how he became a millionaire after reaching 70; how his paintings signed by an assumed name are being bought on their own merit; how he stopped smoking cigars and turned to cigarettes.

Be sure to read "Winston Churchill in Retirement" beginning next Sunday in the EVERYDAY MAGAZINE of the Post-Dispatch.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

CREDIT SQUEEZE

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP).

UNCLE SAM cracked down hard this week on inflationary aspects of the boom. The crackdown — a new and tighter Government squeeze on credit — found most lines of business surging ahead at breakneck speed. Primary aim of the new Government move: to make it harder for consumers to go into hock, and more expensive for business men to borrow money.

Here's how the Government did it:

Federal Reserve banks hiked the interest rate that commercial banks must pay on the huge sums they borrow from the Federal Reserve System. The new rate—2½ per cent—is the highest since 1934.

This means that your neighborhood bank may have to pay more for the money it borrows, and will probably charge higher interest on the money it loans out. Speculators in everything from used cars and fire-damaged merchandise to stocks, bonds and real estate will find working capital harder to come by; consumers may pay higher rates on home mortgages and auto loans. (This week General Motors Acceptance Corp., world's largest auto-financing firm, raised its interest charges.)

Business Spurt.

Coming at this time, the credit clampdown pointed up the amazing resurgence in business sentiment since the Sept. 26 stock market slump that followed the first news of President Eisenhower's illness. According to many economists, business in the last few weeks has spurted ahead so fast that dangerous runaway tendencies have developed.

At the start of this week, the stock market buoyantly thrust to within striking distance of the all-time peak it had reached just before the President's heart attack. (At week's end, the market declined moderately on news of the Federal Reserve's higher rediscount rate.)

Total business activity, after hitting a record annual pace of $391,500,000,000 in the third quarter, gained added momentum this month.

Store sales forged ahead. Department store business at latest count was a hefty 9 per cent ahead of the year-ago rate. Dun & Bradstreet said total November retail trade would come to $15,500,000,000, a new high for that month.

Steel and Auto Production.

The steel and automobile industries, working overtime, were straining to the hilt. Steel output (estimated this week at nearly 99 per cent of capacity) fell short of booming demand. The automobile industry rolled out its 7,000,000th car of 1955. That compares with a total production of less than 6,700,000 cars for all 12 months of 1950, up to now the record-breaker.

Booming exports were reported by United States business leaders attending the annual meeting of the National Foreign Trade Council.

Meanwhile, the upsurge in production, sales and business over-all had inflationary side effects. First, there was the danger that consumers—buying on-the-cuff as never before—might get so deeply in hock that they'd have to quit buying many consumer goods until their debts got paid off.

Prices Press Upward.

The boom also generated an upward pressure on prices. Steel scrap—vitally important to steelmaking—went up in price this week. Prices were headed higher at the consumer level, too. Sears, Roebuck & Co. said its spring catalog, out in Jauuary, would show price increases averaging 2 per cent. Nash-Kelvinator announced a round of price boosts on its 1956 home appliance line; Alexander Smith raised prices of its rugs and carpets 3 per cent, effective Dec. 1. Trade sources said prices of home heating oil would soon go up in the eastern part of the country.

A third troublesome aspect of the boom was the continuing shortage of raw materials. Publishers' stocks of newsprint (the paper you're reading from now) have fallen to their lowest level in 22 years as consumption of the material pushes to a record high. The pinch in steel showed no signs of easing. The Iron Age, national metalworking weekly, said the scramble for hard-to-get steel "has developed into a grim life-and-death struggle for many consumers. Lack of steel is imposing a limit on what many companies can produce. . . . For them and others, steel procurement is the worst nightmare since the Korean War."

F. R. Influence on Credit.

That was the background for the Federal Reserve banks' decision to hike the rediscount rate this week. By raising or lowering the rediscount rate, and by buying or selling United States Government securities in the open market, the Federal Reserve can exercise a potent influence on the availability of credit.

This week's move came as a surprise to many business men who had thought the brakes on credit had already been pulled tight enough. Others apparently felt such action was badly needed. In a speech to the Grocery Manufacturers of America, Chairman Howard C. Sheperd of the First National City Bank said the boom must either slow down or "drift into inflation and a cycle of boom and bust." Said Sheperd: "The boom cannot continue at the pace set this year."

Briefly over the business scene:

WHEAT FIRM, CORN LOWER ON THE WEEK

Bread Cereal Supplies Decrease — Feed Grain Receipts Increase.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19 (AP)—Grains ended mixed with declines outnumbering gains on the Board of Trade this week. Wheat and rye firmed. The rest of the grain list ended with losses. Lard was mixed. Trading continued at the quiet pace which has characterized it for at least several weeks.

Wheat closed ⅞@2⅛c higher, corn¤ ¼ to 1 cent lower, oats unchanged to 1¼c lower, rye 1¼@3¼c higher, soybeans unchanged to 2¾c lower and lard 50 cents lower to 17 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Wheat had quite a firm tone throughout the period. One big help was a decrease in the supply at Chicago on Monday, followed by reports of additional movement of the grain from Chicago during the week.

Yugoslavia and Norway were among buyers of cash wheat. A potentially firming influence was completion of agreements to ship wheat to Israel and Brazil, payment to be made in foreign currencies. Negotiations on a similar plan will soon start with Indonesia.

Parts of the southwestern winter wheat belt received light snow and rain during the period but not the good, heavy snow which is wanted to improve top soil conditions.

Corn got off to a poor start on Monday when cash corn receipts totaled 1,995,000 bushels. Arrival by box car amounted to 842 cars, largest for any day since Nov. 8, 1948.

STOCK MARKET TAKES RISE IN DISCOUNT RATE CALMLY

Action of List on News of New Anti-Inflation Move of Federal Reserve Is Interpreted as Show of Basic Strength.

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP)—The stock market made a try for a new high this week, but it failed and fell back. The assault was led by the blue chip stocks, the shares of America's greatest corporations. High tide of the drive was reached in midweek. But by that time the market already was hesitating and displaying all of the signs of indecision. The turn down came on the final two days of the week.

The big block to higher and still higher prices was a new anti-inflation move by the Federal Reserve Board in Washington. It authorized Federal Reserve banks to raise their discount rates to 2½ per cent from 2¼ per cent.

It was the fourth boost this year and the highest rate charged for loans to commercial banks by the reserve banks in 21 years.

Brokers Loan Rate Up.

When the commercial banks have to pay more for the money they borrow from the central bank, they usually charge their own customers more. For example, two large New York banks boosted their interest rates, effective Monday, on money borrowed by brokers for use in securities markets.

Higher interest rates make money harder to get. Loans for nonessential things are discouraged. Stock market speculation on credit is more costly. The destructive edge of inflation is blunted.

The last time the discount rate was raised early in August, the stock market fell off in one of the sharpest tumbles of the year up to that time.

But this time the market (on Friday) took the whole thing with a great deal of calm. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks Friday lost 80 cents and closed at $179. In the reaction on the August discount raise, the average dropped $2.40.

Average Up on Week.

At $179, the average is $2.50 under the record high established Sept. 23 before the great drop on news of the President's illness.

For the week as a whole, the average was higher. Monday's market surged ahead in one of the best advances of the year. Buying enthusiasm was fed by higher dividends, fat profits, and stock splits either announced or contemplated.

Tuesday and Wednesday found a great deal of hesitation and profit-taking, although prices both days were thoroughly mixed, the average was up a little both days. The turndown came on the last two days of the week.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was 6.37 points higher for the week at 482.91. The 20 rails gained .45 of a point at 160.05 and the 15 utilities rose .21 to 64.89).

Trade Volume Increase.

Volume for the week, 12,430,157 shares, was well over the 9,351,390 traded in the preceding period. Of the 1419 issues traded, 648 were higher, 599 lower and 172 unchanged.

The way the market acted on news of the new anti-inflation move of the Federal Reserve was interpreted by brokers as a show of basic strength sufficient to maintain prices despite such pressure.

Does that mean the way has been clear for the start of a robust year-end rally? Ask the same question in any brokers' boardroom, and you will get an argument.

The five most active issues this week on the American Stock Exchange were U. S. Foil "B" up 7¼ at 43⅛ on 128,300 shares; Pennroad off ¾ at 15⅛; Ford Motor Ltd. up 5-16 at 6¾; General Stores up ½ at 1½, and Eastern Gas up 1 at 14⅞.

The five most active issues this week on the New York Stock Exchange were General Motors up 1⅜ at 50¾ on 507,200 shares; Chrysler up 4¼ at 97¾; Montgomery Ward up 3 at 102; Sears Roebuck "when issued" unchanged at 38⅞, and Rhodesian Selection Trust up ½ at 6⅛.

Celebrities and the Volkswagen Lampooned in 'Financial Follies'

New York Writers' Show Pokes Fun at Auto Big 3, Truman, Dulles and the Kremlin.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP)—Big names in government, industry and finance were raked over the coals last night at the annual "Financial Follies" musical show presented by the New York Financial Writers Association.

The show was staged before an audience of 1500 in the grand ballroom of the Sheraton Astor Hotel. Those who saw themselves lampooned apparently enjoyed it.

Targets of the financial writers' barbs included Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange; Thomas J. Watson Jr., president of International Business Machines Corp.; former President Harry Truman; Walter Reuther, president of the CIO, and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

One lustily applauded skit showed three automobile tycoons — General Motors President Harlow Curtice, Chrysler President L. L. (Tex) Colbert, and Henry Ford II—bemoaning competition of Germany's beetle-shaped Volkswagen automobile.

The curtain rose on the interior of a Volkswagen factory. Germans in tyrolean costumes worked on a hand-operated "mass production line" while chanting this version of the familiar "Schnitzelbank" ditty:

"Ist das nicht ein steering wheel?
"Ja, das ist ein steering wheel.
"Ist das nicht die brakes that squeal?
"Ja, das ist die brakes that squeal.
"Steering wheel, brakes that squeal,
"Ach, du schoene, du schoene Volkswagen."

Terrified, the three American auto moguls look to Washington for help. They sing:

"Ho! Ho! Ha! Ha! To Washington we'll go.
"We're in a fix, but we've got tricks to solve our woe—
"On British bikes, you know, and watches from the Swiss
"We raised the tariff half again—why not—on Fritz?
"High cost parts would check this schnitzel stuff
"And make the sales of Herr Volkswagen mighty tough."

A scene in Moscow's Kremlin finds Khrushchev, Molotov and Bulganin welcoming home a delegation of Soviet farmers. Molotov asks: "What is the condition of capitalist slaves in American farmin,; district?" The delegates sing:

"Oh, you took us from Odessa, from Odessa far away
"And you sent us to America —the state of I-o-way.
"Where the farmers raise a lot of corn and also pigs and cows
"While the women ride in Cadillacs, instead of pulling plows."

Broadway producer Bruce Evans directed the show with an all-amateur cast. Jack R. Ryan of the New York Times is president of the New York Financial Writers Association.

AT AUCTION
The Sleepy Hollow Motel Abilene, Kans.

Monday, Nov. 28, 2:30 p.m.

This is a well located motel of 13 modern units plus a two-bedroom residence. 7 units are heated by natural gas vented heaters and 6 units by a natural gas forced air central unit, and the motel is served by all city facilities. The grounds have 350 feet frontage on U.S. 40. A large neon front sign and easy entrance invite the guest into this popular motel. Abilene, Kans., is the birthplace of Dwight D. Eisenhower and has the Eisenhower Memorial Building containing countless souvenirs, medal and war decorations received by the President during his army service. The National Greyhound Coursing Meet is held here every year, bringing hounds from all over the nation.

Invitation to Contemporary Living

HARWOOD HILLS

CONTEMPORARY DESIGN — in the natural setting

OUR DISPLAY HOMES NOW OPEN FOR YOUR INSPECTION—10 A.M. TO 9 P.M. DAILY

Burton W. Duenke, nationally recognized builder of homes designed to the specifications of today's indoor-outdoor living, takes pride in introducing Harwood Hills.

Harwood Hills has been designed to answer every need and wish of the modern family—with an emphasis on spacious informality, carefree convenience, and multi-use areas that lend themselves to every facet of the contemporary pattern of living.

Each home, set on a large lot, is designed to complement the natural setting. The result is a unity of structural line with the unspoiled endowments of nature.

Harwood Hills is in St. Louis County, just west of Lindbergh, and just north of St. Clement's School and Church. St. Louis and the shopping areas of Kirkwood, Clayton and Manchester are minutes away. Most schools and churches are a few minutes walking or driving distance. Swimming and golf privileges are available at Crystal Lake Country Club, one mile away.

How to get to HARWOOD HILLS

Drive on Lindbergh to Clayton Road. Turn west on Clayton Road 1½ miles to Bopp Road. Turn south on Bopp Road, 1¾ miles to Harwood Hills.

HARWOOD HILLS HOMES INCLUDE THESE FEATURES:

- Two and three gleaming tile baths with indirect lighting.
- Four ft. built-in vanities in bath.
- Three, four and five spacious bedrooms.
- Cove lighting for soft, dramatic beauty.
- Sloped ceilings and extensive use of glass for spacious indoor-outdoor feeling.
- Large utility room for slab houses.

NATURAL GAS A "NATURAL" CHOICE FOR HARWOOD HILLS

Every Harwood Hills Home includes:

- A beautiful, completely automatic All-Gas Kitchen, with a built-in oven and broiler, and with counter-top units in the working area.
- Clean, compact, convenient gas heat—the last word for comfort.
- Famous, abundant, gas water heating for hot water day and night.
- Harwood Hills display homes feature the Servel Gas Refrigerator—a modern gas servant that turns out miracle "ice circles" automatically.

Terminal Promotion UnderWay

With operation of the city's new Air Terminal at Lambert-St. Louis Field expected to begin about Jan. 1, Conway B. Briscoe, chairman of the Airport Commission, reported yesterday that the commission has begun the leasing of advertising display spaces, primarily in the main hall of the building.

Lynch, Hart & Stockton Advertising Co. has been appointed to assist the Airport Commission in the allocation of display space at the new terminal, which is expected to attract more than 7,000,000 passengers and visitors annually.

Among unusual features of the new terminal building, there is to be a rotating display of the famous Lindbergh memorial trophies, together with aviation exhibits of historical interest.

Spectator Observation.

From the building's large, enclosed spectator deck, facilities will be made available to the public to hear instructions to aircraft from the control tower. From the same observation deck spectators will be able to see the Navy's carrier-type arresting hooks and crash nets for jet aircraft, safety devices used in cases of emergency.

A nursery will be operated in the new terminal building as an aid to passengers traveling with infants. Other facilities will include dining room, barber shop, escalator service between the main passenger level and the new indoor baggage area, and an amusement area. Plans are under way for the opening of a cocktail lounge.

Historical Center.

The building is completely air-conditioned. Striking contemporary design of the new terminal building, plus the many advanced service features, has attracted national attention. St. Louis is recognized as the center of early American aviation.

A spokesman from the airport commission said that advertising display space would be limited, and that all exhibits would be of high quality and in keeping with the dignity of the multi-million dollar terminal. Displays all are to be of animation type, using three dimensions, color and motion.

Companies with headquarters in St. Louis are being given first choice of space.

Building Under Construction for R-2 Schools

This is a sketch from Architect Charles W. Lorenz of one of two schools he has designed and which are now under construction for School District R-2 in the Ferguson-Florissant area, with financing in large part from the U.S. government to relieve overcrowding due to influx of population associated with the national defense program. H. J. Cross is general contractor.

R-2 Building 23 Rooms of New Schools

School District R-2 of the Florissant-Ferguson area has undertaken construction of two new elementary schools with 23 classrooms to relieve overcrowding in the district. Financing has been arranged through the Federal Government's assistance program to areas affected by population influx due to the national defense program.

The schools, one to be erected on the site of the present Griffith school, Chambers road and Day drive, Ferguson, the other at Florissant road and Highway 66, have been designed by Architect Charles W. Lorenz, with Leslie J. Bergmeier as structural engineer and Harry F. Wilson as mechanical engineer. H. J. Cross has the general contracts. Total cost of the structures will be $536,700, of which the Federal Government is contributing $429,290. This is a cost of $11.20 a square foot, or 79 cents a cubic foot.

The building at Chambers and Day is to be a two-level structure, with 12 classrooms. Construction will include fireproof steel frame, brick and masonry walls, reinforced concrete floors covered with asphalt tile, plaster interior finish, acoustical-tiled ceilings, glazed tile wainscots in corridors, kitchen and toilets. Toilets will have ceramic tiled floors. Windows will be in aluminum and all rooms are to have equipment for sound-movie projection and TV circuits.

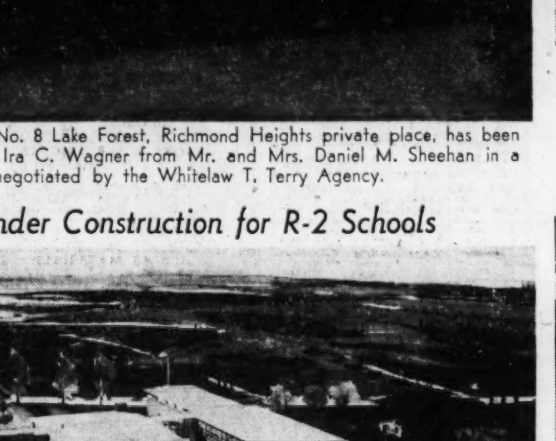
The multiple purpose room will be spanned by laminated wood beams and a striated wood panel ceiling finish. There will be a maple stage floor and the whole room will be equipped with folding tables and chairs so the place may be used as a cafeteria.

Heat will be by thermostatically controlled steam in the two-story structure and by copper-tube radiant floor slab in a one-story primary wing. There also will be an incinerator.

Provided in the building will be, in addition to the classrooms and the multiple-purpose area, an office, vault, teachers' room, nurse's room, book storage room, kitchen, other facilities. The one-story primary wing, to house kindergarten and two first grades, will have its own properly sized sanitary facilities, a covered play area, and will be connected to the main building with a glassed-in bridge.

The second building, at Florissant road and Highway 66, will be similar to the first in construction, will contain 11 classrooms, kindergarten,

Flags Up on East Side Job



Hoisting American flag and general contractor's jack over 80-foot tower for Millstadt Milling Co. is Erwin Geaschel, a workman for Vollmar Bros. Construction Co., St. Louis. The over $300,000 project going up in Millstadt, Ill., will house processing and packaging machinery for the Golden Dipt division of the Meletio Co., and will be completed about Jan. 1.

Subdivision In O'Fallon Being Opened

Formal opening has been planned at O'Fallon, in St. Charles county, today of a new subdivision of 52 acres called "Country Life Acres." It is a project of a St. Louis county organization called R.D.B., Inc., with promotion by the Burch Real Estate Co. of St. Louis county.

Faced with the high cost of ground in St. Louis county and the continuing spread of the St. Louis metropolitan area, the developers went to a point above the Missouri river where the town provides water and sanitary and storm water sewer service connections.

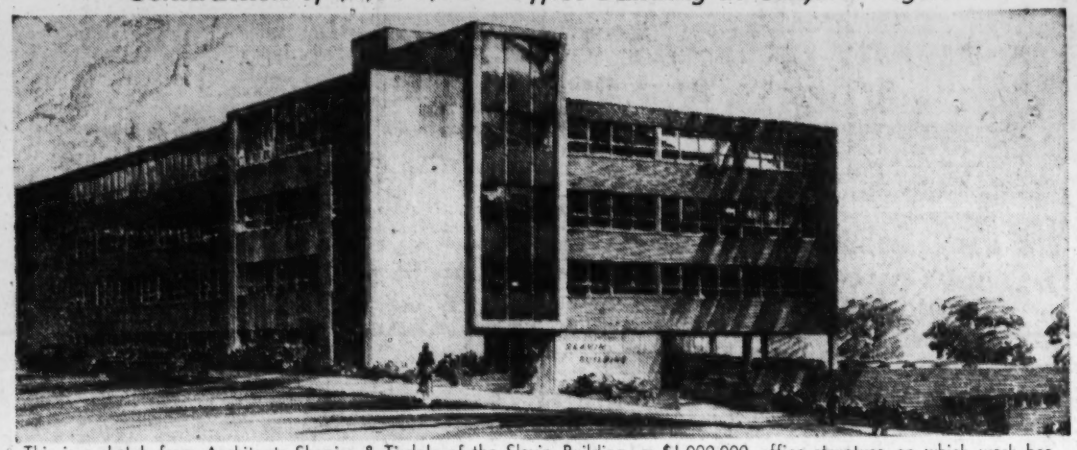
New concrete streets are being built in the tract, which was acquired from Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Rice. The ground lies inside the city limits, at its eastern boundary.

Developers said their program was about a two-year project and would include a shopping center, together with medium priced homes in brick and frame construction.

Two Motels Sold By Their Owners

Two motels, one in Illinois and one in Missouri, have been sold for Michael and Louise Rampani by the Business Sales Agency of St. Louis. One of the motels, the AAA Flora Motel at Illinois Highways 50 and 45, was sold for $86,500 to Mr. and Mrs. Sherman W. Bowen III of St. Louis county. The property has 19 air-conditioned guest units and a five-room ranch house. The Rampanis took the Bowen home in St. Louis county in trade, the agent said. The St. Clair Motel on Highway 66 near St. Clair, Mo., was traded by the Rampanis for a residence property in St. Clair, the agency said.

Construction of $1,000,000 Office Building in Clayton Begun



This is a sketch from Architects Shapiro & Tisdale of the Slavin Building, a $1,000,000 office structure on which work has been started on a 190 by 160-foot lot at the southwest corner of Bonhomme and Meramec in Clayton by the Slavin Development Co. The building will have 40,000 square feet of space with zone-controlled heat and air-conditioning; water, gas and power in each office unit. Otto E. Heinicke is structural engineer, Will A. Rosene and the Al Rich Co., consulting engineers. Parking facilities will be arranged for 115 cars, with some enclosed garage space; weather canopy from parking lot to building entrance. Completion next spring is anticipated.

New Suburban Men's Store Set to Open Tomorrow

On the south side of Forsyth boulevard in the Glick building opposite Famous-Barr's Clayton store, this new Richman Brothers store is ready to be opened to the public tomorrow.

Flags Flying On East Side Building Job

The Stars and Stripes and the Vollmar Bros. jack are flying some 80 feet above the streets of Millstadt, Ill., as the structural steel work on a $300,000 addition to the Millstadt Milling Co. nears completion.

Already the tallest building in the little town (seven miles south of Belleville), the 25' by 22' tower will house processing and packaging machinery to enable the company to ship its "Golden Dipt" products direct from Millstadt. Some processing and the entire packaging operation were formerly done in St. Louis proper by the Meletio Co. That company is headed by the Meletio brothers, G. William Meletio, board chairman, and John H. Meletio, president.

The new addition is expected to pay for itself in jig time, according to Harvey Baltz, plant manager, due to savings in freight rates from Millstadt (being on the east side of the river) instead of St. Louis. All financing is being done by the Meletio Co.

Blending equipment is already in place on the top floor. From there, the product will be channeled to the next lower level into huge hoppers, now nearly completed. A frame structure is being constructed at the second floor level, adjacent to the steel addition, which will house sifting equipment. Blowers will be installed on concrete foundations poured on the ground floor.

The entire building will soon be encased in corrugated metal siding, completely insulated.

A spokesman for Vollmar Bros. Construction Co., general contractor, stated that the building would be in operation about Jan. 1. Russell, Mullgardt, Schwarz and Van Hoefen were architects for the project.

Steel Firm Buys Tract

The Crucible Steel Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., has purchased a tract of 160,000 square feet on Page avenue at the Terminal Railroad tracks, the Glick Real Estate Co., Inc., reports, for erection of a big modern warehouse and office for the St. Louis branch operation.

The company's present branch office and warehouse, 1021-29 Chouteau avenue, was sold by Glick to Abraham Schwartz, an investor, in connection with Crucible's purchase of the larger site, farther from the congestion of downtown traffic.

K. C. Kelly is Crucible's branch manager here.

Management Meet

The November meeting of the St. Louis Chapter of the Institute of Real Estate Management is to be held at Medart's Tudor room tomorrow night V. C. McKenzie, secretary, reports.

Men's Store Set to Open In Clayton

The Richman Brothers Co., clothes makers since 1879, will open their ninety-second maker-to-wearer store for men and boys tomorrow in the new Glick Building at 7430 Forsyth boulevard in Clayton, directly opposite Famous-Barr. It will be Richman's second store in this area. The other is at 624 Washington, corner of Seventh street, in downtown St. Louis.

Mr. Plankenhorn

Manager of the store will be J. H. Plankenhorn, long associated with the men's and boy's wear business, at Richman's and other leading men's wear stores. He is married, father of two sons and will make his home here with his wife and family.

The Richman Brothers Co. was established in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1879, and, in addition to the Forsyth boulevard store, operates 91 stores from Boston to Los Angeles and a tailoring plant in Cleveland employing 2000 workers. It is generally recognized as having been among the first in the United States to make its own clothes and sell them direct to the public through its own stores.

The new Clayton store has about 6000 square feet of floor area at two levels, one with entrance from Forsyth, the other from a rear parking lot. Other stores already opened in the new Glick building include Baker's shoe store, Neisner's, Lerner's, Jacob Mange & Sons, Haas Shoe Co.

Sturdy Estates Being Opened on Old Watson Today

Formal opening of a subdivision called Sturdy Estates has been arranged for today.

The subdivision is in Crestwood, Highway 66 and Old Watson road. It is a project of the Ralph E. Romine Building Co.

A display house has been erected and is furnished for the opening.

Homes of frame with brick and stone trim, and with fireplaces, are being erected in three- and four-bedroom sizes, with two baths. Oil heat is being used and electric kitchens.

Power Use Is Up 500 Per Cent

"An estimated 500 per cent growth in electrical load requirements for commercial buildings has occurred in recent years," H. R. Wallrath, manager of the contractor and construction industries sales of the General Electric Co., Schenectady, N. Y., said here last week in a session of a General Electric Company seminar on commercial building power distribution.

Speaking before 105 architects and engineers gathered at the Sheraton Hotel, Wallrath emphasized that the only solution to this condition is an adequate and flexible power distribution system designed to meet the needs of modern electrical loads caused by air conditioning, high lighting levels, ventilation, and many others. He added that most buildings with 20-year-old power distribution systems are already electrically obsolescent and should be replaced.

"This amazing growth is far from finished," Wallrath said. "Even today, power distribution designers must anticipate an electrical load forecast in 1980 of at least twice the demand of today. "If our engineers do not plan efficient, expandable, high-capacity systems, today's new commercial buildings will be considered inadequate in a few short years," he said.

The General Electric visitor pointed out that in view of this phenomenal growth of electrical load requirements and the resultant critical need for better-than-adequate distribution systems, a new program—devoted to the creation of more efficient system designs and components has been inaugurated.

The commercial building power distribution seminar is scheduled to be presented to architects and engineers throughout the nation in the near future. In addition to the formal presentation, G.E. engineers plan to offer actual help and information to architects, building designers, and contractors who are planning modernization of power distribution facilities, the seminar was told.

Clothing Firm Moves Down to Street Level

Simpson Clothes, operated by Paul Deschamps, has been moved down to a street level store at 827 Locust street after operating for 29 years on the second floor, the last 23 years at 211 North Seventh street.

The new store has 2500 square feet of space, has been renovated and remodeled for the new tenant. Leasing was arranged through Maginn-Martin-Salisbury, Inc., from the Trust Department of the Mercantile Trust Co., which administers the property.

Officers Elected

WASHINGTON, D.C.—John H. Stewart, Canton, O., Ohio clay products manufacturer, was elected president of the Structural Clay Products Institute for 1955-56 at the S.C.P.I. convention in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., last week. Stewart is president of Stark Ceramics, Inc. New vice president is Kenneth W. Dunwody, who heads the Cherokee Brick and Tile Company, Macon, Ga.

George Gammie, vice president and sales manager of the Illinois Brick Company, Chicago, was re-elected S.C.P.I. treasurer.

Package Liquor Retailing Upgraded to Supermarket Self-Service

This is the first of a series of all-new self-service package liquor retailing outlets planned in the city by the People's-905 Liquor chain. It was opened last week at 1114 South Brentwood boulevard. Ground for it was acquired through the Dubinsky Real Estate Co. The Daniel Levy Construction Co. was builder, with Mike's Cabinet Shop doing the interior fixtures, which include built-in-the-wall refrigeration display units for dispensing chilled beverages. Shoppers use wheeled carts, pass through checkout stand as in food stores. Another such store is being prepared at 1020 South Kirkwood road for opening about mid-December, and more will follow as the newly styled units replace catch-as-catch-can establishments set up earlier in abandoned filling stations and other spots as drive-in trade began to develop.

Work Progressing on 60,000 Square-Foot Addition to Southern Equipment Company Plant

This is a sketch from architects Gerhardt Kramer and Joe G. Harms, of the Southern Equipment Company's new plant at 4550 Gustine avenue, showing addition on which work was begun recently by the Stocker Construction Company, general contractors. Approximately 60,000 square feet of floor space is being added to the original 127,000-square foot building. Steel is now going up. Of this added total, 50,000 square feet will be used as warehouse area and 10,000 square feet for office and showroom space. The Southern Equipment Co. manufactures custom-built preparation and serving equipment for commercial and institutional kitchens and cafeterias. This addition, as well as the renovating being done in the existing building will be ready for use in early spring. Engineering work was done by Otto E. Heinicke & Co., structural; Wm. A. Belt, mechanical; Van & Virse, electrical.

Progress in Pre-Frabricating

A workman installing one side of a new style door frame, which serves as trim as well, in new home in Burton Duenke's Harwood Hills subdivision. Made from a single piece of two by six-inch redwood stock, the frame is milled on front side as any standard wood door frame, is routed on back side to fit snuggly against both sides of wall. Broad, flat metal springs of engineered strength on the back, controlled by screws in countersunk metal collars on the face of the piece, make it possible to adjust frame position to prevent door from sticking or binding when it expands or contracts due to temperature or moisture changes. It is one of the newest construction developments in the pre-fabrication of homes, saves much time at job site.

Parker Road Subdivision Opens Today

Formal opening has been set for today of a new 20-acre subdivision on the north side of Parker road east of New Halls Ferry road in North St. Louis county. The tract has been named "Marietta."

New streets being cut through the tract are, like the subdivision itself, being named for girls. There are to be Renee drive, Nanette drive and Denise drive. Renee has been built and work on the others will follow.

The project is being promoted by the Schaefer Realty Co. of Ferguson with Richard J. O'Brien, who acquired the ground from Edward Jostman, doing the building. Two and three-bedroom homes, in brick, are being built.

O'Brien, who has been active the last eight years in the building field, has erected homes in Pembroke, Ferguson; in Normandy and Jennings.

Subdivision In Des Peres Being Opened

Formal opening has been planned for today of a new subdivision in Des Peres called Harwood Hills. It is on the east side of Bopp road south of Crystal Lake Country Club and immediately north of the new St. Clement Catholic school and parish property. The subdivision is a project of the Burton W. Duenke Building Co., with Duenke's Suburban Realty Co. handling promotion of the project and with the Bank of St. Louis handling financing and sales.

Ralph Fournier is consulting architect and interiors of display homes have been arranged by Virginia Duenke.

Homes being erected in the tract are of factory fabrication at Duenke's Modular Homes plant on Barrett Station and Dougherty Ferry roads in St. Louis county. The styling is contemporary, in concrete, redwood and stone, with lots of glass.

The rolling terrain of the area provides for orientation on as many as five different levels and many of the homes are two-level styles with picture-window vistas possible at both levels. Some houses are big, with as much as 3000 square feet of floor area. All are over 1000 square feet in area.

Innovations include a new style of window and door framing in which frame and trim are all one piece of redwood, a unique development in factory fabricating new to the whole industry.

There are some 100 acres or more in the tract, which is in the Two-Mile Creek and Kirkwood Sewage districts.

SPRAY HEAD CHANGES

One of the distinctive innovations in shower heads is the type that provides almost any kind of a stream, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau. By a mere turn of a lever, the bather can change from a fine, stimulating, needle spray to a coarse, drenching shower.

Look for quality, durability, and adequate size in buying metal prefabricated shower cabinets.

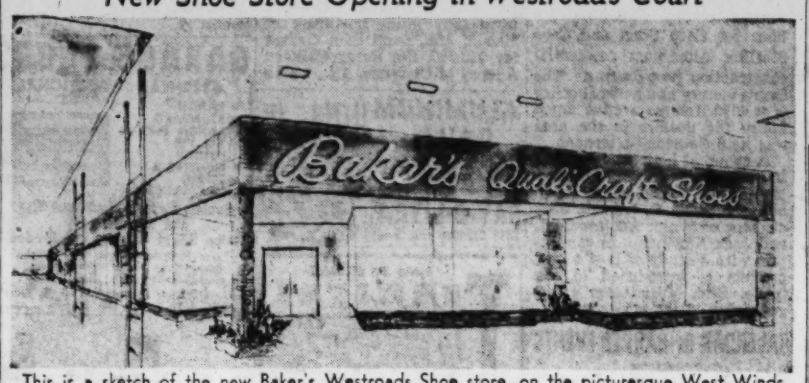
Realty Firm Moves

The Carl Gallop Co. has moved its office from smaller space at 826 Chestnut street to room 310 of the International Office building, 722 Chestnut street. The firm has been in business 18 years, does general brokerage, handles insurance and loans.

New Shoe Store Opening in Westroads Court



This is a sketch of the new Baker's Westroads Shoe store, on the picturesque West Winds Court Garden of Stix, Baer & Fuller's Westroads Shopping Center, Clayton road and Brentwood boulevard. The facade is of red Roman brick, warm buff Tennessee stone and plate glass.

Baker's New Westroads Unit to Open

The fourth Baker's Shoe Store in the St. Louis area is to have its grand opening next Friday and Saturday in Stix, Baer and Fuller's Westroads Shopping Center at Clayton road and Brentwood boulevard, Richmond Heights. A division of Edison Brothers Stores, Inc., of St. Louis, the nation's largest exclusive retailer of women's shoes, Baker's is an outlet for shoes of high fashion styling.

The opening of Baker's Westroads will complete the 1955 expansion plans reported earlier this year by Harry Edison, president of Edison Brothers Stores, Inc. Baker's other suburban stores opened this year, are in Northland, Jennings, and in the Forsyth Shopping Center, opposite Famous-Barr, Clayton. These are in addition to the original Baker's Shoe Store here at Seventh and St. Charles in downtown St. Louis.

Overlooks Court.

A combination of red roman brick and warm buff Tennessee stone forms framework for the new store. One side, which is almost completely glass, overlooks West Winds Court garden, which is provided with benches and has a small pool spanned by a picturesque bridge. Colorful wind gongs which chime in the breeze enhance the atmosphere.

Over the east entrance of the store, facing Stix, Baer and Fuller, the Baker's sign is in white plastic with white neon tubing. The west entrance, facing the parking lot, has the sign in white porcelain enamel with facings of turquoise neon tubing.

The interior of the main shoe salon is carpeted in yellow, brown and white tweed. The main walls of pale turquoise contrast with beige wallpaper, dotted with a butterfly design. Draperies, in fibre glass casement cloth, have a beige ground with scattered squares of gold, white and turquoise. Chairs are all yellow, white or black, and are arranged in individual color groups. The one accent group has cane backs.

Light at Floor.

A wall of black plastic with turquoise metallic thread strikes a contemporary note near the handbag and hosiery department. Arranged over the display counter are groups of modern lamps in pewter and shell.

The store has air conditioning. Direct and indirect lighting, using both fluorescent and incandescent systems, provides sufficient light at floor level without glare.

Large stock facilities adjoin the sales area. Parking facilities are provided on the large lot surrounding the shopping center.

In connection with the opening, Edison said, "we hope to make shopping at Baker's more convenient for many of our friends living in St. Louis County. We know they'll be delighted with the beauty and comfort of the new store, and with the selection of styles."

Contractor for the store was Millstone Construction Co. Fixtures are by St. Louis Fixture Co. The architectural design and interior decorating were done by Edison Brothers Stores' architectural department.

CORRECTION!
ALSCO, the world's largest manufacturer of aluminum storm windows and doors, believes it is their obligation and responsibility to you, the home owner, to correct many false impressions that have been created in the storm-screen window business.
Letters and phone calls by the hundreds from all over have been received in our offices from confused home owners wanting to know the answers to several important questions.
Here are ALSCO'S ANSWERS to the questions so important to Home Owners!
QUESTION: Is there really a glass shortage?
ANSWER: Yes. There is an industry-wide glass shortage at present and many orders are being taken which could not possibly be filled. Your solution is to deal with a reputable company with years of experience.
QUESTION: Which company is really the oldest in the aluminum storm-screen industry?
ANSWER: ALSCO. Obviously there are older companies in the home improvement field, but the combination aluminum storm-screen window was developed by Mr. Harry Sugar, president of ALSCO in 1940, and ALSCO was the FIRST in manufacturing these products. ALSCO is also the largest company, with 36 factories throughout the U.S., Canada and Europe.
QUESTION: Are aluminum storm-screen windows really tailor-made?
ANSWER: NOT ALL. Every window made by ALSCO is measured, custom-built, and installed by expert factory-trained technicians.
QUESTION: Are all advertising statements dependable?
ANSWER: We can speak only for ourselves and you are assured ALSCO is violently opposed to misleading advertising.
QUESTION: Does ALSCO sell a storm window or door for less than $10 each?
ANSWER: CERTAINLY NOT. Use your own good judgment and be guided by the following facts:
Here are the FACTS ALSCO believes you should know before buying Storm Windows!
"GOOD HOUSEKEEPING" SAYS: "A single good storm window will cost between $20 and $30 (plus cost of installation), depending on the size of the window." "Beware of come-on advertising. If you're considering buying storm windows, you have probably noticed newspaper and radio advertisements offering such windows at prices much below the figures we've quoted."
"However, firms that use this sales technique are apt to be unreliable in other respects, and we suggest that you have absolutely nothing to do with a transaction as uncertain and frankly shady as this."
"NEW YORK TIMES" REPORTS: "That the matter of deceptive practices is serious can be gleaned from statistics. Most of the complaints concerned faulty installation, delay in delivery, or the refusal of a home owner."
"The two other types of complaints mostly were the outgrowth of 'bait' advertising. A dealer advertises that he will sell windows for, say, $9.95 each. But when the customer insists on getting them at that price instead of a higher one, delivery is stalled to an unreasonable length of time. Other dealers using bait advertising who find that they cannot make a sale at their own price just refuse to deal with 'uncooperative' customers."
NEW YORK BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU WARNS: "Bait advertising occurs in the storm window and door business when certain advertisers feature a ridiculously low price for combination storm windows or doors and then do everything possible to discourage or prevent the customer from buying the advertised product while trying to sell him a much higher priced window or door. A company that engages in bait advertising engages in deceptive and unfair business practices. In this field, as in all others, the customer usually gets what he pays for."
NATIONAL GROUP ADVISES: "Here are a few tests you can apply which can indicate a "bait" advertiser: 1. Is the advertised price ridiculously low? You rarely get "something for nothing." When a dealer advertises a combination storm window or door for one-fourth of the usual selling price, be on your guard. 2. Does the advertiser willingly sell the advertised combination storm window or door—or does the salesman call at your home with a battered sample of obviously poor quality? Does he then "knock" this combination storm window or door—tell you this cheap window really won't do justice to your lovely home, and then tries to sell you one of higher price?"
YOU CAN BUY ALSCO PRODUCTS WITH CONFIDENCE!

Bank Drive-In Addition To Be Built

Razing of two four-family flats on ground adjacent to the Chippewa Trust Co., fronting on Chippewa at Jefferson and Broadway, is to be started tomorrow to make way for a new drive-in facility for the bank.

The Bank Building & Equipment Corporation of America has designed a facility with a California redwood pylon, steel roof deck with aluminum settings, and Carthage stone exterior and planting boxes. A face-lighted block letter sign on the canopy will read: "Chippewa Trust Company Drive-In Bank," and another illuminated sign will be mounted on the west wall of the existing building to integrate the expansion area.

Provisions have been made for two drive-in windows, at which all the institution's banking services, except loan procurement, will be offered. Pedestrians will be accommodated at two walk-up windows, with access from Chippewa street. Bituminous paving will cover the 78 by 100 foot lot.

Each of the drive-in teller installations will be air-conditioned, and heated by the same system serving the main bank building, with which they will be connected by a tunnel under an easement separating the properties. Tellers' booths will include modern bank machinery, counter-to-ceiling bullet-proof plate glass and plastic paneling. Tellers will converse with customers through a two-way telephone and microphone system, and will be linked to the main building by similar inter-communication facilities.

Taking cognizance of the "auto age in banking," President Walter L. Rust emphasized Chippewa Trust's regard of the additional service as an obligation to its customers. "It is also our feeling," he said, "that these plans are in keeping with the 'new spirit of St. Louis' and the scheduled improvements for handling of traffic in the vicinity in which our institution is located."

'SING OUT, SWEET LAND' AT JOHN BURROUGHS

A salute to American folk and popular music, "Sing Out, Sweet Land," was presented Friday and Saturday nights by the dramatic group at John Burroughs School. It will be given again Tuesday night. Written by Walter Kerr, a New York drama critic, while he was an instructor at Catholic University, the folk operetta was first produced at the university and later by the Theater Guild on Broadway. It is the story of Barnaby Goodchild, sentenced in Puritan days, for singing and dancing, to roam the roads forever engaged in such pursuits. At the finale, however, he escapes the curse and disappears up Big Rock Candy Mountain. Wayne Arnold of the English department at Burroughs directed the cast of more than 50, assisted by Colleen Ryan and Mary Marsh. Janet Depping designed the scenery; Sally Mill and Margo DuBois are prompters and Albert Wunderlich and Duncan MacRae are in charge of lighting.

BARNABY GOODCHILD, PLAYED BY WILLIAM A. BORDERS JR., CLIMBS BIG ROCK CANDY MOUNTAIN IN THE FINALE AS THE CHORUS BIDS HIM FAREWELL AFTER HIS CENTURIES OF SINGING AND DANCING THROUGH EARLY AMERICAN SCENES. THE PART OF BARNABY WAS PLAYED ON BROADWAY BY ALFRED DRAKE.
—Photographs by Bob Holt, Post-Dispatch Photographer.

BARNABY'S TROUBLES BEGIN WHEN HE IS PLACED IN THE STOCKS IN PURITAN NEW ENGLAND FOR HIS LOVE OF SINGING AND DANCING. HERE HE IS LECTURED BY CAROLINE BYARS AND JON SCHNEEBERGER BEFORE BEING SENTENCED TO WANDER FOREVER ABOUT THE COUNTRY.

COWBOY DAVID BRICKER, SEATED ON A PAPIER MACHE ROCK, WEEPS AS HE SINGS THE SAD BALLAD OF "CLEMENTINE." NEARBY AN UNAPPRECIATIVE MOUNTAIN LION, WITH JEANIE LOVELACE IN THE COSTUME, HOLDS ITS EARS.

IN THE GOLD RUSH DAYS CHARLES WALLAS SINGS "FOGGY FOGGY DEW" WITH HIS TWO "SONS," PLAYED BY TOMMY, RIGHT, AND JOHNNY BERMAN, TWINS, WHO ATTEND COMMUNITY SCHOOL. BARNABY'S TRAVELS TAKE HIM THROUGH MANY AMERICAN SCENES, INCLUDING THE FAR WEST.

JOHN HARFORD, THE BANJOIST AT LEFT, SINGS "FRANKIE AND JOHNNIE," AS FRANKIE, WITH COLLEEN RYAN IN THE PART, SHOOTS DOWN JOHNNIE, PLAYED BY DAVID HARDING. THE BANJOIST IN THE BROADWAY PRODUCTION WAS BURL IVES, AMERICAN BALLAD SINGER. THIS SCENE WAS PART OF A MISSISSIPPI RIVER EPISODE.

BARNABY AT LEFT ATTEMPTS TO HIDE A HATCHET FROM GEORGE WASHINGTON (BEN WELLS JR.), WHO IS OFFERING HIM REFRESHMENTS. A NEW ANGLE ON THE CHERRY TREE STORY—BARNABY WAS THE GUILTY ONE—IS GIVEN IN THE OPERETTA. ALBERTA RIST HERE ACTS AS BARNABY'S AUNT.

Miss Jean Audrey Maritz, Wells A. Hobler Married

THE wedding of Miss Jean Audrey Maritz to Wells Atherton Hobler took place late yesterday afternoon at Central Presbyterian Church against an elaborate background of white flowers and candlelight. She is the daughter of Mr .and Mrs. James A. Maritz who gave a large reception in a garden setting at their home, 24 Carrswold, Clayton. Mr. Hobler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Atherton Wells Hobler of Princeton, N.J., and Palm Beach, Fla., came from Princeton for the wedding.

Mr. Maritz escorted his daughter down a candlelighted aisle and gave her in marriage. White flowers—spider chrysanthemums, snapdragon and stock—were combined with greenery to form a low hedge back of the altar rail and seven-branch candelabra, holding white tapers, were placed at either side of the altar which was covered with white flowers. Graduated tiers of burning candles were arranged before masses of greenery screening the choir stalls. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. J. Layton Mauze Jr.

Mrs. James A. Maritz Jr. was matron of honor for her sister-in-law. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles Henry Stephens III, Mrs. Robert W. Powers, Mrs. Wilson Allen Taylor and Miss Phyllis Mesker, who will be married Dec. 10 to the bride's other brother, William E. Maritz. Edward Windsor Hobler, Upper Montclair, N.J., attended his brother as best man. Guests were seated by another brother, Herbert Windsor Hobler, Princeton; Marston B. Gibbs, Bronxville, N.Y., Stanley Peterson and James A. Jr., and William E. Maritz.

The wedding gown was ivory silk satin styled with short sleeves and a portrait neckline appliqued with alencon lace. The bell-shaped skirt fell in sculptured folds into a train. The bride wore a full-length veil, bordered with alencon lace, gathered to a lace plateau adorned with lilies of the valley. Her bouquet was a shower of lilies of the valley and white orchids.

The bride's attendant wore violet taffeta dresses, the basque bodices secured to wide shoulder straps. Skirts were terrace length with unpressed pleats providing back fullness. The young women wore small matching pill box hats, circled with brief veils, and held white fur muffs to which were fastened clusters of purple grapes and green ivy sprays.

For the reception, the circular patio, off the dining room, and the adjoining garden were covered with a green marquee. The flagstone terraces, clipped hedges and other evergreens were spotlighted and small tables in the garden were decorated with hurricane lamps surrounded by white blossoms. The bridal table set in a semi-circle in the patio was arranged before growing golden arborvitae and a fountain playing in simulated moonlight. Low crystal bowls of lilies of the valley and white roses and silver candelabra filled with white candles decorated the white satin-covered table. The buffet table in the dining room had as its central adornment a tall epergne of all-white flowers and white candles.

Mrs. Maritz received guests in a navy blue lace gown, a small matching satin hat and a white orchid corsage. Mrs. Hobler wore a cocoa lace gown and a beaded hat of the same shade. Her flowers were brown slipper orchids.

Mr. Hobler and his bride will go to Jamaica on their wedding trip and will live in St. Louis. The former Miss Maritz is a graduate of John Burroughs School, Briarcliff Junior College and Washington University. A debutante of several seasons ago, she is a member of the Junior League. Mr. Hobler, who has lived here for the past year, is an alumnus of the Hill School and Princeton University. He belongs to the Racquet Club of St. Louis.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Frederick W. Niemeyer, Little Rock, Ark., a former St. Louisan, and the mother of Mrs. James A. Maritz Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Francis, Bronxville.

Pitcairn, a cousin of the bride-elect; Mrs. Robert Poe and Miss Rosemarie Prange.

BRIDES AND BRIDES-TO-BE

Miss Hardcastle Bride Of Lester A. Schamel

MISS VALERIE ANN HARDCASTLE and Lester A. Schamel were married at the Church of the Annunciata yesterday morning by the Rev. Bernard Kramer. White chrysanthemums and pompons were arranged at the main altar.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Hardcastle, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a princesse gown of antique taffeta with a high neckline edged in petals of lace, seed pearls and sequins. The long tapered sleeves were finished with the same trimming. Her short tulle veil was held in place by a small taffeta pillbox hat and she carried white carnations, stephanotis and orchids.

CAMPAIGN TO OPEN ON SAFE DRIVING

Begins Tomorrow—Backed by Highway Patrol—Ends on Dec. 1.

An intensified campaign to educate motorists and enforce traffic regulations will begin tomorrow by the Missouri State Highway Patrol in preparation for Safe Driving day Dec. 1, Capt. C. R. Oliver, commanding officer of the patrol at the Kirkwood station, said yesterday.

S-D day was established by President Eisenhower. It's goal is to go 24 housr without a traffic accident. The campaign is promoted in the city by the Safety Council of Greater St. Louis.

Many communities in the St. Louis area have issued appeals for citizens to observe the letter and spirit of the law in an attempt to reduce the number of traffic accidents.

Capt. Oliver said there were 2332 traffic accidents in the 10 mid-eastern counties surrounding St. Louis in the first 10 months of this year. He said 1639 persons were injured, 121 killed and damage to property was estimated at $1,337,222 as a result of traffic accidents.

Traffic safety, Capt. Oliver said, is merely good judgment and common sense driving and walking.

As a method of reducing the number of accidents, he asked for co-operation of the public in driving at reasonable speeds for traffic, road and weather conditions.

Drivers for Laclede Cab Co. will wear S-D day armbands and distribute lapel buttons to promote safety consciousness. Ladue will have an automobile wreck displayed on its city hall lawn to demonstrate the results of careless driving.

GERMAN COUPLE AND SON TO BE REUNITED HERE

Mr. and Mrs. Johann Ternak, who have lived in Austria since 1948 when they were expelled as ethnic Germans from their home in Hungary, will be reunited soon with their son, George, 1220A Ann avenue, it was reported yesterday.

They are to arrive in New York City tomorrow aboard the transport General Langfitt, chartered by the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration. Their desire to come to this country began near the end of World War II when they befriended a soldier, Arnold Schumer of Perryville, Mo., who had parachuted near their home in Hungary.

The Ternaks, who have not seen their son for seven years, are emigrating under the Refugee Relief Act and will live at the home of their sponsor, Alfred Long, of Cadet, Mo., in Washington county. George Ternak came here from Western Germany in 1951.

Women Artists Opening Exhibit Of 60 Paintings at Monday Club

"Portrait of Enrico Fermi, Architect of the Atomic Age," by Martyl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Schweig of St. Louis. The painting was unveiled yesterday at University of Chicago at renaming of the university's nuclear studies institute in honor of the scientist, who died last Nov. 28.

Emphasis in Landscapes, Still Lifes and Portraits Is on Representational Styles.

A month-long exhibition by 15 members of the St. Louis Women Artists will open today at 3 p.m. with a reception at the Monday Club, 37 South Maple avenue, Webster Groves. The paintings, 60 in all, will be on display whenever the building is open for actiivties of the club and of other organizations.

Emphasis in the show is on representational or conservative painting, though a modern note is struck by Laura LeMoine in her somber, subjective treatment of a marketplace scene.

Largest pictures in the collection are the nearly mural-size landscapes of Olive Holbert Chaffee, which in their color scheme strive for and achieve fidelity to nature.

Craftsmanlike work in still-life painting is being shown by Virginia Bergfeld and in portraiture by Laura Skorat Poepsel and Virginia Moberly Schlueter.

Others taking part in the show are Esther Silber Reed, conveying humor in her treatment of early Americana; Eleanor L. Hartwell, represented by characteristic small and delicate landscapes, Ann Marie Brown, Lillian Thoele, Beatrice Carter, Hazel Goetsch, Grace Koch Markman, Idelle Luntz, Miriam A. Bowe and Mary Hallett Gronemeyer.

Five St. Louis Artists Have Oils in Topeka Contest.

Warren D. Spaulding and Herbert P. Cummings, St. Louis artists, have been awarded honorable mentions for their entries in a regional art show that opened yesterday in Topeka, Kan. Three other St. Louisans have pictures in the competition, which offers $2000 in purchase prizes to be announced later.

The display, held at the Mulvane Art Center of Washburn University, is known as "The Ninth Annual Exhibition of Oil Painting by Artists of the Missouri Valley."

Spaulding, who teaches at Washington University School of Fine Arts, entered "Contemplation of Nature," a large expressionist painting that won first prize last spring in the Artists' Guild art section show.

Cummings, an instructor at both Washington University School of Architecture and Webster College, submitted "Don Quixote," a semi-abstraction, highlight of his recent one-man exhibit at People's Art Center here.

Other St. Louisans' pictures in the show, which will close Dec. 16, are "Episode From Bartok," an abstraction by Edward E. Boccia of the Washington University School of Fine Arts faculty; "Priest," an expressionist painting by Louise Horwitz; "Sawdust Overture" and "The Bridge," both by Tom Cavanaugh.

Louise Horwitz, who is a member of the National Association of Women Artists, has been notified that her water color called "West Indian Sportsman," has been chosen for inclusion in a show by association members in Amsterdam, The Netherlands. The display will open in February at the Stedelijke Museum.

Portrait by Martyl Unveiled in Chicago.

An oil portrait of the late Enrico Fermi by Martyl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Schweig of St. Louis, was unveiled Friday at ceremonies marking the renaming of the University of Chicago's nuclear sutdies institute "The Enrico Fermi Institute for Nuclear Studies."

The artist, who knew her subject well before his death last Nov. 28, is the wife of Alexander Langsdorf Jr., former St. Louisan and a member of the staff of the Atomic Energy Commission's Argonne National Laboratory.

On Dec. 2, 1942, across the street from the site of the institute, Dr. Fermi, the University of Chicago's distinguished service professor of physics, first achieved the controlled release of nuclear energy.

Martyl, like her mother, the artist Aimee Schweig, is a member of a leading St. Louis artists' organization known as Group 15. Both are represented by paintings in the permanent collection of the City Art Museum and both take part in regular shows here.

Junior League Showing Crafts From Mexico.

Alice Bunch, a member of Group 15, will present a showing of contemporary Mexican artists' and craftsmen's work tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the Junior League tearoom, 4932 Maryland avenue.

The exhibition, the artist's second selection of Mexican objects to be held at the tearoom, includes work she chose last summer when traveling in Mexico. In many of the pieces, motifs are not repeated and yet achieve an over-all harmony, despite a brilliant chromatic range.

Designs, done in varying degrees of abstraction, are modern adaptations of ancient Aztec motifs. Some of the textiles, oddly enough, suggest whimsical or primitive creations of Paul Klee, Marc Chagall and Picasso. Other pieces include hand-made sandals and objects in silver and copper.

HUTCHINS ASSAILS COLLEGE SPECIALIZING

He Calls Liberal Arts Graduates Best Defense for Freedom.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19 (UP)—Robert M. Hutchins, president of the American Fund for the Republic, said last night that the graduates of liberal arts colleges "provide the best defense for our free institutions."

Hutchins, whose organization has been accused by the American Legion of rendering "comfort to the enemies of America," criticized over-specialization in colleges and denounced the theory of personal adjustment as "one of the most pernicious doctrines that can be preached."

The former University of Chicago president said in an address at Jean de Brebeuf College that "it seems useless to hope that democracy can survive unless all the people are educated for freedom." He said his own education began at the age of 32, after he became president of the University of Chicago, when he opened Aristotle's ethics for the first time and read: "In practical matters the end is the first principle."

"I will not comment further upon an educational system that allowed me to escape this book and almost every other of equal significance and that permitted me to become the president of a great university without having had any education," he said. "You may draw your own conclusions on these subjects. When I read this line of Aristotle, I had been connected for almost 10 years with the management of American universities. I had never asked myself what they were for."

Hutchins said that "what we want is a specialized educational system, specializing for the sake of the individual and society, in the development of the intellectual powers of the young so that they may become unspecialized happy men and effective systems of the democracy . . . and education that aims to supply intellectual foundations for life."

Hutchins said he found the case of Dr. Robert Oppenheimer interesting, not because of the charges brought against him, but because of what Oppenheimer said about the nature of his education.

"Though it appeared he had many hobbies, some of them of an intellectual kind, he did not vote until he was past 30; he learned about Hitler because he heard that Hitler was persecuting the Jews, and he discovered there was a depression because his graduate students told him they could not get jobs," Hutchins said.

Hutchins said the theory of democracy makes no provision for an "apolitical man." He said the theory of democracy rests on the participation of every individual in the life of the political community.

The kind of educational system needed, he said, "should be some adaptation to modern conditions of what has been called, since the middle ages, liberal education. It would involve first, the mastery of the intellectual techniques of reading, writing and figuring. It would involve the study of at least one foreign language, because one cannot understand what a language is from the study of one's mother tongue alone; just because it is one's mother tongue one cannot look at it from outside."

Dynamite Death of 44 in Plane Finale of Many Little Dramas

Fear, Hope, Joy, Romance, Premonitions and Duty Rode Flight 628 With Innocent Who Died.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP)—This is drama of a kind Hollywood feeds on.

Forty-four persons are thrown together by chance in a four-engined airliner high above mid-America. Mostly strangers to one another, each is concerned with his or her own affairs. Among them are:

A man trying to out-race death. . . .

A woman with a strange, gripping premonition. . . .

A mother taking a baby to a father who has never seen him. . . .

A couple whose lives have just become worth a small fortune. . . .

A girl engrossed in her approaching marriage. . . .

An executive whose signature is still fresh on his will. . . .

A physician marking his seventy-second—and final—birthday. . . .

A dedicated government authority on a duty mission. . . .

A sales manager who gave up a weekend at home. . . .

A widow serene beneath the weight of 80 years. . . .

Unbeknown to each of them, the 44 are winging together to a common destination—violent death.

Pure Hollywood? Not at all. For this was real-life drama, not make believe.

The 44 were aboard United Airlines Flight 629 that exploded and crashed in the early evening of Nov. 1 in Colorado.

From Many Walks of Life.

The big plane left New York at noon and stopped at Chicago and Denver. People of all walks of life, from cities and small towns, were drawn into its orbit as it moved across the continent. Its shadow flickered over skyscraper and farm shack, over mountain and meadow, over wheatland and factory as it moved westward, ever closer to disaster.

In Denver, during a stopover there, John Gilbert (Jack) Graham, a 23-year-old ne'er-do-well, helped his 54-year-old mother, Mrs. Daisie E. King, aboard Flight 629.

In her luggage, the FBI said later, he secreted 25 sticks of dynamite tied together to make a bomb and timed to explode when the big plane was in the air. Turned over to state authorities, Graham now faces murder charges.

Authorities said he planted the bomb to collect $37,500 flight insurance he had taken out on his mother.

Flight 629 took off from Denver at 6:52 p.m. on its 1075-mile hop to Portland, Ore. Eleven minutes later, the bomb went off and scattered the plane and its human cargo for two miles over a flat sugar beet field six miles from Longmont in northeast Colorado.

It was the first known case of successful sabotage in the airline history in this country.

What whim of destiny put 43 other persons aboard Flight 629 with the pitiful mother who allegedly was the target of a son's greed?

Among them were Mr. and Mrs. James Dorey of Whitman, Mass. They were making their first flight in order to visit their son, George, in Portland. They hadn't seen him in nine years. Anticipation held them taut as they sped toward the reunion.

But there was a cloud over the 56-year-old Mrs. Dorey's happiness. The day before she left on the flight, she told her family:

"Of course I'm glad we're going out to visit George but somehow or other I've got a premonition that something's going to happen."

Her 58-year-old husband had a problem, too. His heart was so bad that he was resigned to death. He was racing against time to see his son once more before his heart gave out.

Mrs. Dorey's premonition came true. And James Dorey found himself outraced by a form of death he least expected.

Seated near the Doreys was Mrs. Helen Fitzpatrick of Batavia, N.Y., with her 14-month-old son, James II, in her arms. The boy's father, Lt. Col. James Fitzpatrick, an Army officer stationed on Okinawa, had gone overseas before the child was born and had never seen him.

Since the baby's birth, Mrs. Fitzpatrick had waited with growing impatience for her husband to send for them. Finally, the summons came. Happily, Mrs. Fitzpatrick flew with the little boy out of Buffalo to Chicago. There they changed planes and Mrs. Fitzpatrick carried her son aboard Flight 629.

Thus Lt. Col. James Fitzpatrick on his Pacific isle lost forever a son he had never seen.

Got $125,000 Flight Insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Morgan of Wilmette, Ill., boarded Flight 629 in Chicago. Just before they did so, they took out the maximum insurance allowed an airline passenger — $62,500 each, or a total of $125,000. Morgan, a consulting engineer, was taking his wife west on a business trip.

Beneficiaries of the insurance were the Morgans' two daughters, Sharon, 14, and Susan, 12. And so two little girls home in bed in the care of a grandmother became orphans.

One of the passengers who settled down in the dimly lit cabin of Flight 629 that evening was a pretty young girl, Sally Ann Scofield of Denver. She had been an airline stewardess for United for two years. But she was not in uniform this trip. She and another stewardess were on a vacation.

Sally's head was full of dreams, for she was about to be married to a U.A.L. pilot. But she died unmarried, her dreams forever erased.

Side by side on Flight 629 were Dr. R. W. Van Valin and his wife, Minnie. They were flying back to their home in Newburg, Ore., after a month's visit with his brother in Philadelphia.

Dr. Van Valin had cause for contentment as the drone of the engines set him to nodding. It was his 72nd birthday, another of those sentimental milestones that mark men's lives. It also was his last.

Thoughtful Father.

Gerald G. Lipke, a Pittsburgh sales executive, was a man of considerable foresight. On Oct. 31, he went to his bank and made out his will. He was motivated, apparently, by the fact that he and his wife were flying to Portland to visit Mrs. Lipke's sister. But he was cheerful, with no premonition that the will would be executed within the foreseeable future.

Next day the Lipkes boarded Flight 629. And three little boys — seven to 11 — were bequeathed an estate, and the memory of a foresighted father.

James E. Straud, 51, of Okemos, Mich., shouldn't have been on Flight 629 at all. An assistant general sales manager for an automobile manufacturer, he covered the western half of the United States, usually by air.

He liked flying, considered it safer than driving. It was Straud's custom to fly home each Friday, wherever he was. But he had a sales meeting coming up in Portland and he already was in Denver. So instead of going back to Michigan and then out again on Monday to Portland, he stayed over in Denver.

The savings in time put Straud aboard Flight 629 on Tuesday, Nov. 1. Straud, who gave up a weekend at home, will never have another one.

Aboard Flight 629 also was a man with a strong sense of duty, Dr. Harold R. Sandstead, a foremost government authority on nutrition. He was planning a January trip to the Far East for nutrition studies. The project had him working overtime.

Invited to address the Institute of the Far East at Oregon State College, Dr. Sandstead hesitated. He had so much to do at home in Bethesda, Md., But his friends urged him to accept the speaking engagement. They pointed out that no one could make a bigger contribution to the nutrition discussions there.

His sense of duty moved Dr. Sandstead to fly west. So on Nov. 1, Dr. Sandstead found himself aboard Flight 629.

In another seat aboard Flight 629 that night was Mrs. Lewis L. MacClain, at 80 the oldest passenger aboard. She was no stranger to flight, and her age imparted a serenity that others lacked.

A widow, she was on her way home to Portland after a three-week visit with her son at Glastonbury, Conn. If she thought of danger, she probably related it to her daughter, a missionary in far off Korea. But danger was Mrs. MacClain's seatmate that night and disaster kept her from ever reaching home.

These were a few of the 44 persons aboard U.A.L. Flight 629 out of Denver Nov. 1—alive and full of thoughts and plans at 7:02 p.m., dead 60 seconds later.

The stuff Hollywood feeds on, this kind of drama. And yet, would it be believable on film?

ON ALL 8 PROPOSALS IN THE ST. LOUIS COUNTY BOND ISSUE ELECTION TUESDAY

Modernize Now!

Other cities have already taken advantage of this bargain offer, and testify to its many benefits. Old-fashioned driving over inadequate streets and roads . . . crowded hospitals and clinics . . . lack of space for outdoor recreation . . . absence of protection from possible enemy invasion . . . inaccurate voting practices—all these are things of the past, when you step in and sign up for your share of Tuesday's bargain in progress . . . the St. Louis County Bond Issue!

Save 6.50 on Expressways!

St. Louis County can have three major expressways fanning out from the city, plus an Outer Belt sweeping the western segment of congestion—and for every $1.00 spent by the County, Federal and State Funds will contribute $6.50! This is possible because Federal and State governments have allocated funds from taxes already collected to improve local communities. You have paid your share of such taxes—now it is up to you to collect your fair return!

Offer Expires Tuesday!

If St. Louis County does not vote the required 2/3 majority "YES" on these 8 proposals Tuesday, other communities will get the Federal and State Funds allocated for progress. They will go forward, while Greater St. Louis lags behind! If you live in the County—vote YES to all 8. If you live in the City—urge your friends and family in the County to vote YES. Progress does not draw a city limit line—it extends to all in the Greater St. Louis area.

Anybody You Know?

Social Climbers and How They Operate

(The writer, whose column on etiquette appears in the Everyday Magazine, is well equipped to deal with the subject under discussion. She is a member of THE Vanderbilt clan, being a descendant of the first Vanderbilt to settle in America. She is author of the popular "Amy Vanderbilt's Complete Book of Etiquette.")

By Amy Vanderbilt

A SOCIAL CLIMBER is a person so unsure of himself that he must prove he IS somebody in numerous transparent ways.

Sure signs of the social climber are these: great outward show, little inner resources.

The woman who knows she is a lady, fitted by education and social accomplishments to move in any circles, can afford poor friends, a less-than-fashionable address, a modest but tasteful home, a vintage car and a cloth coat. She herself never judges quality in people by the amount of money they can put on their backs or the tokens of monetary success with which they are surrounded.

The boys who had the most modest allowances at Princeton in the '30s were the Rockefellers. It's the climbers who permit their children spending money out of all proportion to that normally allowed by other parents under like circumstances. Good boarding schools usually limit the amount of money a boy or girl may receive as a school allowance so all may be equal. For this reason, too, even where a school uniform is not required there is a general understanding that pupils wear much the same kind and quality of clothes.

It is not smart to be extravagantly dressed in our schools and colleges. The children from the socially secure families have simple, tasteful wardrobes, and often have a horror of clothes too obviously new.

● THE SOCIAL CLIMBER, man or woman, thinks he can buy popularity. He is a lavish spender, often spending quite beyond his means. Of course, there are always those who are quite willing to accept his hospitality while laughing behind his back. Those who accept his invitations rarely return them.

Listen to the social climber's conversation. It is studded with names—usually first names even when his closest association with the holders of them may have been merely at a public dinner. Watch his eyes glisten if he discovers you know some people of eminence yourself. If he can he will use you to meet your friends. He will ask for letters of introduction to the important ones in distant cities when he's traveling, instead of waiting for you to suggest such a thing yourself.

If by chance he does meet a friend of yours he will imply that your relationship is most intimate, and thereby benefit from the sort of hospitality you would enjoy yourself at your friend's hands. He turns aside any inquiries as to his background. He is firmly vague.

● THE MOST SUCCESSFUL social climber I ever knew surrounded himself with talented people whose talents somehow, he always implied delicately, were really his own. He became famed as a connoisseur of many arts, although in actuality he knew little about any. He cultivated the trenchant quip, the enigmatic smile, the lifted eyebrow, when asked to discourse extemporaneously on any of his supposed specialties.

He ended knowing everybody but having no friends. He could pick the talents and brains of all around him, but he had nothing of himself to give to a friend. He died in style, but broke.

Anyone in America may achieve true culture and social ease. Money buys neither. To be comfortable with oneself and comfortable with others—the true goal of social poise—one must be himself.

● OUR COUNTRY is full of people who never went to college, who came from modest social backgrounds and who are very far from rich. But, being themselves, they are likable. Having something to offer as people, they are sought after. Having intelligence they have made themselves socially attractive by becoming informed, considerate, creative and outgoing.

They are never the social climbers, for they accept themselves and are accepted by others for what they are.

Try and Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

TO show how well the M.G.M. trademark is known, the movie outfit's Vice President Howard Dietz tells of two kids who were standing before the lion's cage in the zoo when the king of beasts gave out with a terrific roar. One kid backed away, terrified, but the other said, "What's the matter with you? Aren't you going to stay and watch the picture?"

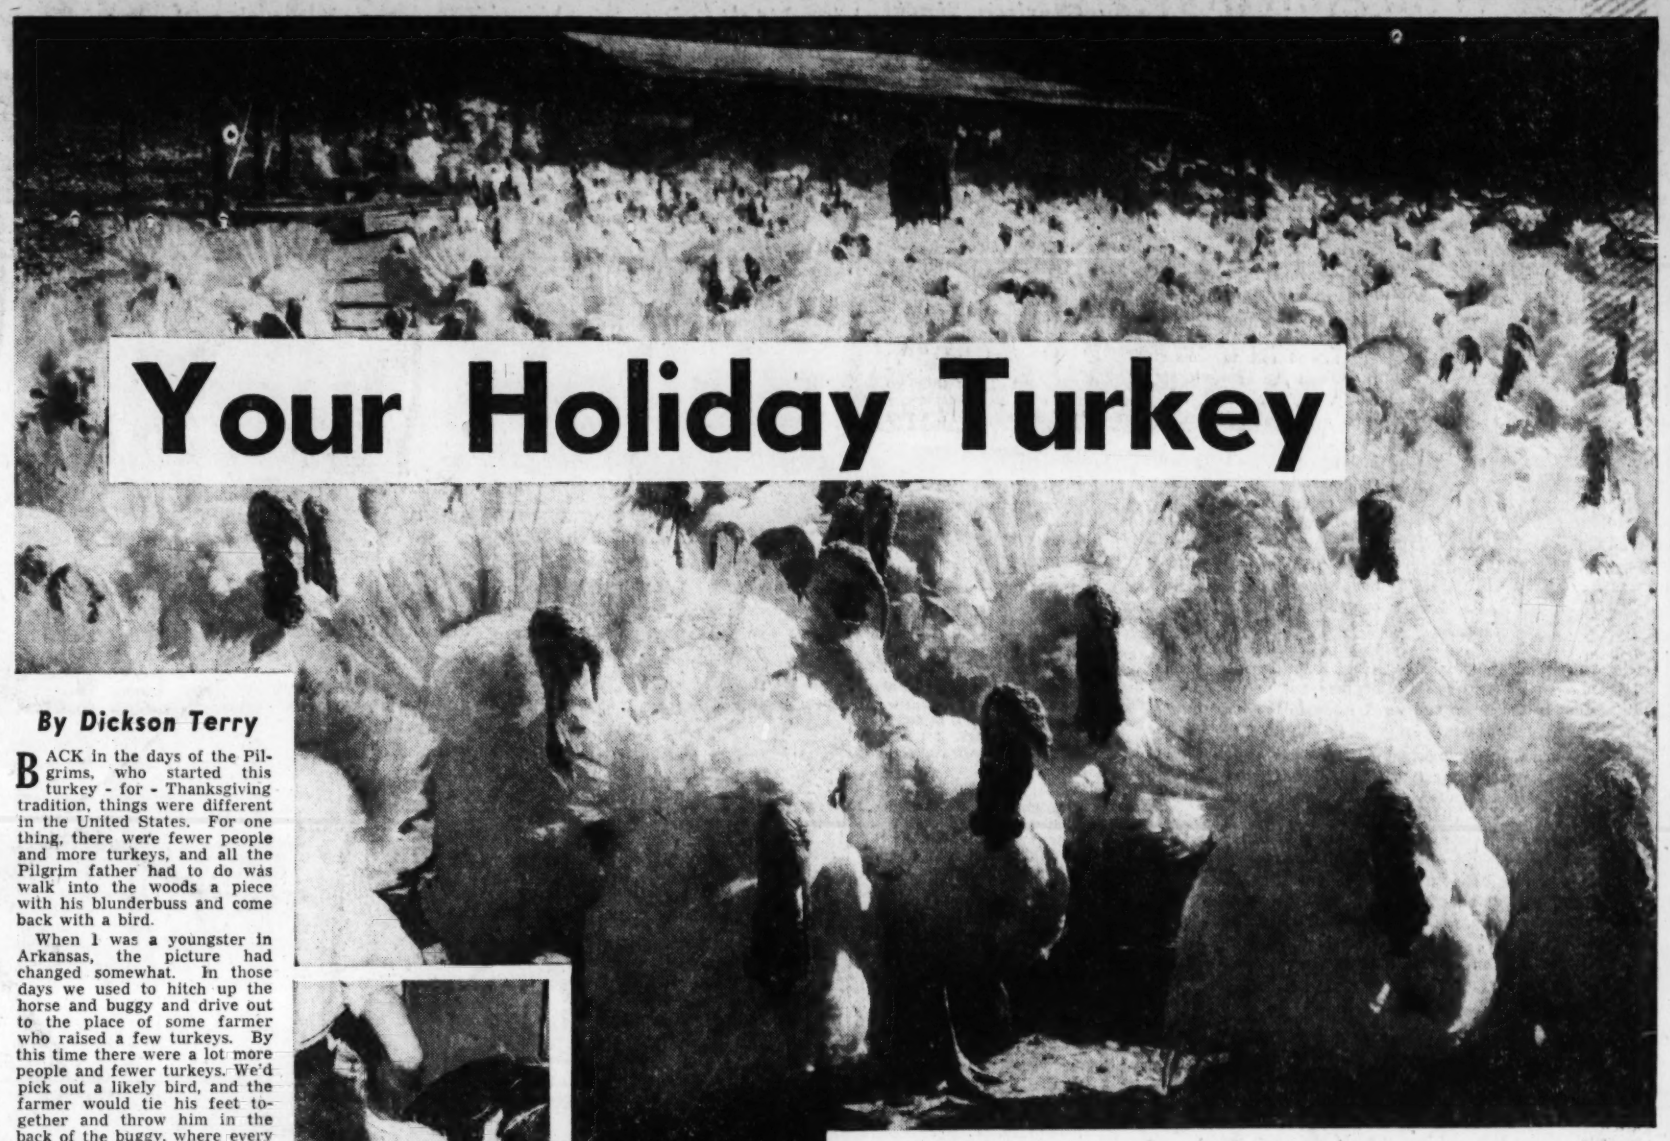
"WHAT THIS HOUSE NEEDS is more modern methods in bringing up children," announced a precocious 9-year-old boy to an astonished visitor. "Let me get just a bit out of line, and either my father or mother feels called upon to give me a sound spanking. They sort of take turns at it."

"Probably the best thing for you," nodded the visitor. "Who hurts the most?"

The brat answered, "I do."



Your Holiday Turkey

SOME OF THE 17,000 TURKEYS RAISED THIS YEAR ON THE FARM OF RAY SONDAG AT MAPAVILLE, MO.

Grandma Would Be Amazed, Not to Mention Startled, at Scientific Developments in Raising and Assembly-Line Processing of Birds for Table

By Dickson Terry

BACK in the days of the Pilgrims, who started this turkey - for - Thanksgiving tradition, things were different in the United States. For one thing, there were fewer people and more turkeys, and all the Pilgrim father had to do was walk into the woods a piece with his blunderbuss and come back with a bird.

When I was a youngster in Arkansas, the picture had changed somewhat. In those days we used to hitch up the horse and buggy and drive out to the place of some farmer who raised a few turkeys. By this time there were a lot more people and fewer turkeys. We'd pick out a likely bird, and the farmer would tie his feet together and throw him in the back of the buggy, where every now and then he would give an almighty flap with his wings and try to make a break for freedom.

We had a special stump in the backyard where we always decapitated the bird, after which came the hard and tedious business of picking and cleaning. Water would be boiling in a big, black, iron pot, and when the bird had finally given up the ghost and quivered its last quiver, it was lowered into the pot and scalded (but not until we youngsters had pulled some good tail feathers to play Indian with, and the wing feathers had been plucked to make feather dusters).

Next came the picking and the cleaning, followed by the stuffing and the baking, and by and large it became a major operation which took just about all day. A lot of housewives got so they didn't care much for turkey in those days.

Today's housewife, however, has a lot to be thankful for. All she has to do is walk into the supermarket, and there they are. They've been killed, picked, cleaned, and frozen. They've been packed in a kind of plastic bag, and not only that, vacuum-packed. They're weighed, graded and boxed, and virtually indestructible.

"Frozen solid as a rock," a butcher explained to me. "Keep her that way and she'll last a year." It's debatable whether any of today's housewives count their blessings, or even pause to wonder how this modern miracle of turkey from farm to freezer comes about.

Some 60,000,000 turkeys are now being raised annually in the United States, most of which wind up in this sterile, frozen state, which is something of a miracle in itself, considering the hazards of raising turkeys. There is an old saying in rural circles that "turkeys are hell to raise." In fact, it has been said that a man who deliberately sets out to raise turkeys is beset by either great courage and a touch of genius, or sheer idocy. With good luck, however, the profits are high, which doubtless provides incentive for the gamble.

TURKEY growers are divided generally into several groups. There are those who buy eggs and hatch them for other turkey growers, and those who buy poults, which are baby turkeys, and raise them to adulthood. These growers quite often take their turkeys to market and sell them live when they reach their growth, which takes about 28 weeks.

Then there is the turkey producer, coming more into prominence these days, who completes the whole operation—hatching, raising, killing, dressing, freezing and packing. Typical of such producers is Ray Sondag, owner of Mapa Farms, situated at Mapaville, Mo., which is on Route 21 between Hillsboro and Festus. Sondag, incidentally, is the founder of the town and owner of most of the businesses in Mapaville, which he named in honor of his mother and father. "Ma and Pa," he explained to me. "I put them together. Mapa. Get it?"

Sondag, a man of medium height and unusual corpulence, has 600 acres in his farm, but he uses only about 20 acres for his turkey raising operation. This year he raised some 17,000 turkeys, which is quite a crop as turkey farms go.

He bought the place back in 1941, impelled by a desire to raise turkeys and other types of fowl.

No bird, Sondag believes, has as many idiocyncracies as the turkey. It's hard to tell whether they're unbelievably stupid, or just neurotic, but their sole preoccupation, from the time they are hatched, seems to be self-destruction.

SCALDING AND PLUCKING MACHINE IN ACTION; IT DOES THE JOB IN ABOUT 10 SECONDS.

"There's just nothing they won't think of," he says, "to get themselves killed."

They can't stand extreme heat or extreme cold. They are constantly getting their heads caught in crevices, or their feet between slats, and when this happens the other turkeys seemed to consider it their bounden duty to do the unfortunate turkey in.

TO prevent this sort of thing, Sondag and other turkey raisers resort to two different measures. One of them is "debeaking" the birds, trimming off the sharp hook on the upper beak. The bird can still peck and eat, but it can't inflict much damage on its fellows. The other method is to fit the birds with bits, small metal objects which go between the upper and lower beak and fasten around the nose.

Turkeys will panic and stampede at virtually nothing. A bit of paper blowing in the wind on a moonlight night will send them into a stampede, which is more serious than it may sound. The fastest bird will run to a corner of a shelter, or maybe just to a fence corner, and scrunch down. The others will all try to get in the same corner. They begin to pile up, and sometimes they will pile up by the hundreds. By the time attendants get there to separate them, a goodly number of birds on the bottom will have suffocated.

Sometimes they will refuse to eat and drink, and will die of starvation with food in front of them.

Turkey raisers used to have a lot of trouble this way with poults. Finally an ornithologist in the Department of Agriculture found out why. Most poults can't see farther than the end of their noses, and therefore couldn't see the food on the ground in front of them. Turkey raisers starting putting food in feeders at head level, and the problem was solved. They also started dying it green and other gay colors, to make it easier to see.

ON A PRODUCTION LINE BASIS, THE PLUCKED BIRD GOES THROUGH A SERIES OF OPERATIONS WHICH REMOVES EVERYTHING, INCLUDING PIN FEATHERS.

The turkey's urge to self-destruction is extended to his susceptibility to disease. "They suffer from black head, enteritis, erysipelas and several other diseases, and all are contagious," Sondag said sadly. "Once a disease starts, it goes through the flock like a cyclone. You can lose a whole flock almost over night."

To guard against such diseases, all the birds are now vaccinated, and if you want a job, Sondag suggests, try vaccinating 17,000 turkeys. For diseases caused by inhalation they are given drops in the nose. For other diseases, such as cholera, they get a shot in the leg. Then, too, modern poultry feeds contain several wonder drugs, including penicillin and various types of sulfa. Further precautions are taken by keeping the ground where turkeys range well cleaned.

The hen turkeys start laying in January. The eggs go to the incubator rooms where they spend four weeks at controlled temperatures. When they hatch the baby turkeys are taken to brooder rooms, where they spend their infancy on wide-bottomed brooders, again at controlled temperatures, for another three to four weeks. During this period they eat a special food prepared for poults.

TURKEY EQUIPPED WITH METAL "BIT" IN ITS NOSE AS A WAY OF DISCOURAGING IT FROM TRYING TO PECK OTHER TURKEYS TO DEATH.

It is during this period, too, that they are vaccinated.

From the brooder house, the turkeys go to the tier feeders, which are large, wire-bottomed pens, where they eat and drink and get de-beaked. After 12 weeks here they go to the maturing pens, a large, open-sided building where several thousand birds, a couple of hundred to a section, sit on roosts, walk around, consume huge quantities of food and water, and are fattened up for the market.

SONDAG'S turkeys are pure white, but they are an interbreed of blacks and bronzes with Holland Whites, with Holland White predominating. The Holland Whites are a smaller bird than the traditional bronze birds, bred to meet today's requirements. Not many people nowadays, Sondag said, want to fool with a 20- or 25-pound bird. His birds will average 12 to 14 pounds when dressed. The toms, of course, get larger, some of them running to more than 35 pounds. Birds of that size go to hotels and restaurants. There is no difference in the flavor or texture of the meat in a hen or a tom, Sondag explains, providing the tom has not been allowed to range or grow too old and big.

As the turkeys leave the maturing houses, they are sorted out, some to be kept for breeding stock, the rest to go to market. The birds that go to market are trucked a mile or so to Sondag's dressing station.

SONDAG LOOKS OVER A FRESHLY CLEANED BIRD WITH MRS. RUBY HIGGINS, ONE OF HIS EMPLOYES.

Grandma, who spent long hours cleaning and dressing a turkey, wouldn't believe her eyes. After the bird has been painlessly and quickly extinguished with an electric knife, it goes into a machine which dips it in scalding water, turns it around a few times, and sends it on to the picking machine. This is a new-fangled contraption with a couple of cylinders composed of rubber disks. The cylinders whirl around and the bird is thrust between them a couple of times, and comes out de-feathered. It takes roughly 10 seconds per bird.

After a worker, armed with a sharp knife, cuts off their feet, the birds are hung by their legs to a conveyor belt, which moves them along while workers cut off the necks, clean the birds, and wash them thoroughly inside and out.

One woman does nothing but separate the livers and gizzards, which are cleaned and packed separately in a little white sack and stuffed inside the birds when they are packed, in case you had the idea that the giblets you find in your turkey are the ones it owned originally.

The turkeys are then placed in huge vats of water to bleach. They bleach for an hour in one vat, then to a fresh vat for another hour, and third to a third vat for still another hour. Then they are placed in vats of water and cracked ice at 31 degrees for 10 hours, after which they are hung to let all the moisture drip out.

IN the packing room they are slipped into those plastic bags. Then a girl gathers up the open end of the bag, holds it tight around a suction tube, and whoof! all the air is sucked out, leaving the bird vacuum packed. She gives the end a couple of quick twists like a balloon man tying an inflated balloon, and then staples it tight with a metal staple.

Sondag then puts them in boxes and loads them onto his own big transport refrigerator truck which is kept at 24 degrees. They are brought to St. Louis to a cold storage company where they are quick frozen at 20 degrees below zero.

The next stop is the meat counter where all the housewife has to do is say what size bird she wants. And like the man said, "Keep 'em froze and they'll stay that way for a year."

Preparing for Winter

Last Autumn Days Filled With Activity

By Leonard Hall

ALL last week the days grew steadily warmer and, although we know such weather can't last, we make the most of it. There are always endless tasks to get the farm ready for winter and we're thankful we don't have to carry them out in rain and snow. Machinery which won't be needed until spring is carefully checked and stored away, while tools that we may use for cold weather jobs are moved out to where they can be gotten at easily. We're building new pens and a shed for the young registered bulls, making the feed bunks ready and repairing the calf creep at the barn. Here our 30-odd calves will come in to eat extra grain and are fed their hay where they aren't in competition with the mature cattle. The daily round of feeding has started, a task which requires a couple of hours or more each day, although so far we're hauling hay out to scatter on the ground in the fields and won't bring in the herd until bad weather really starts.

There have been important new arrivals at the farm during recent weeks. One is a fine bull calf from one of our best registered Hereford cows and sired by the great Resolute 55th, grand champion of last year's American Royal Livestock Show and one of the top bulls of the breed. This is our second bull calf fathered by this famous sire; the first one, ECF Resolute 50th, being just about ready to wean. And toward the end of last week we acquired 19 head of black Angus steer calves from out on the East Fork of Black river. There we'll rough through the winter and finish out on pasture next summer for marketing in the autumn.

During the warm days of last week, great flocks of grackles gathered in the woods along the creek. In late afternoon they'd come drifting across the fields like leaves blown in the wind, to alight on the ground where we'd fed the cattle. Here they pick up oats and barley grain and grass seeds which have shattered out of the hay. Often there are 2000 or more birds in a single band; bronzed grackles, rusty blackbirds, cowbirds and sometimes a few starlings—although with the big bronzed grackles predominating.

● IT ISN'T EASY to describe the music of the blackbirds and grackles. They chuckle, wheeze, gurgle, cluck and clack—a combination of sounds like water pouring from a big bottle, a rusty wheelbarrow being trundled along and the squeaking of an old gate. And yet it is a not unpleasant sound which somehow seems to go with a sunny November afternoon. The robins, too, have gathered in great flocks; perhaps to migrate a few miles southward, but more likely to take up residence for the winter in the timbered hills which surround our valley.

There are other birds which somehow typify the last days of autumn. Meadowlarks flock in the lower fields and there are generally a number of flickers to be found feeding with them. Up on the ridge where we put out hay for the registered cattle, prairie horned larks rise with their short whistled note and circle to alight within a few feet of their starting point. In thickets along the edges of the bottom fields, cardinals gather in groups of a dozen or more. And here we see the white-crowned and white-throated sparrows which have come down from northern nesting grounds to spend the winter with us. November, too, is the season when we see the beautiful marsh hawk, our only harrier, gliding slowly back and forth over the fields in search of field mice and moles.

● THESE THINGS, along with the gradually fading color of the oak foliage along the sides of old Buford, the steady brightening of the stars as the winter constellations swing up out of the eastern sky and the occasional afternoon spent afield in pursuit of the Bobwhite with old Mike and Tiger, the pup, are all part of the business of farming. It has become fashionable in the upper echelons of some of the big farm organizations and of the Department of Agriculture, to state that farming is no longer a way of life, but a business pure and simple, with the dollar and the high standard of living as the only goals. Nothing could be purer poppycock than this and nothing could show more clearly how far away from actual farming some of these purported agricultural leaders have gotten.

If farming WASN'T a way of life—if it was "business pure and simple"—there are just about 3,500,000 American farmers who would abandon their farms tomorrow for jobs in industry or maybe as bank presidents. For certainly there is nothing which holds these farmers to the land today except the fact that this is the life they know and love and want to live. They've an investment in their farms of billions of dollars on which they are earning not one cent of return. Many of them are working for wages which would insult a refugee from the displaced persons' camps of Europe. But farming is their way of life and they're going to stick to it until they go under or until times get better again.

This is interesting to think about. If 3,500,000 farmers quit their farms tomorrow because farming isn't a paying business, the immediate result would be chaos for all America and very soon starvation for a majority of the population. On the other hand, if they go under before times get better again for farmers, they're going to drag the whole American economy down with them. The most expensive gesture which a highly industrialized nation can make is to let its agriculture go bankrupt—to somehow get the idea that prosperity rests on pieces of paper traded in stock exchanges, instead of on the firm base of the land resource and the labor of many hands.

She Fights Disease That Killed Her Son

Mrs. Walter Boerner Working Almost Night and Day To Help Raise Funds for Research Into Dystrophy—'As if She Still Had Hope of Saving Son's Life'

By Clarissa Start

ALMOST every day, in the afternoon or in the evening, Helen Boerner leaves her pretty, tidy ranch house at 860 Reavis Barracks road in Mehlville, and goes to the meeting of some club or organization to talk about her son, Donald. Most of the time, she takes projection machine and films with her and shows the home movies she and her husband, Walter, took of Donald.

They start out as typical, slightly fuzzy home movies, showing a sturdy, dimpled little boy "swimming" in a backyard wash tub, hunting Easter eggs, operating a toy train, going to Sunday School, to birthday parties. Then they go on to show how he wasted away and died at the age of 17, a victim of the fatal and incurable children's disease, muscular dystrophy.

It has been almost two years since Donald Boerner died, but his mother, local president of the Muscular Dystrophy Association, is as zealous in her efforts on its behalf as if she still had hope of saving her son's life. She gives an average of six educational talks a week, sometimes makes as many as three appearances and travels as much as 100 miles in a single day. She and her husband, who does the association's photography work, receive no money, not even car expenses, but instead sometimes go into the red on their own budget.

This week, 5000 volunteer workers, whom the Boerners have helped recruit and organize, will conduct a door-to-door fund drive in St. Louis city and county. The research, for which they are collecting money, which may eventually find the cure for muscular dystrophy, is the reason for Helen Boerner's devotion to the cause.

"PEOPLE ask me how I can do it," she said, calmly, as she poured coffee for us in the kitchen of her home. "After 15 years of living with dystrophy, you learn to control your emotions. I find I still become upset if I'm home alone. I tend to dwell on it. Yet I don't find it hard showing his pictures or talking about Donald to an organization. It's as if I'm a different person in front of an audience.

"People ask why I do it. Well, not being able to do anything for so many years, seeing your child waste away, you feel helpless. When this organization was formed in 1950, I felt there wasn't enough I could do."

She set up the screen in her living room, drew the blinds, and showed us the 15-minute film of her son's life.

"We started taking these films when he was a baby," she explained, "just as people take home movies, never dreaming they'd be used for this. As he grew older, and we realized what was in store for him, we couldn't bring ourselves to take pictures. But then it came to me that these pictures could help educate people about muscular dystrophy so we began taking them again. The public can see pictures of different children in different stages of the disease, but there were no pictures showing one child's life. We thought ours might be used to show how this disease progresses and how it can strike a normal child."

As the early films show, Donald was a strong, healthy baby with a straight back and husky legs. He stood and walked like any normal toddler.

But at two years of age, he showed certain symptoms which worried his observant mother. He began to fall over nothing at all. Standing up seemed difficult. He was more content to sit and play than to run around. His parents took him to a hospital where they diagnosed his trouble as flat feet, prescribed expensive special shoes for him to wear. Still Donald fell down.

LITTLE DONALD BOERNER, HEALTHY AND STURDY BEFORE MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY TOOK HOLD OF HIS BODY. HE DIED AT 17.

BY THE TIME DONALD WAS NINE HE WAS IN A WHEELCHAIR.

A year later, Donald's calf muscles began to swell. Doctors at the clinic took a biopsy. Gently, they explained to the Boerners that Donald had muscular dystrophy, a rare disease for which there was neither cure nor treatment. Donald would get weaker and weaker until he was a helpless invalid in a wheel chair. He probably would not live to maturity. Looking at her little boy, dressed in his sailor suit, chattering happily as they rode home, Helen Boerner found it impossible to believe.

AT first they refused to accept the diagnosis. They tried other doctors. They determined they would build their son up with exercise. Donald took regular treatments of gelatine and vitamin E, since it was believed that a vitamin E deficiency caused the disease. On one of her trips to the doctor, Mrs. Boerner was advised not to have any more children as muscular dystrophy sometimes affects more than one in a family. She was already in the early stages of pregnancy. Her second son, Kenny, now 14 and a student at Mehlville High School, is healthy and normal.

By the time Donald was six, he had trouble riding a tricycle; once he fell off and fractured his skull. As the movies show, he approached inclines cautiously, had to put his hands on his knees to help himself up from a stooping position. He was always on the tag end of games. ("Donald's the last one around the corner," his mother comments of a birthday party race.) And yet he got along fairly well. His first school teacher, Mrs. Boerner recalls bitterly, told her there was nothing wrong with Donald, that she was spoiling him.

Soon Donald was unable to attend regular school. His parents sold their home in Velda Village, moved to the city so Donald could attend Elias Michael school for handicapped children. To cut expenses they bought an older house in south St. Louis. Boerner, a Laclede Gas Company employe, renovated it completely, installed his own furnace, built a bric' garage. His wife, a beauty operator before marriage, began giving permanents at home.

By the time Donald was eight, three-year-old Kenny was pushing him around in a wagon. The family was facing the sickening reality of Donald's gradual deterioration. Soon he could not sit up, hold a glass of water, turn the pages of a book. His legs and feet curled up as muscles were attacked.

Throughout the years there were spurts of hope, news of a cure, a research, always ending in disappointment. But gradually muscular dystrophy was brought to public attention. Comedy team Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis adopted it as their project after talking to a little boy in a wheel chair one night.

"What would you like to be when you grow up?" they asked.

"If I grow up," was the matter of fact reply, "I'd like to be a comedian."

MRS. WALTER BOERNER . . . GIVES AN AVERAGE OF SIX EDUCATIONAL TALKS A WEEK.

A YEAR BEFORE HE DIED, DONALD'S WASTED MUSCLES HAD DRAWN UP FEET AND LEGS.

In 1950 the national Muscular Dystrophy Association was formed and fund raising began. In five years, 66 research projects have started, including one at Washington University. In the beginning fund raising was individual and sporadic. One year Helen Boerner wheeled Donald into every store on Cherokee street asking for donations. She and her husband sold Christmas cards, cleared $1600 that year.

IN 1953, postmen donated their services to collect for the campaign. In 1954 city and county firemen performed the job. This year, under campaign chairman Elmer Kerckhoff, a large army of volunteers are helping county firemen in the drive. Almost every one who meets Helen Boerner becomes a volunteer — teen-agers from Mehlville High, the postman who delivers her mail.

Meanwhile another of her individual efforts gave the national cause a boost. In 1953 she wrote the story of her son's disease. It was published in Look magazine in 1953 under the title, "My Son Dies a Little Each Day."

"Not being a writer, I wrote and rewrote and tore up what I'd written," she says. "And yet I had to get it down. I knew Donald's life was so typical of the life of every muscular dystrophy child, it had to be written. While I wrote it, Donald was in a critical stage and every few minutes I had to leave my work to pick him up or help him down."

Mentally alert to the end, Donald was confirmed in the Lutheran Church his parents attended, graduated from school with the help of a home teacher.

"He was an intelligent boy and knew what he was facing, but still he had a will to live," his mother recalls. "As long as I was doing something it gave him hope even though he knew his case was hopeless. I remember the first time I appeared on television. I came home and he said, 'Gee mom, I didn't think it was in you.' It did a lot for his morale."

THE story in the magazine brought thousands of letters from all over the world. Donald's big interest was sports cars and the Sport Car Club of America made him an honorary member and took up the cause. One of its members sent copies of Donald's story as Christmas gifts to all his friends and relatives in lieu of their usual presents, he and his wife sent a check for $1000 to the association. An appearance on "Strike It Rich" brought the Boerners a badly needed iron lung.

One night in January 1954, Helen Boerner was out making a talk on dystrophy. On her way home it occurred to her that they should have a picture of Donald in his iron lung to stress the importance of that apparatus in making the young victims comfortable in their final stages when breathing was difficult. When she reached home, she learned that Donald had died.

"We all expected Walter and Helen to drop out of the organization since they no longer had a personal stake in it," one member says, "but instead they've worked harder than ever. Helen says she can't give up, it would be 'letting Donald down'."

When she made her first speech to the Variety Club, Helen Boerner recalls she was so sick with fright, she "blacked out" on her way to the meeting. But now speechmaking is just "something you get used to." Every time she reads the name of a club president in the paper, she calls him or her and asks if she can put on a program on dystrophy. Her present schedule is a hectic one.

"IT'S hard to plan meals for my husband and our son, Kenny, who is a wonderful boy and has had to help us so much," she says. "I do all my own housework, always have. I have to do my washing and ironing at night because I'm busy every day, even Sundays, at church meetings. I know I'm overdoing and it's costing more than we can afford but I'm in this now and I have to see it through.

"I know so many other children with dystrophy, their parents come to talk to me. I have to do something for them."

There are more than 1000 children in this area with muscular dystrophy. Helen Boerner's film closes with pictures of some of them. One is an orphan in a home; the Boerners took Donald's wheel chair to him. Some are only children, some have brothers or sisters with the disease, some come from large, otherwise healthy families. One boy, for instance, has a brother who is a professional ball player.

Helen Boerner's commentary brings out the tragedy of each case. Of a wasted 23-year-old, "You wouldn't believe his mother has a picture of him wearing a baseball suit and carrying a bat." Of another child, "He weighed 140 pounds when this picture was made; now he weighs 65."

And of a toddler who might be Donald all over again:

"This little boy is now in a wheel chair. He keeps asking his parents, 'When can I walk again?' We don't have the answer as yet. Maybe you can help us find it."

Movie Newcomers--John Derek

A 'Pretty Boy,' but There's More to Him Than That

By Edward A. Harris

(FOURTH OF A SERIES.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 19.

THEY sometimes call him "Pretty Boy." With a show of annoyance, he doesn't deny he has an attractive face.

But despite this handicap John Derek is knocking at the door of film stardom. At least he thinks it may be a handicap, because casting directors are likely to overlook any real talent that may lie behind a handsome facade.

On movie and television screens, Derek has proved he can act. He's among the top idols of the bobby-soxers and is moving on to capture the adults. Now signed to a long-term Paramount contract, Derek has impressed studio heads with his performance as Davey Bishop, a double-crossing young Westerner, in "Run for Cover," and as Joshua in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments."

The picture that marked him as a real find, a few years earlier, was "Knock on Any Door," a story of roughnecks and reformatories in which Derek played the key role of Nick Romano. His fan mail and popularity with the fan magazines zoomed vertically with the release of that film. He next was given the dramatic part of young Tom Stark in Robert Penn Warren's Pulitzer Prize-winning "All the King's Men," which won an Academy Award. All told he's been in 14 films.

Derek, who is 29 years old, comes naturally to the world of celluloid, but was nearly sidetracked. He was born Derek Harris in Hollywood, son of Lawson Harris, a motion picture executive; his mother was a screen beauty who appeared in early Hal Roach and DeMille productions. When Derek was 5 his parents were divorced, and a close friend of the family, Russell Harlan, a cameraman, helped guide Derek until his teens.

Lawson Harris wanted his son, nicknamed "Dere," to become a painter. The boy tried, but became increasingly restless. He had a measure of ability as an artist, but as he grew to nearly six feet and became a lithe, muscled young man he yearned more for an active, outdoor career.

ABOUT THIS TIME some friends of the family, the Tom Moores, decided young Derek was a good screen prospect and approached his father. He didn't agree. There were some spirited discussions on the subject and finally, at the age of 17, John won the argument. He was promptly signed by David O. Selznick, and for a full year Selznick's drama school staff groomed John for his screen debut. But just as he was about to be cast in his first film, he was drafted by the Army.

After service in the Philippines and with the Army of Occupation in Japan, he returned to Hollywood to pound studio pavements. Twentieth Century-Fox finally signed him but eventually dropped his option. But Derek, then as now full of smoldering fire, a controlled intensity that surpasses mere ambition, believed in himself. He had read "Knock on Any Door" and literally knocked on the door of Columbia's lot, seeking the part of Nick Romano. It was Humphrey Bogart who turned the tide, suggesting that the intense, handsome young man with the big hazel eyes be given a test. A contract followed, and Derek was on his way.

JOHN DEREK . . . HAS PROVED HE CAN ACT.

LOOKING BACK AT IT, Derek very modestly belittles the bumps he took along the road to Hollywood.

"I've had it very easy," he told me as he lounged about in his dressing cottage on the Paramount lot, attired in a tight pullover jersey, slacks and sandals.

"I just fell into movies," he went on. "If anyone didn't deserve it, it was I. My baby-face got me in, not talent, and my face has kept me in."

He lit a cigarette, inhaled it deeply. When he spoke, he did so quickly, earnestly. "Oh sure, 'Knock on Any Door' was a lucky break for me, my part was simply cut out for me. Then some pretty sound offers came along from other studios, but Columbia wasn't in a loanout mood. I was cast in films that had me playing parts too old for me — over-matched, you might call it. That wasn't so good."

BUT DEREK got over that hump and on to films at other studios that suited him more. Still, too many "pouting boy" pictures came his way after awhile. "When my features are relaxed, I do have a sort of sullen look," he explained. "So right away I had to be the pouting boy, the fellow with virtually no emotion. That's not me. I've got a lot of emotion."

He has so much emotion, in fact, that despite a strong underlying belief in his acting abilities he was "scared stiff" not long ago when, after considerable persuasion, he agreed to do a scene from "A Place in the Sun" on the Lux Video television program.

"I was afraid I might flub it," he recounted, grinding out his cigarette and popping a peppermint into his mouth. "When I finally said I'd do it I insisted that if I pulled a fluke I'd quit right in the middle of the performance and go on home and the producers would have to make any apologies they could to the viewers."

He acknowledges that he's fiercely competitive, and needs praise to buoy his spirits and keep up his confidence. Praise came aplenty after that television show, for Derek's performance was so impressive that studio offers rained into his agent's office.

"I got it," he went on with a quick smile. "I walked away feeling real lighthearted and contented."

Derek has two children, Russell, 5, and Sean, a daughter, almost 2. His wife is the former Pati Behrs, who was a Twentieth Century-Fox starlet fresh from France when he married her late in 1948. Pati was a ballet dancer, Derek a newly-discharged war veteran, and they met in the studio dramatic class when Derek was signed by the studio.

He volunteered that as husband and wife they've had their ups and downs. "But I think we've learned to make allowances, to be more tolerant of each other's traits and whims," he said. Of the two, Derek at once acknowledges that he is by far the more restless spirit.

"I think the marriage is going to work out," he added. "I hope so. But one never knows. It might end tomorrow."

He was very nearly right, as it turned out. About two weeks after our talk Derek filed suit for divorce, alleging cruelty. Subsequently his wife filed an order to show cause why she should not have custody of the children. Friends hope for a reconciliation.

Handwriting Criticism

By Christopher Billopp

WHEN a person has been continually criticized by people who protest that they cannot make out a word of his writing, he may give in and decide to do something about it.

So the next time he sits down to write he will devote his attention not to what he is writing but how it is written. He will pretend he is a child again and write as he did as a child, before his character developed and, along with it, the illegibility of his handwriting.

He will not dash ahead trying to write as rapidly as he thinks. On the contrary, he will take time and make his letters large and well-rounded. He will assure himself that words do not fade away into curlycues at the end.

He will go back in memory to the old days when he wrote on ruled paper in elementary school. He will try his best to write in such a studied way that his writing will appear to be that of a child of not more than 8 or 10 years.

HE WILL REREAD HIS WRITING CAREFULLY and if, by chance, a word should not appear clear he will erase it and rewrite it.

It is not work of which he can be proud. It is lacking in evidences of character. In fact, he has deliberately given the impression that his is a case of arrested development. But he flatters himself that, at least, it is clear.

THOUGH IT may make him ridiculous, he will persist so that they will have no reason to complain. He will show them that no sacrifice is too great if only they are satisfied.

Proud of his handiwork, he will show it to them. But what was the use of the effort? For they take the writing, look at it this way and that, shake their heads and reply: "I'm sorry. I can't make it out at all."

Harnessing Energy of Sun

Science Is Making Strides in Putting Solar Power To Work—Will It Soon Figure in Your Everyday Life?

(Will you soon have a solar-heated home . . . cook on a solar stove . . . operate your home appliances with energy from the sun? Some of these things already are happening experimentally. This is the first of three articles telling what science is doing to harness the fabulous energy of the sun for use in your everyday life.)

By Charles P. Arnot

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (INS).

MOST weekdays, a faculty-student group cooks luncheon on a New York University terrace without fire or electricity. Across the Hudson river in Murray Hill, N.J., light bulbs flash off and on without being connected to an electric circuit. And at the Atomic Energy Commission's Oak Ridge, Tenn., laboratories, air and water are being turned into synthetic food.

There are no magicians behind this magic.

This is the exploratory work of men and women who are learning a little more every day how to harness the source of all energy in the universe—the sun.

They are some of the pioneers in a new international search for the formula that will enable man's old and valued friend to provide heat for your home, power for your tools and food for your stomach. It's a slow, tedious and often frustrating job.

There it is—sunshine—free for the taking. Every hour, the earth is bathed in the energy equivalent of 21 billion tons of coal as the solar rays flash across 93,000,000 miles.

When the skies are clear, the solar bundles deposited every day on the average United States rooftop contain potential power 500 times greater than all of the electricity used by a typical American home.

It's the "taking" that has baffled man over the ages.

Science needed 40 years after the late Albert Einstein first mentioned the atom to rock the New Mexico desert with the first atomic explosion.

But even in the face of today's highly-advanced technology, the most optimistic experts are forced to concede that no satisfactory, economical approach to large-scale capture of the sun's phenomenal energy is in sight.

So far, the experts say, the simple, easy things have been tried. Now the search is becoming a quest with a new note of urgency.

Twenty-seven countries today are engaged in solar research and experiments. Within two or three years, most of the major industrial plants in the United States are expected to have their own solar energy laboratories.

The Soviet Union is operating the world's first solar institute.

New experiments are being pressed at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which already has spent some $500,000 on sun-power projects since 1938.

The Ford Foundation has made a $45,000 grant to the research division of New York University's College of Engineering for detailed research and development of a practical sun stove.

Earlier this month, an international conference on the scientific basis of applied solar energy was held at the University of Arizona in Tucson, with scientists from more than 20 nations attending. Preceding the conference an exhibit of engines, stoves and other articles in which the sun has been put to use as a source of energy was held at Phoenix.

WHY this sudden burst of activity about one of nature's oldest and best-kept secrets?

For one thing, the world is fast devouring its fuel resources—coal, oil, gas and even fissionable materials. Scientists now talk of the reserves lasting for "decades"—not hundreds or thousands of years.

So tremendous is the world's appetite for power and energy that one scientist has said the available coal, gas and oil will be exhausted in 2023, only 68 years from now. The rapid population increase and improved living standards are certain to make even greater future demands.

Many areas, as in India, either lack their own fuel reserves or the means to import fuel on a large scale. As a result, low-income families have burned the only fuel available—the vegetation around them. Forests have disappeared. Soil erosion has followed.

Sun power for cooking could improve the living standard of a billion people between Calcutta and Casablanca.

Another reason for this intensified search for a new practical sun harness has long-range implications. It is what Russia's solar expert, Prof. V. A. Baum, describes as the need for "improving the heat balance of the earth" by pushing back the deserts.

IT is estimated that something between one-quarter and one-third of the world's surface does not receive "normal" rainfall—enough to turn the ever-spreading arid and semi-arid wastelands into productive areas.

It is a problem affecting 35 nations and 18 dependent territories on all six continents. Even in parts of the United States, overgrazing and overplanting have created "man-made" dustbowls.

Some experts warn that further spread of these parched deserts could increase the earth's heat to the point of melting the polar icecaps. They say that would raise the sea level and force man to seek refuge in the mountains.

The solution advanced by many scientists is to harness the power of the same sun that dried and parched the land. Solar energy, they say, can be used simultaneously to desalt the ocean and pump underground water.

Palmer Putnam, a recognized American authority on the world's energy supplies, has given this critical estimate of solar energy's immediate future:

"Bright technically, but dismal economically."

Today's scientists can measure the sun's tremendous power. They have developed dozens of experimental devices to capture it. The big problems now are efficiency and cost.

What fraction of this great solar energy can be converted practically to useful purposes and what is the cost of the machine or device for such conversion?

Necessity may provide the answer—and sooner than you expect.

REMEMBER these names: Telkes . . . Pearson . . . Hottel . . . Abbot. They are solar scientists. They are convinced the sun can become an inexhaustible source of power and energy for a world which is depleting its fuel stocks at an alarming rate.

Their conviction is backed by more than words. At the Bell Telephone Laboratories in Murray, N. J., captured sunlight has been turned into enough electricity to flash a light bulb and run a small beach radio.

This newest solar sensation was invented a year ago by three Bell scientists—Gerald L. Pearson, Calvin S. Fuller and Daryl M. Chapin.

This year they are giving the solar batteries their first practical test by putting them to work charging storage batteries on telephone lines serving the sunny city of Americus in Georgia.

The Bell scientists found that electricity could be produced by permitting sunlight to fall on the second most abundant element in the earth's crust—silicon.

When they emerge from a delicate mixing and refining process, thin silicon wafers become extremely sensitive to light. A square yard of these wafers can deliver enough power from the sun on a bright day to light a 100-watt bulb.

What made this discovery so revolutionary was the use of solar light instead of heat. It's roughly the same principle that moves the needle on your photographic light meter.

In the brightest sun, the present experimental models have turned 11 per cent of the sun's light into electricity. This, the Bell scientists say, is an efficiency comparable to that of the best gasoline engines. And they expect the present experimental efficiency to double.

It has been estimated that a whole rooftop of silicon wafers could heat and light a home. The big drawback at present is the prohibitive cost of silicon manufacture.

But the solar experts recall that the United States so far has spent 13 billion dollars in developing atomic devices. A fraction of that, they say, might usher in the solar age.

When the skies are clear over New York university's college of engineering, Hungarian-born Dr. Maria Telkes cooks meals in a glistening aluminum contraption heated only by the sun.

Even when the temperature outdoors is only 70 degrees, the Telkes sun stove develops about 300 degrees and cooks hamburgers in 35 minutes. It's been up as high as 450 degrees. And with a cheap chemical inside, it can retain heat for an hour after sundown.

"It will bake, broil, roast and toast," Dr. Telkes says. "Everything except whistle."

The whistling is reserved to those who gaze in amazement on the strange stove for the first time. It follows the general shape of a cube with flaps opening upward and outward. They are glistening aluminum, designed to reflect the sun's rays into the stove. The top is black painted to absorb the reflected rays, and the inside is insulated with glass wool.

Dr. Telkes, who was named "woman engineer of the year" in 1952, says even the experimental model has proved so practical that there is hope that cooking with sunshine may change the living standards of millions in fuel-short arid areas.

She believes a perfected model, when mass-produced, must sell for around $5 to be within the means of those who need it most. In India alone, the market is estimated at 100,000,000.

THE cheapest solar cooker now on the market costs $14—too much for India's poor. It was invented by Dr. M. H. Ghai, an Indian who used the principle of bouncing the sun's rays from a large metal reflector to a hot plate. It can prepare the traditional Indian dinner of lentils and rice in 30 minutes. But few have sold.

An experimental solar rice cooker has been developed by Seizo Goto at the Goto Optical Laboratory in Japan. The reflections from its 36 mirrors can boil water within an hour.

The "grand old man" of American solar researchers, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, has turned a portable reflector to another use. The retired secretary of the Smithsonian Institution has built a two-horsepower solar motor which he believes will be useful on farms. He estimates it can be manufactured and sold for about $1000, but it has one big drawback. It can operate only when the sun shines.

The same Dr. Abbot developed in 1937 a one-half horsepower solar machine which was used for the first solar-powered radio broadcasts in the United States and Canada.

Back in 1948, Dr. Telkes confounded the skeptics by building a solar-heated house in chilly Dover, Mass., on the northern fringe of the so-called "solar-feasibility" area.

The Telkes solar unit since has provided 95 per cent of the four-room house's heating requirements. The heat has been trapped up to temperatures of 300 degrees by a battery of glass and metal collectors on the south side of the building's sloping roof.

It is then pumped by a fan system to a basement storage bin containing several tons of a crystal-like chemical called glauber's salt. As the salt crystals melt, they absorb and hold the heat.

Whenever the temperature falls below a certain point, the crystals solidify and give off great amounts of heat. This is used to heat water piped through a conventional radiator-circulating system.

IN the January-February cold, or when the sun hides for several days, it is necessary to supplement the solar unit with electric heaters.

A 1200-gallon tank was used for storing sun-heated water in the experimental solar house built by Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the banks of the Charles river in Cambridge, Mass., in 1949.

The sun's heat was trapped on the roof by a battery of glass-covered metal plates which heat water circulating through pipes. This is the same principle used in most solar water heaters now used in an estimated 20,000 Florida homes.

After studying the water and air temperatures in the four-room house over five years, the M.I.T. engineers concluded that they would have to apply new technical knowledge before it would be economical to pit such solar heating against oil, gas or coal in a climate as cold as New England.

M.I.T.'s Prof. Hoyt C. Hottel, who headed the experiment, says his studies have shown that probably the most significant of a half dozen different ways to trap solar energy is that used in an ordinary greenhouse.

This is the principle of converting light energy to heat, or what is called the "flat-plate" collector. Light enters through glass—which is transparent to short or light waves—and is converted to heat by the objects inside. The low-level heat is trapped because glass is opaque to the long-wave heat radiation.

The problems of flat-plate collectors are mostly those of cost. The more layers of glass and the better insulation, the greater the heat recovery—and the higher the cost. It was this economy factor that mainly discouraged the M.I.T. engineers.

There are thousands of United States homes with big southern "picture" windows, but only half-dozen real solar houses. So far, a majority of the experts seem to agree that the only real practical future for the real solar home is in the southern United States, or in sunny places with high altitudes.

Two exceptions are Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Duncan who have lived in their solar home bordering a Flossmoor, Ill., cornfield for the past 15 years. They say life for them began in 1940.

THIS pioneer solar home in the Midwest was built by architect George Fred Keck whose futuristic designs created a public stir at the 1933 Century of Progress fair in Chicago.

The Duncans say even on zero days they enjoy a comfortable 70 degrees indoors. But the Flossmoor home also requires an artificial heating plant because the Keck design made no provision for heat storage against rainy or overcast days.

One novel storage plant was developed for a solar house in Nogales, Ariz. The collected heat was diverted to boulders in a pit under the lawn. There it could be stored for use at night or in cold weather.

At Princeton University's architectural laboratory, identical twins Victor and Aladar Olgyay are experimenting with adapting building design to all climatic features including what they call greater "solair orientation."

That, of course, stands for more sun—and more air.

In Rome

Long and Short of Spaghetti

By Stan Delaplane

ROME.

THE TRASTEVERE section of Rome is the workingman's district. An ancient part of crumbling medieval buildings where candles burn beneath the Madonna over the door.

There are no sidewalks and the streets are cobbled. The restaurants are inexpensive and the food is excellent.

It has become chic among the elegant Via Veneto set to cross the Tiber and eat with the working classes. And Alfred's in Trastevere and Cisterna are almost as crowded as Passetta's or Cappriccio's up on the hills of the rich.

I went over with Miss Gaby Lalonde, a French-Canadian journalist, who said Alfredo's and Cisterna were for tourists. Instead, she chose Garibaldiina on Via Garabaldi, near the Roman gate where countrymen brought their wine to be weighed and taxed as it entered the Eternal City.

And this is where I learned about spaghetti.

"This is spaghetti a la carbonara," said the owner. "It is the way the carbonari make it. The charcoal burners."

The carbonari are as old as Rome. They are itinerant workers, moving from place to place buying wood rights to lands.

"THE SPAGHETTI is put in boiling water with a little salt. This is important. If you put it in before the water boils, it cooks to mush. You boil it about 10 minutes but it depends on the quality of the spaghetti.

"You should take out a piece and cut it on your finger. If it shows a little dot of white on the inside, let it boil more while you count to 100 and it is done.

"Americans cook their spaghetti too long. They make it like rice. Spaghetti should be firm.

While the spaghetti is cooking, you fry little pieces of bacon. You put this in a deep dish and beat up one egg for each person. Put the bacon with a little grease, a little oil, pepper and parmesan cheese with the eggs.

"Now lift out the spaghetti with two forks so that it drains lightly but doesn't stick together. Put the spaghetti in hot and stir it around. The spaghetti cooks the eggs as it is coated. Then serve it quickly."

It was excellent spaghetti and was served with white wine. Afterwards we went over to the square of Santa Maria in Trastevere where the washing hung out the "upper windows" of the antique buildings and a great fountain sent waterfalls into the clouded moonlight.

THERE IS a little bar on the corner, next to Alfredo's and we had the little half cups of black Italian coffee. An elderly woman came by picking up cigarette ends. Miss Lalonde asked her how it went.

"I am doing the misery," she said. Meaning she was doing life the hard way. We asked her to have coffee.

"Well, maybe I will," she said.

Miss Lalonde said the cigarette ends would be cut open. The tobacco would be mixed and rolled into cheap cigarettes to be sold one at a time.

After a while, some musicians came in for coffee. They said life in Italy was hard and poor. One musician was 25 and, in a country where children go to work at 8, had just managed to find his first job.

He worked as an iron monger and his hands were rough and dirty and badly broken. He made a joke that he couldn't get a manicure. When he showed his hands, the girl ran away.

But he was terribly ashamed of his talented musical hands. And he held them together or put them in his pockets. And about midnight, we all shook hands and we went out to the car beside the fountain and drove through the narrow cobbled streets. Across the Tiber and back up the Roman hill where everybody has manicures and jobs and whole packages of fresh cigarettes.

Music Before Baseball

Bill Lewis Gave Up Game for Singing Career

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.

FIVE years ago, Bill Lewis had to make a decision—should he sign a professional baseball contract or should he aim for a career in music?

Today, having decided on music, 23-year-old Bill Lewis is one of the nation's leading young tenors and is seen regularly on NBC-TV's Caesar's Hour (on KSD-TV, 7 p.m., three out of four Mondays).

Bill, who has signed with Sid Caesar for a minimum of 15 appearances this season and 20 next season, was a shortstop in 1950, playing for a minor league baseball team in Missouri. At the end of the summer he was offered a contract by the St. Louis Cardinal organization but he turned it down in favor of a voice scholarship at Colorado University.

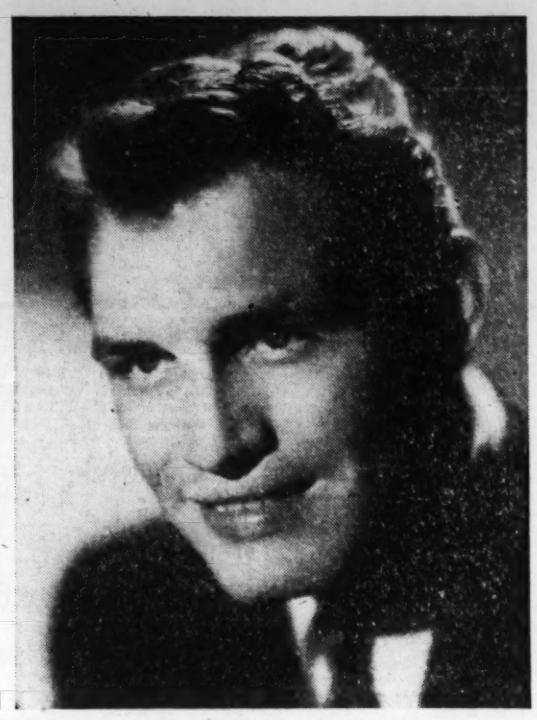
WHILE studying during the winter season, Bill sang for tips in the Gold Nugget—the site of the "face on the barroom floor" — at the Teller House in Central City, Colo., and was a chorus boy in the opera. After his freshman year, he switched to Texas Christian University, with a scholarship to study under Karl Kritz, a former conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The baseball problem came up once again. He made the T.C.U. team as a sophomore, but found that he could not play ball and study singing at the same time. He again chose singing. Bill became a Texas favorite, singing and playing in stock at the Dallas Lyric Theatre and the Fort Worth Civic Opera.

In 1952, he joined the Pittsburgh Light Opera Company and performed in 30 musical comedies and light operas with that group before coming to New York on Labor day, 1953. He enrolled in the graduate musicology department of N.Y.U., took a room in a Greenwich Village boarding house and received a scholarship to the Hunter College Opera Workshop.



BILL LEWIS . . . SID CAESAR GOT SAMPLES, THEN SIGNED HIM.

IN 1954, Bill sang with the chorus of the NBC Opera Theater and later with the "Chicago Theater of the Air"; the Paul Whiteman show and toured with the New England Opera Company. In March, 1955, Bill Lewis won the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air award.

In April, 1955, Sid Caesar invited him to a party. The following week, he was asked back to sing again and was signed for three programs. After his third appearance last season, Caesar gave him his present contract.

Bill has a wide voice range, and can sing up to A above high C. His success hasn't kept him from working on his voice and he is continuing his studies under voice coach Joseph Regneas.

His auspicious start as a popular singer apparently has put an end to any operatic ambitions he might have had. The pay is better—much, much better—this way.

Bill is a natural athlete and keeps his six-foot, 175-pound frame in good condition by frequent workouts in Manhattan gymnasiums. A native of Tulsa, Okla., he now makes his home in New York.

YOUR RADIO THEATER, on KSD at 4:05 this afternoon, will star Maureen O'Hara and Tony Barrett in "Soft Hands and a Six-Gun," about an Irish girl who arrives in the Old West to visit her uncle, only to find that he had been killed by a Western badman. She organizes a band of vigilantes to bring the man to justice.

One of the features of NBC's Monitor on KSD today will be a visit to the Customs Inspectors' School in Manhattan, at 1:30 this afternoon. Television Letter Box

FOR MONTHS I have been reading complaints in the TV Letters Column about the Medic program. People who can't face reality can easily turn the small dial on their television set. We all would like to live in a dream world where there would be nothing worse than a common cold, but since this is impossible, let's face the facts and try to enlighten ourselves on the significance of diseases. Also to help us understand our doctors much better so that we may co-operate with them.

MRS. C. E. REICHERT.

Several neighbors gathered at 9 a.m. last Sunday for the Protestant Hour on KSD-TV. We were so impressed with Dr. Skinner's message and delivery that we hope he will be a regular feature on your program. We each felt that he was speaking directly to us. After the program we all went to church. Thank you for the program.

EMILIE WAGNER.

I watched two of your Matinee Theater plays, and no more for me. I was terribly disappointed. Too many commercials, story not good, and actors vying for camera shots. Maybe soap operas are not high class, but I'll take "Guiding Light" to any of the Matinee Theater stories.

MRS. JENNIE WATKINS.

Hurrah for Wide Wide World, an eye-filling demonstration of what television can do for geography, history, and the people who make up this great land of ours. The technical work is excellent, the commentary reserved, the idea magnificent. NBC certainly appears to have caught the germ of greatness here.

As Crosby Sees It

Macabre Stories Light In Hitchcock's Hands

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.

THE BEST THING about "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" is Alfred Hitchcock presenting. Hitchcock, as I suppose everyone now knows, is a man of redoubtable circumference. In fact, he might be described as one of those Englishmen on whom the sun never sets. And he has a face like a slightly malevolent Kewpie doll.

On his program (on KWK-TV, 8:30 p.m. Sundays), the physiognomy and body are first outlined gently in pencil, then inked in. Finally, the man himself floats in, still in darkness. Then they turn the lights on and there he is. CBS, I guess, feels that it would be too great a shock to present the man, cold, without advance preparation, and maybe they're right.

Hitchcock then purports to give us some advance warning about the story we're about to hear. Actually, he does no such thing, his introductions being magnificently irrelevant. On a recent program, for instance, he held up a book: "I've been reading a mystery story. These paper back books will never replace hard covers. They're just good reading. This one is full of the sort of advice mother used to give: Walk softly and carry a big stick. Strike first!"

THIS HAD NOTHING at all to do with the story that followed. It was a macabre little tale about a business tycoon, played by Joseph Cotten, whose car is smashed by a bulldozer, operated by a road gang of convicts. The smashup totally paralyzes Cotten and he has to lie in the wreckage while the convicts steal his tires and his clothes. Finally, rescuers arrive but they think he's dead, too, and bundle him off to the morgue.

Meanwhile, Cotten's mind is fully active and his thoughts, expressed in narration, are hardly pleasant. Grim, isn't it? Of course, one thing about Hitchcock's handling of the macabre is a sort of sunny matter-of-fact quality which robs it of a lot of its sting. He just assumes that bodies lying around don't bother people especially and presently they don't. As a matter of fact, inert bodies hold great fascination for Hitchcock at the moment. His last picture, "The Trouble With Harry," was about another inert body. This one was quite dead, but it had to be played by a live actor (Philip Truex). It must be restful for the actors — just lying there. Years ago, when the deadpan school of acting first gripped Hollywood I had a terrible premonition that acting would some day come to this, and it has.

AFTER THE STORY is over, the Hitchcock visage appears again, to sign off, as it were, and these little messages are also worth listening to. One sign-off went like this: "And as the cold New England sun sinks behind the coroner's office, we take our leave of New Hampshire and prepare ourselves for the chant of the sponsor's message. Then I'll float back."

After the chant of the sponsor's message, he floated back to say: "You may now leave your seats, chat with friends, have a smoke—but remember to come back after the intermission." The intermission, he added casually, would be one week long.

This one, starring John Forsythe, was about a man returning to his home town to track down his father's murderer, only to discover that he's the guy who did it, a tricky ending I have no intention of explaining. I throw it in only as a clue to the sort of fare Hitchcock dishes out week after week. I find them entertaining, very well acted and produced.

Music And Music Makers

The Nature of Genius

By Thomas B. Sherman

THE nature of genius is generally regarded as something beyond analysis even though a few persons have been placed in that category without a dissenting voice. The late Delbert Clark, a journalist and educator of far-ranging interests, made a close study of genius during the later years of his life and apparently reached certain definite conclusions. As a result he evidently believed that the special properties of genius could be isolated and used thereafter as a standard of measurement. In any case he drew up a list of geniuses, so nominated because they met his requirements, and specified the qualifications for admission of each member. The list, with supporting arguments, was published in a recent issue of the Saturday Review.

I was particularly interested because the list included only one musician. This suggested that Mr. Clark had given a lower rating to music, as an important field of creative activity, than to the other arts. A closer reading however did not confirm such an impression and made clear, moreover, that Beethoven was the single representative of his profession because he was the only one who met the test.

THE SUBSTANCE of the test was as follows: A genius is one who "adds to the permanent knowledge in any field something of value which wasn't there before" and it cannot be "wholly derivative or purely accidental." Furthermore genius is habitually manifested by "a continuous flow of creative thought and activity."

As may be seen Mr. Clark was trying to reduce his criteria to concrete, objective terms but it is also evident that their application would still be influenced by subjective evaluation. Who is to decide, for instance, what is "wholly derivative." To determine the degree of derivation even in the sciences would be difficult enough. In the arts, and particularly in music, it is impossible. Every composer is derivative because he is using a language, a means of communication, and must speak in terms that can be understood. The degree of his originality cannot possibly be judged by the novelty of his formal devices; if it could be, Wagner would unquestionably be considered a greater operatic composer than Mozart.

BEETHOVEN IS RECOGNIZED as a genius by Mr. Clark because "he brought polyphony to the highest stage of its development and, more important, reconciled it with the classic form which had dominated the art of his immediate predecessors." This is factually dubious but even if it were not, it locates the heart of Beethoven's genius in the apparatus he employed rather than in the quality of his communicated thought and feeling. I do not mean to suggest that body and spirit are separable. On the level of genius, certainly, they are actively mutual; but in Beethoven's case the expansion of formal outlines were caused by the pressure of what he had to say.

Who is to judge this? Who can apply a satisfactory tape measure to Beethoven's thought and spirit? Well, some persons are better qualified than others but nobody with musical experience would admit that he should be debarred. And most of those who unhesitatingly admit Beethoven to the ranks of genius, do so because of subjective considerations. He has the sound of genius and nobody less than a genius could lead us into such elevated realms of feeling.

IF BEETHOVEN is included for reasons that deal only with external and anatomical phenomena, Mozart is excluded on the same grounds. "Did he really originate?" asks Mr. Clark, "or did he, with towering talent and industry, build magnificent edifices of sound upon the firm foundation of form bequeathed to him by Bach and Haydn?"

Whatever the answer it would be irrelevant. A trained musician would have no difficulty in showing that Mozart was measurably more inventive than most of his eighteenth century contemporaries and predecessors whom he resembled in superficial particulars. In doing so they would be presenting evidence of Mozart's inner dynamism but such evidence would not be conclusive in itself. The G Minor quintet is a work of genius because musicians and musically minded persons are practically unanimous in saying it is so. He has been elected, in short, by a consensus of opinion over the years and it would be difficult to find a better criterion.

The uses of analysis need not be deprecated. As applied to music it yields important results which are suggestive of inner truths. So far as music is concerned, however, the laboratory test—weighing and measuring—cannot determine genius or even talent.

'Can-Can,' Cole Porter Musical, at American

JOHN TYERS AND RITA DIMITRI HAVE THE LEADS IN COLE PORTER'S HIT MUSICAL COMEDY, "CAN-CAN," WHICH OPENS AT THE AMERICAN THEATER TOMORROW NIGHT FOR TWO WEEKS.

"CAN-CAN," the Cole Porter-Abe Burrows musical comedy hit, comes to the American Theater tomorrow night for a two weeks run. Its Broadway run of 895 performances, or more than two years, ranks eighth among all-time musicals. It has just completed a Chicago run of 15 weeks.

Featured are Rita Dimitri as La Mome Pistache, John Tyers as Judge Forestier, George S. Irving in the comedy role of the sculptor, Ronnie Cunningham as Claudine, and Ferdinand Hilt as Jussac, the art critic.

The book, by Burrows, noted humorist who was co-writer of "Guys and Dolls" and "Silk Stockings," is laid in the Parisian night-life district of Montmarte in 1893. A group of young Montmarte laundresses spend their earnings dancing in the bistro operated by the fiery La Mome Pistache. The police don't approve, and Madame Pistache is constantly being dragged into court. An aristocratic and Puritanical young judge, Forestier, attempts to secure in person the evidence for her conviction. Porter's songs include "I Love Paris," "C'est Magnifique," "It's Alright With Me," and "The Can-Can." Jo Mielziner's scenery brings the rooftops of Paris to the stage. Michael Kidd devised the choreography.

The show was produced by Feuer and Martin, who now have a record of five straight hits ("Where's Charley?", "Guys and Dolls," "Can-Can," "The Boy Friend" and "Silk Stockings").

Miss Dimitri, born in Greece of a Greek father and French mother, has been a night-club entertainer in the United States for a number of years, but this is her first musical-comedy role. She has been compared to Ethel Merman. Tyers is a New York City Opera and Metropolitan Opera baritone who has sung numerous times here at Municipal Opera. Miss Cunningham, who has the role Gwen Verdon first flashed to fame in (Miss Verdon held it a year), also is a familiar figure to Muny Opera patrons as a comedienne-dancer. She played the Versailles in New York for five months, and has made many TV appearances.

Other bookings for the near future at the American will be "Bus Stop" the week of Dec. 26; "Lunatics and Lovers" the week of Jan. 2; "Plain and Fancy," for two weeks beginning Jan. 10; Dennis King in a new play, "Affair of Honor," the week of Jan. 23; "Tea and Sympathy," Jan. 30, and "The Bad Seed" Feb. 13.

Soprano Erna Sack Here Wednesday

Erna Sack, noted German coloratura soprano who is able to reach a sensational C above high C, will present her first St. Louis recital at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in Kiel Auditorium Opera House, under auspices of Entertainment Enterprises.

Her program will include: Gluck's "O del mio dolce ardor"; Mozart's "Cradle Song";

ERNA SACK.

Linda's aria from "Linda di Charmounix"; Schubert's "Die Forelle" ("The Trout"); "Nact and Traume" ("Night and Dreams"), "Wohin?" ("Whither?") and "Wiegenlied" ("Cradle Song"); Meyerbeer's "Shadow Song" from "Dinorah," Johann Strauss's "Tales of the Vienna Woods," and Swedish, Italian and German folk songs.

Miss Sack appeared with the St. Louis Grand Opera in 1937, the year she made her first concert tour of the United States. It was when with the Berlin Opera Company, with Bruno Walter conducting, she found in a rehearsal of "Don Pasquale" that she was able to reach C above high C. She sang in all the leading European operas. Richard Strauss changed some of his vocal works into higher ranges especially for her.

At the Movies

THE BIG KNIFE—Clifford Odets's savage view of ruthlessness and sycophancy in Hollywood is raw meat, has some pungent dialogue, and is well acted, although his own venom almost defeats its own purpose, going so far as to show a producer and his hatchetman plotting the murder of a troublesome starlet. With Jack Palance, Rod Steiger, Ida Lupino, Wendell Corey, Shelley Winters. Also FOOTSTEPS IN THE FOG, absorbing drama about a London man who murders his wife, and a housemaid who blackmails him. With Stewart Granger, Jean Simmons. LOEW'S STATE.

THE AFRICAN LION—Another superb job by a Walt Disney camera team, this one Alfred and Elma Milotte, in showing the animals of Central Africa. They took 30 months of patience and daring to make it. ORPHEUM.

COURT-MARTIAL—A lucid, intelligent and extremely absorbing British courtroom drama showing the emotional conflicts and clashes of personality underlying the rigid military procedure of the trial of an officer accused of pinching Army money. Finely directed by Anthony Asquith, and perceptively played by an excellent cast headed by David Niven, Margaret Leighton and Noelle Middleton. SHADY OAK.

Art and Artists

There Are Two Fred Carpenters

By H. S. Derrickson

"ANAGLYPHS by Fred J. Carpenter," an unprecedented full-scale exhibition of framed plaster reliefs, opened officially yesterday with a reception at Petit Pigalle, 4207 Lindell boulevard, but was hung a week earlier.

Already it has become St. Louis's most talked-of one-man show in 10 years. It has even led to widespread realization that there are two Fred Carpenters.

The Pigalle exhibitor, the more active of the two in recent years, is 51-year-old Fred James Carpenter, 277 DeBaliviere avenue, past president of the Society of Independent Artists and currently treasurer of the St. Louis chapter of Artists' Equity Association, national professional artists' organization.

His work has been chosen for five Missouri shows at City Art Museum. He has taken part in other regular group exhibits there and at nine other places in St. Louis. At the moment his work is on public view at five places beside Pigalle. The Teak gallery is his agent.

He has won 12 recent awards, including first prize for modern painting in last September's Kirkwood art fair. On that occasion the natural, long-standing confusion over his identity got into print when the Washington University Alumni Bulletin picked up a news account and wrote of the prize-winner as "Fred Carpenter '04."

This, of course, referred to long-time prize-winner Fred Green Carpenter, art instructor from 1904 to 1950 at Washington University, where his wife, Mildred, now teaches evening classes since her husband's retirement. Just to increase chances for error, both Mildred and Fred James Carpenter (no relation, mind you) are part-time portrait artists, with Mildred the busier.

AMONG THE PIGALLE exhibitor's commissioned portraits is an excellent likeness of Miss Marion Streett, Art Museum education staff member.

When the slip appeared in print, Jack Carpenter, KMOX continuity chief, enjoyed a laugh on his older brother.

"Fred Carpenter," he said, "I never knew before just how old you are."

Fred James Carpenter, who claims no link with Washington University, studied art two years at the University of Illinois before enrolling in 1925 at the Art Institute, Chicago. After a year there, he worked seven years as a professional artist and contemporary furniture designer in Chicago. This experience seems relevant to his evolution of what most observers describe as a new art form that consorts particularly well with modern interiors.

THE ARTIST HIMSELF thinks of his "anaglyph" as an adaptation of existing forms. The term, he points out, is an old one, to be found in Webster, who defines it as either a low relief or a picture pair whose combined images, when viewed through an anaglyphoscope, produce a stereoscopic effect.

There was doubt among jurors themselves over classification of Carpenter's Kirkwood entry, though their awarding it first prize suggests little doubt as to its quality. Jurors were Margery Dodson, James Elliott and Victor Joseph Kunz.

When they decided it was a painting, they unwittingly agreed with Carpenter. His previous pictures, including cameo-like portraits and sand-textured oils, indicate he reached the new form through painting, even though he did win a sculpture prize in an earlier Kirkwood fair.

Carpenter's first true anaglyph was produced by accident early this year. Since then he has devoted himself entirely to production of anaglyphs and is believed to be the country's and perhaps the world's only full-time artist so occupied.

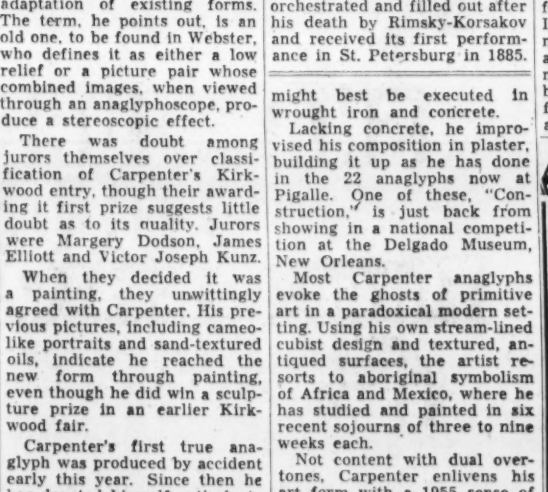
THE "HISTORIC ACCIDENT," in the words of his wife, the former Dorothy McCaskill, occurred when he was designing a table with a mosaic surface. This suggested to him a garden sculpture motif that might best be executed in wrought iron and concrete.

Lacking concrete, he improvised his composition in plaster, building it up as he has done in the 22 anaglyphs now at Pigalle. One of these, "Construction," is just back from showing in a national competition at the Delgado Museum, New Orleans.

Most Carpenter anaglyphs evoke the ghosts of primitive art in a paradoxical modern setting. Using his own stream-lined cubist design and textured, antiqued surfaces, the artist resorts to aboriginal symbolism of Africa and Mexico, where he has studied and painted in six recent sojourns of three to nine weeks each.

Not content with dual overtones, Carpenter enlivens his art form with a 1955 sense of humor. He verges on the riddlesome, like Rouault; but, once explained, the riddles strike one as fair. Examples include the witty "Automation" and "Brooks Brothers, a Contemporary Commentary," an arabesque of figures in charcoal gray flannel suits, each intent on kniving another.

The show, at first scheduled to close earlier, will run five more weeks.



JENNIFER JONES AND ROBERT STACK IN "GOOD MORNING, MISS DOVE," SENTIMENTAL STORY ABOUT A STERN GEOGRAPHY TEACHER WHO FINDS, AT THE TIME OF A CRITICAL OPERATION, SHE HAS BECOME A SMALL TOWN INSTITUTION. IT IS TO OPEN THANKSGIVING DAY AT THE ST. LOUIS.

FRANK SINATRA AND DEBBIE REYNOLDS IN "THE TENDER TRAP," ADAPTATION OF THE STAGE COMEDY ABOUT A NEW YORK BACHELOR PURSUED BY MARRIAGE-BENT FEMALES. IT IS TO OPEN THANKSGIVING DAY AT LOEW'S STATE.

Nathan Milstein, Violinist, to Be Symphony Soloist

NATHAN MILSTEIN, one of the ranking concert violinists, will appear with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in concerts at 2 p.m. Friday and 8:40 p.m. Saturday in Kiel Auditorium Opera House. Harry Farbman will conduct, substituting for Vladimir Golschmann, who will be guest conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Friday night.

Soloist and orchestra will perform the Glazounoff Concerto in A Minor. The orchestra will play, for its first time, Nielsen's overture to "Maskerade," with Brahms's Symphony No. 2 in D Major, Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khovantchina," and Wagner's prelude to Act III of "Lohengrin" completing the program.

Milstein, who was born in Odessa, Russia, and became an American citizen in 1942, has made 25 concert tours of the

NATHAN MILSTEIN.

United States since his first appearances with the Philadelphia and New York Philharmonic Orchestra in 1929. He has been soloist with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony more than 50 times. He will play his famous 1716 Stradivarius.

The Glazounoff concerto, introduced by Mischa Elman in London in 1905, was last performed by the St. Louis Symphony in 1952. The premiere of the Brahms Second was held in Vienna in 1877. Danish composer Carl Nielsen wrote his comic opera, "Maskerade" in 1906. Moussorgsky's opera was orchestrated and filled out after his death by Rimsky-Korsakov and received its first performance in St. Petersburg in 1885.

Scots Guards Band Here Tuesday

The Scots Guards regimental band, pipes and Highland dancers will appear in concert, dances and pageantry at Kiel Auditorium Convention Hall at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday on their first American tour.

The 100 performers are members of the Scots Regiment of Foot Guards, formed in 1642, and since a part of the personal Household Troops at Buckingham Palace. The band will appear in full-dress uniforms, scarlet tunics with brass buttons and the famous tall bearskin shakos. The pipers wear traditional Highland dress-kilts of the Royal Stuart tartan and blue doublets, carrying the claymore, or Highland sword, with silken company banners waving from their bagpipes.

The band, which has a mellower tone than most American military bands, will range from the regimental quick-marches and slow-marches to "March Slav" and "Sicilian Vespers." The massed pipers and dancers will do many traditional Scottish numbers, with the dancers doing sword dances, reels and Highland flings.

The Scots Guards are always part of the Edinburgh Festival Ceremonies. They are touring under the banner of S. Hurok, and appear here under the auspices of Entertainment Enterprises and the St. Louis branch of the English-Speaking Union.

Andre Kostelanetz to Conduct Symphony

Andre Kostelantez, famous conductor making his first visit to St. Louis since 1951, will direct the American premiere of "Etenraku," by Japanese Viscount Hidemara Konoye when he appears as guest conductor with the St. Louis Symphony Orchester in a special concert at 3 p.m. next Sunday in Kiel Auditorium Opera House.

He has programmed two other works new to St. Louis—Ferde Grofe's "Hudson River Suite" and "Cambodian Suite" by Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia. The orchestra also will be heard in three Gershwin selections, the Rosenthal arrangement of Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne." Kabalevsky's overture to "Colas Breugnon" and Kern's "Showboat Scenario."

"Etenraku" is based on Japanese court music of the eigth or ninth century, a solemn prelude that has been performed for over a thousand years in the Imperial Court. The floating melody is played in Japan by a high pitched mouth organ made of bamboo, accompanied by drums. Kostelanetz returned from a tour of Japan two weeks ago.

Arnatt Organ Recital

Ronald Arnatt, organist and choirmaster of Christ Church Cathedral, will play his first organ recital of the season there at 8:30 o'clock tonight. His program will include J. S. Bach's Toccata in F, Handel's Concerto No. 5 in F, Elgar's Organ Sonata, other works by Brahms and some by himself.

My Opinion

Mother Dominates Widowed Daughter

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

TWO years ago I lost my husband in an accident and it was such a shock that I barely knew what I was doing. My mother, a widow, insisted I come to live with her, even though I could afford to maintain my own apartment.

No sooner had I moved in with her than she began to dominate my life. She listens to my telephone conversations and if I don't tell her who called, she pouts and raises so much fuss I almost lose my mind. If I go out for the evening I must tell her where I am, whom I am with and when I will return. I am 40 years old and should be allowed to make my own decisions. Don't say I should try to talk it over. I have tried, I have suggested I get my furniture out of storage and rent my own apartment and she gets hysterical and I relent. But my life isn't my own and I wish I were dead. She is financially able to care for herself. I have lied to her but she forces me into it when she insists on knowing what I am doing every minute of my life. I can't go on like this much longer and know it will end tragically unless someone can come up with a solution. HEARTSICK.

Apparently, you did make a mistake when you moved to your mother's home, although undoubtedly she was motivated by a deep concern for you when she invited you to live with her. So, since there has been so much disharmony and deceit, I think you'd be wise to get out. She may be hurt but I agree that you do have the right to lead your own life and if that's not possible under her roof, you'll have to stand your ground. That doesn't mean you have to push her out of your life. In fact, if you move, you should make a special point of seeing her frequently and helping her to meet new friends and find new interests. However, I think you are making too much of an issue over your right to go out when and with whom you please. Of course, you can make your own decisions, but what's wrong with telling her? It's a matter of courtesy to let her know what you'll be doing and when you'll be back. Take her into your confidence a little more and she won't be tempted to pry.

Dear Martha:

● I AM A DIVORCEE with three little girls. I work in a tavern. I am in love with a fine man and he wants to marry me. He is also divorced and has a son. My trouble is that his mother doesn't want him to marry me. She said he had it hard enough to take care of his former wife. It makes me mad and I told her to mind her own business. I am looking for a home for the girls and I know I can make him happy. Please tell me what to do. BLUE.

Let me say right now that if his mother doesn't want him to marry you and will continue to interfere after your marriage, you may have a home for those little girls, but it won't be a happy one. But you might be wise to listen to her objections. If he has to support his former wife and his son, he may have a hard time establishing any kind of a home for you and your children. Think it over before rushing into a marriage. It might be easier to keep on supporting the girls than to marry him and walk into a family quarrel.

Dear Martha:

● PLEASE TELL ME what to do about this problem. I am a widow, 53 years old, with three grown children. Now that they are all married and way from home I'm so lonely I don't know what to do. A few weeks ago I happened to meet a widower and he has taken me out several times. He seems very nice and likes me. In fact, he has mentioned marriage. He has no home and suggests we live in mine which is pretty and paid for. He has no car so we use mine but he never offers to pay for the gasoline. He has never taken me out to dinner although he has eaten here several times. My sons say he is just a sponger but he seems so nice and courteous that it's hard to doubt him. He wants to marry right away. What do you advise? LONELY.

My advice is to listen to your sons. They can see through him even though you can't. He may be fond of you, but something tells me you would be supporting him the rest of your life. It's his place to provide a home and although he doesn't have a car he should pay the expenses when he takes you out. Don't let loneliness tempt you to snatch at a flimsy straw of happiness. Instead, create a rich and full life for yourself, through church work, volunteer service, attendance at clubs for both men and women, small get togethers with your family and friends. This is far better than a hasty—and maybe unwise—marriage.

Dear Martha:

● I AM ENGAGED and have tentatively planned a spring wedding. However, ever since my fiance and I announced our engagement, his mother has treated me terribly and is cross to him. Once she was especially rude to me but instead of standing up for me, my fiance said nothing. I didn't want to fight with her so I just excused myself and left. He called later to apologize for her but he had been drinking and since then he has started drinking more and more. I know he is troubled about this but, Martha, I am worried. Do you think I should postpone the wedding or will everything be all right after we marry?

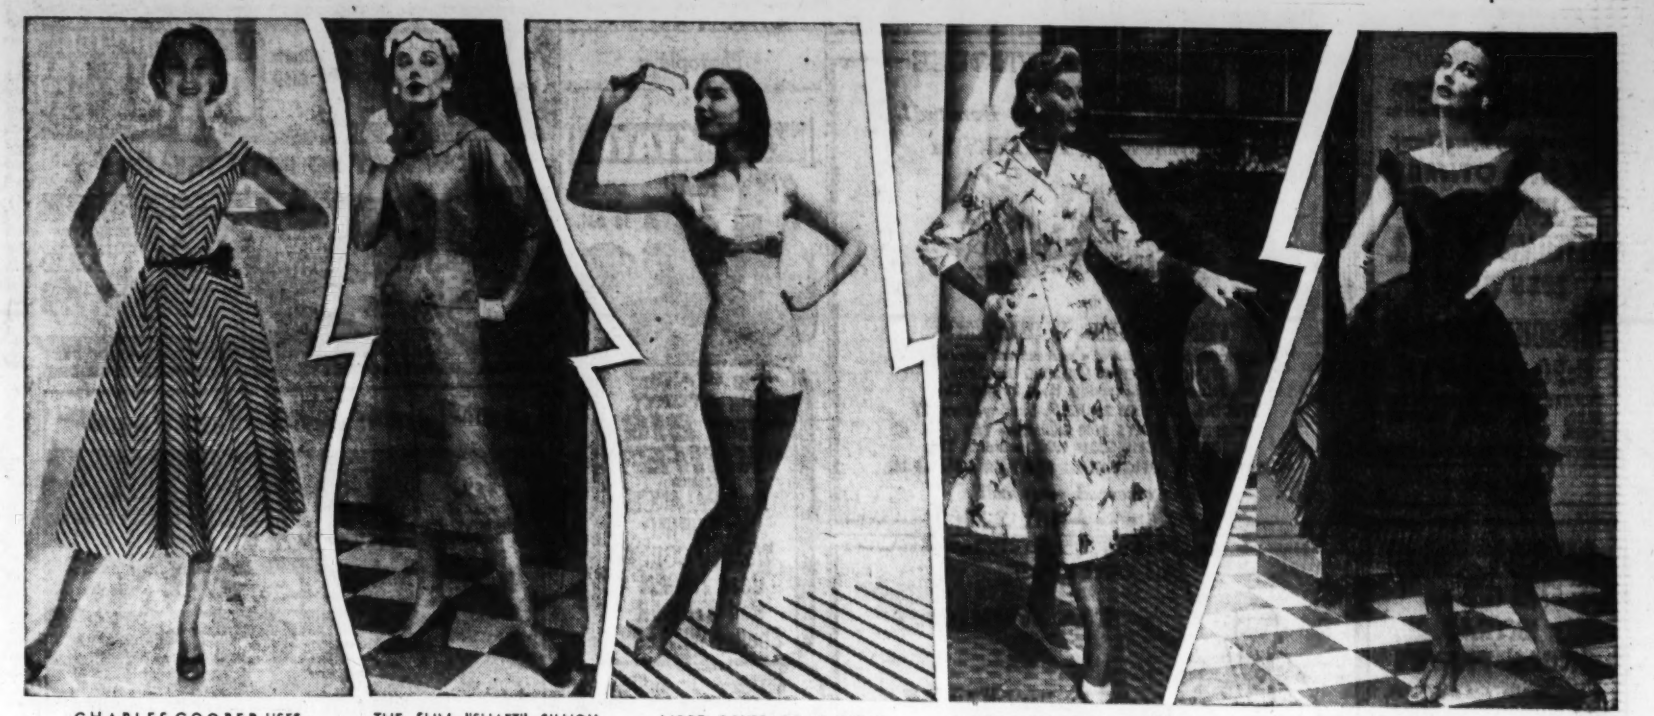
WORRIED.

That's a big chance to take—too big. Undoubtedly, one reason he has started to drink so much is that he is torn between love for you and loyalty to his mother. But unless he is man enough to protect you from her discourtesy and to stand by his decision to marry you regardless of her objections, I can't see much happiness in store. He's still a Mama's boy and she'll probably demand—and get—first place as long as she lives.

Martha Carr is glad to answer your questions. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer problems of a medical or legal nature.

California Goes Conservative in Resort Wear

Designers Stress Covered-Up Look Not Only for Beaches but Also for Evening—Knitted Oufits Popular



CHARLES COOPER USES STRIPES IN MITERED FORMATION IN THIS RESORT DRESS. COVERED SHOULDERS ILLUSTRATE A TREND IN SUN FASHIONS.

THE SLIM "SHAFT" SILHOUETTE IS SEEN IN THIS SILK SHANTUNG DRESS BY GALLINA OF CALIFORNIA. COLLAR SWINGS AWAY FROM THE NECKLINE.

MORE COVERAGE IS APPARENT IN THE CUT OF THIS CALTEX BATHING SUIT WITH ITS STRAPPED SHOULDER LINE AND SLIM-FITTING SILHOUETTE.

A TWO-PIECE DRESS OF SILK SURAH IS PRINTED WITH SCENES OF FAR-AWAY PLACES. SKIRT HAS A SEWN-IN TAFFETA LINING TO KEEP THE SOFT FULLNESS IN PLACE.

PEGGY HUNT DESIGNED THIS ATTRACTIVE LACE OVER NYLON EVENING DRESS THAT HAS COVERED SHOULDERS AND AN APRON TYPE OF OVERSKIRT.

By Sylvia Stiles

CALIFORNIA, noted for its bathing beauties, has gone conservative. Reports from Los Angeles indicate that the designers have adopted a straight and narrow silhouette, that the believe in a covered-up look not only for the beaches but also for evening, and that old-fashioned knitting needles are the smartest asset to a woman's wardrobe.

During the past week the California designers have been presenting their own "Spectacular" for resort and early 1956. While women's styles predominate in this once-a-year spectacle, the California Fashion Creators believe in variety so include men's and children's themes with the sophisticated feminine finery. Clothes for every time of day or night are introduced, proving that there is a diversity of talents in the apparel trades as well as in other fields of endeavor.

After using many yards of material to create an aura around the Hollywood fashion centers, designers have decided to trim the silhouette and feature the "shaft" line. Even the thin materials such as cotton voile and organdy have a minimum of petticoats under their gathered skirts. Columnar coats, stemlike suits, and sheath dresses are popular. There's a decided change, too, in the swimsuits that look sleek and have curves molded to the figure. The sleekness replaces the full-skirted and bloomer styles that have been so numerous in recent years.

The vogue of less exposure of skin is especially noteworthy in the beach clothes. It isn't the suit that is primarily responsible for the change, although there are many models with the built-up shoulder line. Jackets and beach dresses give the clue to the trend. Many of the suits have their matching dresses. These dresses have necklines that are high at the front although the back may be cut low. Jackets invariably are long so that they cover the hips and the thighs.

Sleeves have been revived in sun apparel. Replacing the bare shoulders are narrow short sleeves or coverage for the upper arm and shoulders formed by a series of straps. The strapped effect is apparent on various types of clothes including the bathing suits, sun dresses and evening gowns. Sheer dresses for late day and evening have brief sleeves, and necklines that are definitely modest. The bracelet length sleeve is a feature of many daytime dresses. One dress by Ivan Frederics is made washable cotton peau de Soi and has sleeves ending below the elbows. Another of printed silk surah has the three-quarter length sleeves.

The knitting-needle craze is seen in the number of knitted costumes with the California label. The knitted sheath dress designed for cocktail wear illustrates an important trend. Some sweater dresses with the unbelted waistlines are created in interesting weaves of cotton or wool knit. Dresses with their own cardigans or bolero jackets are typical of the double-duty models included in the collections. Significant, too, are the many swimsuits made of knitted cotton. Designed for the traveler is an ensemble consisting of full length coat and a sheath dress.

As indicative of the inspiration that influences various fashion groups regardless of where they are located, there is the Oriental flavor which has affected the California color chart. The Far Eastern influence has dictated the shades. Jade green is used extensively. Lacquer red, Chinese turquoise, coral and orange are other bright hues in evidence. A new shade in the gold family has been named curry. Pale background shades include a light beige that is called mushroom.

In addition to the knitted trend that has affected the fabrics there is considerable attention to Oriental and Indian materials. Flecks of gold, metallic embroideries, and bordered effects are of interest. Many of the cottons are patterned after the East Indian sari designs. Silks are liked to give an elegant look to simple shirtwaist dresses, to slim sheath frocks, and to entire suits. The shantung weave reflects to best advantage the Oriental aspect of these clothes that will influence shopping trends for 1956.

its the New Spirit of St. Louis... its pride in everything we have...
And St. Louis can be justifiably proud in the fact that the Ambassador Theatre was chosen as one of only 14 throughout the United States for the showing of Cinerama, the only truly new wonder of the entertainment world.
"This is Cinerama" ran for 54 weeks at the Ambassador Theatre, eclipsing every known record for length of run and attendance at any entertainment event.
The new "Cinerama Holiday" is now in its 40th week, and attendance is surpassing the original "This is Cinerama". Proof positive that St. Louisans enjoy the finest in entertainment.
AND HERE'S WHY...
"So spectacular, at times so thrilling, but always so varied and so colorful as to beggar the usual sedate description of the term . . . down a bobsled run even more blood-curdling than famous roller coaster ride . . ." Myles Standish, Post-Dispatch
"Cinerama remains something unique in the world of entertainment . . . still nothing quite like it . . . "Cinerama Holiday" leaves no doubt of that . . . a thrilling exciting experience . . . breathtaking . . ." Herbert L. Monk, Globe-Democrat
"New and spectacular . . . a bill of thrills . . . it goes zooming around the United States, Switzerland and France . . ." Crowther, New York Times
". . . Spectacular and varied entertainments and real thrills . . ." Kate Cameron, Daily News
"Knocks you for a loop . . . a dazzler . . . a reality so beautiful it takes your breath away . . ." Winston, N. Y. Post
"Tops thrills of first Cinerama . . . one spectacular shot after another . . . it's terrific . . . don't miss it . . ." Rose Pelswick, Journal American

Beginning Exciting Story of 18-Year-Old Lisa Morton and Her Affairs of the Heart

By Vida Hurst

Chapter One.

THEY met on Lisa's eighteenth birthday which gave their meeting particular significance. Lisa Morton had looked forward to that day for so long that when it finally arrived it seemed like any other. Just a day in the first week of August, without her mother helping her celebrate.

Marna, her mother, had gone to New York on a buying trip for the Westwood College Shop, leaving Lisa in charge, although everyone, including Lisa, knew they would have managed just as well without her. They had been nice about it, suspecting that the arrangement had been made to give the girl something to do during her mother's absence. Proof of their affection for the 41-year-old owner was the very way every sales woman in the shop accepted Lisa as temporary manager and made the gesture of consulting her about matters they were entirely capable of handling.

Lisa, also, played the game, although her heart was not in it. Her first open disagreement with Marna was when Lisa chose to study journalism instead of merchandising. Marna did not insist but Lisa knew she was deeply disappointed and Lisa understood why. Her father, Stephen Morton, published a midwestern newspaper and while Lisa had not seen him since her parent's divorce nine years ago, secretly she hoped to work for him. She might not have to finish her course in the University. Practical experience on a paper, no matter how small, was good training, although the budding journalist intended to return to the University for her second year. This, however, was before Pierre La Monte had dropped into the Westwood shop and asked for "Miss Morton, if you please. Miss Lisa Morton," he said with the charming courtesy which was as rare as his sartorial perfection. He spoke with just enough accent to make it interesting, Lisa thought, receiving him in her mother's office at the head of a shallow flight of stairs.

"You wished to see me?" Lisa inquired, in the business-like voice she had heard her mother use.

SHE saw then that in addition to his hat he carried a small package wrapped in silver and gold striped paper. His eyes were deep blue. His nose straight and imperious. He was tall and distinguished looking. "Like a prince," Lisa thought, returning his smile.

"Happy birthday!" he said, extending the package, "and greetings from your mother who regrets that she is not here to celebrate it with you."

"YOU WISHED TO SEE ME?" LISA INQUIRED, IN THE BUSINESS-LIKE VOICE SHE HAD HEARD HER MOTHER USE.

"Thank you," Lisa replied, pleased but confused. "You have met my mother in New York?"

Pierre bowed. "I had the honor of being introduced to her at the home of mutual friends." He repeated a name which sounded familiar. Marna had not mentioned him, but this was not strange as she seldom wrote letters, resorting instead to wires and telephone calls.

"Did Mother say when she is coming home?" Lisa inquired to make up for the fact that Marna had not told her about him.

"It will be two more weeks at least," he said, adding with a smile, "You are lonely without her. No?"

"It's the first time she's been away on my birthday," Lisa said, unwilling to admit to a stranger the tension between Marna and herself, which made the separation a relief to both of them. But today she was 18. Free at last to see the father whose idealized image she had put upon a pedestal nine years ago.

Suddenly she was aware that Pierre La Monte was speaking again. "It will give me much pleasure to take you to dinner this evening unless you have other plans."

"Nothing I can't change," Lisa admitted, knowing the sorority sister who had invited her to dinner would excuse her under the circumstances. Pierre was the answer to any unmarried maiden's prayer, and if she refused this invitation he might not ask her again.

Lisa had no idea that he was almost as confused as she was. Marna had spoken of her daughter as if she were a little girl. In France a girl of 18 was too naive to interest Pierre who preferred his women more sophisticated. He had not been in the country long enough to realize that American girls were different.

Lisa wore sophistication like a cloak to conceal her uncertainties. She was not beautiful but she was striking. With gray green eyes and what Pierre considered a Mona Lisa smile. Her dark hair was short and sleek. Makeup would have been a sacrilege on her smooth golden skin. But her lips were painted crimson to match the nails on her slim hands.

It was part of her charm for Pierre that in some ways the mother seemed more youthful than her daughter. He sensed this on their first meeting. Marna's shop had been much less impressive than Pierre had expected. Not that she had deliberately exaggerated. Pierre was conscious that the luxurious fittings and succession of mirrors had existed in his own mind.

It was exactly what Marna had said it was—a shop for college girls, attractively furnished in gay colors. There were racks displaying dresses and coats in youthful styles and sizes. There were few customers so the clerks were free to follow his exit with curious eyes. Fully conscious of his masculine desirability in a world of what he considered "frustrated females," Pierre sauntered to the door.

WHEN Marna had suggested that he convey birthday greetings to her daughter he had been reluctant. Now he realized how wise the little woman had been. It would take time to establish a definite relationship with Lisa. She would not accept him merely because her mother had.

On the contrary this might make the girl's approval harder to win than if he had been a stranger. Even so Pierre had no doubt that it could be done. It was a challenge and there was nothing he liked better, particularly where women were concerned.

He congratulated himself again that evening when he was admitted to the attractively furnished suite in which Marna and her daughter lived. It was not elegant but it was expensive.

Lisa opened the door saying cordially, "They called me from downstairs. Won't you come in?"

She was prettier than she had been in the shop, perhaps because of an inner glow of happiness as he had not noticed before. Her face was radiant as she held out her hand. A plain gold watch was fastened about her wrist.

"A birthday present from my father," she announced.

"But your mother sent you one," Pierre said, "I was with her when she bought it."

"It was lovely," the girl conceded, "but I can't use two watches. I'm sure she won't mind exchanging it."

REMEMBERING Marna's pleasure in selecting the jeweled-studded gift Pierre sighted. If her father's had been more valuable he could have understood but there was no comparison between the quality of the watches. Obviously there was some other reason for Lisa preferring the one from her father.

"My parents were divorced nine years ago," Lisa explained. "I haven't seen my father since but he never forgets my birthday." She pointed to the yellow telegraph blank lying on the table. He says in his wire that he expects to be in California this winter for an editor's convention. He owns a newspaper in Walnut City, Mo., where he used to live. Mother may have told you."

"She told me only that she had been divorced," Pierre said sadly.

It was obvious that the girl's love was for the parent she hadn't seen for nine years. Marna had won the custody of her daughter, but had lost her affection. No wonder Marna had insisted upon his becoming acquainted with Lisa before her return.

"Nine years is a long time," he said, astonished by her answer. "It wasn't my father's fault. Mother made him promise not to see me until I was 18. You see he married again and she was afraid it would upset me but of course if she had really cared about me she would not have left him."

Her scornful voice made her seem younger than she was, but there was nothing youthful in her expression. She was wearing a dress of pale blue taffeta with a swirling skirt lined with crimson. And the eyes staring at him from her sun-tanned face were those of a woman.

With the savoir-faire of a man of the world, Pierre La Monte had reserved a table at the best known restaurant on the Strip.

It was a gala occasion which justified the expense, he assured himself, pleased as he noticed that even in the city where beauty was no novelty, heads turned to observe the radiant-faced girl and her handsome escort. Pierre was flattered, not realizing that everyone who is anyone in the movie industry recognizes a new personality and those who are not on the alert hoping that they will be seen by some famous director or considered important by the wealthy tourists.

Pierre La Monte did not belong in any of these categories and neither did Lisa who had been to night clubs too many times to be impressed. She was pleased, however, with the orchids Pierre had presented and she was glad she had worn the pale blue dress with the crimson lined skirt which swirled around her when they danced.

Pierre was an excellent partner, holding Lisa lightly but firmly so that she had no difficulty following his rather intricate steps. As the evening progressed she became more aware of him. She began to wonder who he was and what he was doing in Los Angeles. It wasn't like Marna to ask a stranger to take her daughter dancing on her birthday, much less to present her mother's expensive gift which could have been sent by air mail.

But Lisa, like Pierre, was enjoying herself too much to spend the evening asking questions. Time enough for that later. Tonight—the night of her eighteenth birthday — was the most thrilling night of her life. The wire from her father saying that he expected to see her in the near future was what she wanted more than any gift, she thought, glancing at the plain gold watch on her wrist. It was unfortunate that Marna had sent her a watch too and such an expensive one set with rubies and emeralds. Lisa regretted having to return it but Marna would understand that she couldn't use two watches.

"Of what are you thinking, Mona Lisa?" Pierre inquired as they sipped the French wine he insisted was the only one suitable for an eighteenth birthday.

"I was thinking how fortunate I am to be having such a lovely partly," she said smiling.

"I am the fortunate one," he assured her. "But it is your mother we should thank."

For one horrible moment Lisa thought he meant that Marna was paying for it. Lisa had heard about gigolos, even in Hollywood—slick haired young men whose company as an escort could be arranged and paid for. She also knew the term as well as the idea had originated in Europe. But Pierre La Monte, who was in his early thirties, did not look like one and if he were Marna would not have been introduced to him in the home of mutual friends.

LISA told herself she ought to be ashamed of harboring such a suspicion when he was being so kind. But she sensed something peculiar about the situation. She couldn't help it. . . . Her green eyes met his above the fragile glass she had lifted.

"You're wondering what I meant," Pierre said with uncanny perception of feminine psychology. "Permit me to assure you that I am not an imposter. If you doubt me I suggest that you telephone your mother as soon as we return to your hotel."

The reproach in his voice was diluted with amusement. "The truth is often more astonishing than fiction," he reminded her.

Lisa's tender heart was touched. She didn't want to hurt him. "I'm sorry," she murmured, too honest to deny his accusation. "You've been wonderful to me. Just as if you knew how much this particular birthday means to me."

"But I do know. Your mother told me."

"Even mother doesn't understand. How could she have told you?"

"It will be better for her to make the explanations," Pierre said, meeting her clouded eyes. "And now do you prefer to return to your home or shall we dance?"

His masterful tone warned her the discussion was finished. Reassured and a little ashamed Lisa said, "Let's dance."

TWO hours later he took her home and insisted upon going upstairs with her after placing the call to New York at the desk. The telephone was ringing as they entered the apartment. . . . Marna had been asleep. It was three hours later in New York. But she was sweet about it.

"Did you have a happy birthday?" she inquired.

"Wonderful. Daddy sent me a wire saying he is coming here to a convention this fall," Lisa said, giving the most exciting news first.

"Good," Marna answered enthusiastically. "Did you like what I sent you?"

"Are you referring to the watch or the man?"

"Both. I hope you like both as much as I do."

"The watch is fabulous. Thanks loads, darling! The one daddy gave me isn't nearly as pretty, but I can't send his back. I hope you won't mind exchanging yours for something else. I know it was frightfully expensive."

Marna did mind although she said, "Send it air mail so I'll get it before I leave. Do you like Pierre?"

"We've had a beautiful time. But he won't tell me what he's doing here or why you asked him to look me up. He said you should tell me yourself and he's waiting to hear what you say."

Movie Poll of Public On Best Film, Actors

All movie theaters in the St. Louis area are participating in a nation-wide theatrical poll of the public for awards for the best actor and actress, most promising new personalities, and best picture, for the year ending the past Sept. 30. The election, with ballots distributed to patrons in movie house lobbies, started Thursday and will end next Sunday.

The vote, conducted by the Council of Motion Picture Organizations, Inc., and to be audited by Price Waterhouse & Co., is designed to obtain accurately the public reaction to stars and films. Awards will be announced at a special ceremony in Hollywood in December.

Wrapping of Christmas Packages

By Dorothy Brainerd

WE hope that you are the foresighted type who does her Christmas shopping early, so that you have time to have fun wrapping her gifts instead of literally throwing them together on Christmas Eve.

If you are, you will be interested in some tips from Kaye King, gift wrap stylist for a leading greeting card company, who was in town recently.

Remember that a man's gift should be striking but tailored; a woman's as feminine as possible (with pastel papers and lost of ribbons) a child's gay and whimsical, advises Kaye.

If tying pretty bows is your personal Waterloo, just give up the struggle and don't try. Instead, wrap the package smoothly, then decorate it with some of the fascinating cut-out gift trims which are attached with sponge rubber to give a three-dimensional effect—a fat red Santa bouncing on a green piano stool as he bangs out a happy tune on an old-fashioned piano; a fetching reindeer with Christmas ornaments decorating his antlers; or a Christmas train laden with festively wrapped gifts.

SIMPLEST SORT of wrapping for a child's box is to cover the package with a patterned paper—perhaps a young space man hurtling through the firmaments with his Yuletide packages—then top with a toy from the five-and-ten.

Or wad up newspaper to form a ball, with a small gift in the center. Place the newspaper ball in the middle of a square of shiny white paper, gathering it and tying at the top to form a big white sphere. Then glue on bits of black paper for eyes and mouth, crimson paper for a big round red nose and a cone to form a hat with, of course, white cotton whiskers and you have a Santa's head. (Use flour-and-water paste, or any type of glue you have around the house).

If Dad's gift is to be a pair of slippers, wrap the shoe box in patterned paper. Take scraps of left-over solid colored paper and cut out in the shape of soles of slippers, then paste on the box. A wide strip of brightly colored paper pasted across the front will serve as toe and top of scuffs.

For the traditional tie, wrap in patterned paper; use a wide ribbon to tie the package, ending in a four-in-hand knot with ends resembling a tie. Dip the head of a hat pin in glue, then in glitter, and stick right into the package for a dashing tie pin.

"I WOULD APPRECIATE your advice on how to curtain my front door," says Mrs. B. T. "It has a long glass window and transom. On either side is another piece of glass and small transom.

"I wanted to use sheer glass curtains, but anyone could look right into the house. What would you suggest — venetian blinds?

"Also, can you tell me what to use to get rid of spiders in the basement?"

No, I don't think you would care for venetian blinds used for this purpose. I would use silk curtains, gathered quite fully so that no one could see in, on all three panes of glass. The transoms could be left bare for light, or could be covered with the same silk material, not gathered quite as fully.

Stirling Kyd, extension entomologist for the University of Missouri recommends thorough spraying with 5 per cent DDT household spray to eliminate spiders. He adds reassuringly that most house spiders are perfectly harmless except for the annoying spider webs. The relatively rare Black Widow spider is the only poisonous species found in Missouri. And that we are glad to know.

—Thanksgiving—
Day More Than Food, Football

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

HAPPY is the home where much is made of "special occasions," such as birthdays or holidays. What wonderful memories these celebrations store up. All grownups who had happy childhoods get a warm glow just from remembering, even into ripe old age. Children should be given this gift, the memory of "occasions" and little family rituals, such as father's table blessings or even an old-fashioned "children's hour." And now we come to a most significant event in family life, Thanksgiving.

Almost every tribe or people has had some sort of festival to celebrate the harvest. In North America, Thanksgiving day has been colored primarily by the old Hebrew tradition (sixteenth chapter of Deuteronomy), and then by that of the Pilgrim Fathers in Massachusetts. Most of my readers probably have some religious affiliation which will guide their own observance; but all of us should be able to do better than merely eat too much and then sit around watching a football game on television.

Give the children a chance to help plan for the day. Breakfast provides an opportunity for such worshipful or devotional moments as suit your own tastes. Many families follow the desirable custom of inviting a guest to share the day with them—perhaps a young man or young woman far from home; but if you can find a student from overseas to join you, there would be extra value in the friendship. Remember that sharing is part of the original essence of the day.

LET THE CHILDREN help plan some table setting that will make the day a little different. A fresh white cloth, a lighted candle, a loaf of bread and a basket of fruit, will set the meal apart from others. The children may suggest pictures and other objects in the house that they would like to include.

Don't feel that you are entitled to sit back in virtuous idleness merely because you contributed 50 cents to help provide "Thanksgiving baskets for the poor." Bring the children as fully as possible into this day of ritual, and let them feel as much individual responsibility as you can. They'll be, in the future, better husbands and wives, better citizens, for it.

Ray and Jere Meisel Grimm, graduate assistants in the Southern Illinois University art department, will open their second husband-and-wife exhibition of sculpture and pottery with a reception today from 3 to 5 p.m. at People's Art Center, 3657 Grandel square. Both are graduates of Washington University School of Fine Arts. After their marriage in 1953, they spent their honeymoon taking a summer course in ceramics under F. Carlton Ball at Southern. Their show here will continue through Dec. 10.

Seigfried Reinhardt, artist who is teaching this year at Washington University School of Fine Arts, is represented by "Night, Day, Dreams Between," an oil-and-wax painting, in a three-week exhibition closing today at the New York City Center Gallery. The show, assembled from private collections in New York, was chosen by James Johnson Sweeney, director of New York's Guggenheim Museum. Other artists represented range from Renoir to Picasso.

Foreigner's Tour of Russia Inflexible, Even If He Gets Hurt

Canadian Cabinet Minister Injured in Fall, Tries to Go Home, but Is Forced to Follow Route.

By FRANK FLAHERTY

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

OTTAWA, Canada, Nov. 19—When the Soviet authorities lay out a travel route through Russia for a foreigner, he sticks to it, even if he is a cabinet minister, gets hurt and wants to take a short-cut home.

James Sinclair, Canada's minister of fisheries, found that out on a painful junket through the Soviet Union and Communist China which began last July and ended a few weeks ago.

Sinclair left Ottawa hale and hearty, the first member of a Western government to visit Russia since the cold war began, the first westerner to visit Siberia.

He returned, pale and wan, suffering from jaundice and the effects of leg and back injuries suffered in an accident at Petropaviovsk, Siberia. It was only after several weeks of hospital treatment in Vancouver that he felt able to talk of his experiences.

Tells of Accident.

When he did, he said the accident was his own fault. He had insisted on climbing up on a flimsy catwalk about a dry-docked fishing trawler to take a picture of Petropavlovsk harbor. Several other people followed him and the catwalk collapsed, dropping them all 20 feet.

He got excellent hospital treatment at Nahadka, another Siberian town and the attention of medical specialists flown in from Moscow.

When he was able to move however, the Russians insisted he keep to the program laid on for him at the start. So he had an unwanted visit to Peiping and went 6000 miles out of his way to get back to Canada.

Sinclair went to Russia to attend a meeting of the international whaling commission in Moscow. He asked to see the Russian fishing industry. That meant going to Siberia and Moscow was unwilling to allow him to go there.

Holds Out for Siberia.

The Russians tried to sell him a side-trip to the Black and Caspian seas, but Sinclair held out for Siberia. Finally permission was granted on condition that he go home by way of China. He would thus avoid setting a precedent on which other foreigners could rely.

After the accident and his partial recovery he tried to shorten the journey by going by way of Japan. Canadian Pacific Airlines has an air route to Japan and offered to send a plane to Vladivostock for him. But the Russians insisted he go to Peiping by coastal steamship.

The ship passed close to a Japanese island and once was within hailing distance of a Japanese coast guard vessel. Sinclair tried to talk the captain into putting him ashore or letting him board the Japanese vessel. He was delivered to Peiping however. There he spent some days in bed at the British embassy.

Sinclair's impressions of Russia of which he saw a good deal were in line with those of other recent Western visitors. He was convinced the average man wants peace, but was not too sure about top level officialdom.

SCOUT SCHOLARSHIP FOR PRINCETON U.

Applications Being Accepted by Council—Open to Eagle Rank.

Applications for the Gale F. Johnston Eagle Scout Scholarship to Princeton University next year are now being accepted by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, it was announced yesterday.

The scholarship, which provides tuition for the freshman year, is available to young men, who will graduate from high school before next July and who have become Eagle Scouts while registered with the council.

Applications must be completed and returned to the council office, 505 Chemical building, before Jan. 15, a Scout official said.

Established by Johnston, a vice president of the National Council of Boy Scouts, the scholarship provides tuition for Eagle Scouts who need financial assistance to attend the university. Johnston also is a member of the university's graduate council.

The institution will continue the scholarship beyond the freshman level "providing the student maintains required scholarship standards and providing there is still financial need," Scout Executive Carl H. Laemmli said.

Application may be made to Laemmli at the council office.

Gilbert R. Emery, a member of the council professional staff, will be transferred to the Quivira Council at Wichita, Kan., Dec. 1. He joined the staff here in 1950 as district executive of South District and in 1953 was transferred to Ozark Trails District.

Nominations of Cub, Scout, Explorer, district and council volunteer leaders for Silver Beaver Awards will close this week. The awards are to be presented at the Annual Meeting Banquet of the council next January.

Wendell Barber, a member of Troop 200, Affton, has been chosen as the council's candidate for the annual Boy Scout Week "Report to the Nation Team."

The team is composed of 12 Scouts in the country, who are chosen to represent the national organization in its report to President Eisenhower during Boy Scout week.

Wendell will appear before a state-wide selection committee today in Jefferson City, where he will compete for state candidate. If chosen, he will compete later for representative of Region VIII which includes, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming.

The council office will be closed next Thursday, Thanksgiving day, but will open the following day, Friday, it was announced yesterday.

The Men's Club of Normandy Methodist Church has announced its sponsorship of Cub Pack 35, a new unit. It will meet at 7:30 p.m. on the third Thursday in each month at the church.

Scout Murl Kelly, of Troop 358, was awarded Eagle rank, Scouting's highest advancement honor, in a ceremony last Friday at the Wentzville (Mo.) Community Club.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Members of Girl Scout Troop 29, Horace Mann School, will visit the South Side Day Nursery, 2930 Iowa street, next Friday as part of their work for the child care badge.

The troop's junior patrol Friday morning will take items of clothing to the children there and in the afternoon the senior patrol will take candies and cookies.

Miss Joan Schoewe, 3183 Watson road, and Miss Susan Wallace, 4209 Lindell boulevard, both Senior Girl Scouts, have been named winners in the "What America Means to Me" essay contest held this fall by the Girl Scout Council of Greater St. Louis.

The essays of Miss June Williams, 5101 Northland avenue, and Miss Nancy Cobaugh, 33 Berry Wood drive, Glendale, also Senior Girl Scouts, were given honorable mention.

The two winning essays will be forwarded to the Girl Scout national headquarters, where they will be judged with other entries. The winning essays will be read at a July 4 celebration next year in Michigan.

Girl Scouts of Troop 709, sponsored by the Parent-Teachers' Association of Mallinckrodt School, will collect gifts next week for presentation at Christmas to patients at the St. Louis State Hospital.

Deadline for application of Senior Girl Scouts to attend the New Mexico Archaeological Mobile Camp and the Girl Scout Geological Expedition, next summer, is Nov. 30.

Attendance at the Nex Mexico camp will be limited to girls 15 years or older, who are qualified in primitive camping and who are able to live under high altitude conditions with limited sources of provisions.

The geological expedition will be available to girls 17 to 20. All applications returned to the council here will be forwarded to the national organization for consideration.

Eighteen Intermediate Girl Scouts, of Troop 708, will stay at Girl Scout Camp Cedarledge, near Pevely, Mo., next weekend. The group will stay at Winter Cabin, which is designed for cold-weather conditions.

More than 200 dolls dressed by Girl Scouts and Brownies of Clay-due District for the 1955 Gift Festival, will be displayed for one week, beginning next Sunday, at Gutman's Department Store in Clayton. The festival will be Dec. 4 at Kiel Auditorium.

G.I. SCHOOL CHECKS TO BE MAILED EARLY FOR HOLIDAY

Veterans of the Korean war who are training under Public Law 550 will receive their November training allowance before schools close for the Christmas holidays, J. F. Kelley, manager of the Veterans Administration St. Louis Regional office, said yesterday.

The checks normally are mailed from the St. Louis disbursing office so that they will be received on the twentieth of the month, Kelley said.

"This year checks will be mailed from the disbursing office on Dec. 15, and most veterans in St. Louis and eastern Missouri should receive them no later than Dec. 17," he said.

FORGET CALORIES

Throw away your calorie-counter when you check in at Hawaii's top hotels. Lavish noon buffets are a highlight of every stay, with long tables piled high with delectable but fattening concoctions.

The buffets are served out-of-doors, with the blue Pacific and swaying palm trees for backdrops. Their appetites whetted by outdoor fun tourists return again and again for servings without any show of embarrassment.

Taking Life Easy in Orlando

The winter visitor to Orlando discovers the charm of Florida in the lush, tropical central region where rolling hills and sparkling blue lakes invite real relaxation. The city is proud of its beautiful parks where one may find almost any type of sport or recreation or may just take it easy—perhaps feeding the swans on the water or the sea gulls which wheel and soar through the moss-hung oaks.

HAWAIIAN PINEAPPLES

Tourists to Hawaii have a chance to follow the progress of pineapple from its start in the fields to the packing in the world's largest fruit cannery.

The islands now produce about 70 per cent of the world's supply of canned pineapple. The fruit is grown on 73,000 acres on 14 plantations.

Artesian Wells.

Artesian wells of 180-foot depth deliver 2000 gallons of water per minute to fields in southeastern New Mexico.

BLUEBEARD LEGEND IN VIRGIN ISLANDS

The Grimm brothers, Hans Christian Anderson, Charles Perrault and many others, have brightened young and old lives with their folklore and fairy tales. And one of the tales, by Perrault, is the all-time thriller—"Bluebeard." Parallel stories about the wife-killer appear in many countries. One of the most exciting, with a castle to back up the legend, is in the Virgin Islands, according to the Delta Line.

There, in Charlotte Amalie, a city of 12,000 persons, is Bluebeard's Castle, now remodeled into a handsome hotel. The town itself spreads over three large foothills; behind it towers a mountain atop which the Sleeping Beauty might be taking her siesta.

Perrault's villain had a dark blue beard, which shamed him so it gave him ugly ideas. Charlotte Amalie's Bluebeard is said to have had a beard so long he twisted it into small Sis Hopkins pigtails and tied them with ribbons over his ears. He built the castle for his 13 wives—six more than Perrault's Bluebeard. He kept them in the tower of the castle. And one day he brought home his fourteenth wife—a Spanish girl. She poisoned all the rest of the wives.

One hears many stories of pirates, too, on a visit to the Virgin Islands. For in the heyday of the Islands, between the middle of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, Saint Thomas was a free port, and the pirates' money was just as good as anybody's. They had a field day. Bluebeard even gave a ball in their honor,—or so legend reports.

The folklore survives, lending color and excitement to the Virgin Islands. But the pirate ships are no more. Their place on the beautiful seas has been taken by splendid modern luxury steamships.

Columbus named the islands for Saint Ursula and her martyred virgins. And at the time, he really thought there were thousands of islands in the group.

Visitors have a wide choice of amusements in the Islands, where soft trade-winds blow. There is snorkeling, for the adventurous. In this, the sportsman wears a fancy mask, and may float face down, breathing easily while watching the exotic marine life. There is golf for the folks who prefer life above the water. And tourists who want little but sight-seeing will find fascinating scenes to record in memory and film. Sightseeing tours are available; and taxis are plentiful.

Shopping delights the visitor because prices are so low. St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John are the three principal islands of the Virgins, and the hotels there, and in Christiansted, Fredericksted, etc., are reasonable. They range from $5 a day per room in small guest houses, on up.

ALPINE SKIIERS

Good news for Alpine skiiers—a new lift at Bad Reichenhall, Germany, has been opened to give access to an excellent skiing area below the summit of the Predigtstuhl in the Bavarian Alps, according to the German Tourist Information Office.

Several lifts in the Allgau Alps have also been expanded, including a twin-chair lift on the Hochalpe to supplement the Breitenberg Mountain suspension cable road near Pfronte. The Nebelhorn Road in Oberstdorf has been completed and two new cabins have been installed.

Trout Streams.

Trout streams, rising from among the snow-covered peaks of the Sawtooth mountains, abound near Sun Valley, Idaho. Most famous is Silver Creek, considered by many experts the finest dry fly fishing water in the country.

ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE MONDAY TO GRAVE OF DR. BEAUMONT

Dr. Daniel L. Sexton, president of the St. Louis Medical Society, will speak at the society's annual pilgrimage to the grave of Dr. William Beaumont at 11 a.m. tomorrow at Bellefontaine Cemetery. He will speak on "The Life and Example of William Beaumont."

Participating in the ceremony will be Walter Gammeter, principal of Beaumont High School, and students of the school.

Dr. Beaumont, pioneer St. Louis physician and surgeon of the nineteenth century, is famous for his observations of the human digestive system. The studies resulted from his treatment of Alexis St. Martin, a trapper who had a "window" in his stomach, the consequence of a wound.

Advice for Small Stores.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (AP) —The Small Business Administration advises owners of small retail stores "to keep close tab on their inventories of merchandise as a guide to profitable sales." The SBA says "as slow-selling items are eliminated with the help of adequate stock-control records, the selling job will become easier."

COUNTRY DOCTOR HONORED FOR 41 YEARS' SERVICE

Dr. W. L. Howell, a former St. Louisan, who has served as a physician for 41 years to the ranchers around Hyannis, Nebr., was honored at a community celebration Nov. 10, friends here learned yesterday.

More than 200 persons who were among the 3000 babies he has delivered attended the ceremonies. He was presented with a new automobile paid for by donations from his patients and friends.

'Bread and Butter' Players Put UCLA Into the Coast Bowl

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 19 (UP)—U.C.L.A.'s "bread and butter" players, Sam Brown and Bob Davenport, led the Bruins to a Rose Bowl bid and their third straight Pacific Coast Conference championship today by slashing out a 17-7 victory over University of Southern California before 95,878 fans in Memorial Coliseum.

U. C. L. A.	7	3	0	7	17

Aside from a couple of key passes, UCLA stuck to the ground, where Halfback Brown and Fullback Davenport slashed and plunged for long yardage to touchdown drives in the first and fourth periods and a field goal in the second.

The West's Rose Bowl representative won't officially be named until Monday but with the defeat of Oregon State, there was no question that UCLA would return to Pasadena Jan. 1.

Southern California marched deep into UCLA territory three times but only one of the marches—in the final period—resulted in a score as the charging, thudding UCLA line bottled up vaunted Trojan Halfback Jon Arnett. The runs of Fullbacks Gordon Duvall and C. R. Roberts kept the Trojan drives moving.

Arnett electrified the huge crowd and the national TV audience when he raced the opening kickoff 97 yards to the UCLA goal, only to be called back because Southern Cal was offside. There was no "goat" on this one. The entire USC line was charged with the offside.

UCLA put together its first scoring drive after Brown and Arnett had exchanged quick kicks of better than 60 yards each. Then Brown cut loose with the first of two UCLA passes during the entire game, this one for 21 yards to End Rommie Loudd on the Southern Cal 17, from where Brown and Davenport punched to the four and Brown scored.

UCLA started another drive late in the first period and drove to the Trojan 19, where Jim Decker, whose field goal last week defeated Washington with seconds to go, booted another from the 19 in the opening seconds of the second period to put UCLA into a 10-0 halftime lead.

Southern California in the second period could penetrate only to the 29, its deepest drive of the first half. The Trojans got to the 24 in the third period only to lose the ball on downs, and then finally, in the fourth period, drove 89 yards on 14 plays, with Quarterback Jim Contratto bootlegging the ball on a touchdown run from the four.

That only spurred UCLA into driving 59 yards on 15 plays, with Davenport plunging the final yard to score.

Southern Cal scoring: touchdowns — Contratto (4, bootleg); conversion — Arnett.

UCLA scoring: touchdowns — Brown (4, off tackle, Davenport (one, plunge); conversions — Decker, Brown; field goal — Decker (19).

Oregon State's Last Gasp.

EUGENE, Ore., Nov. 19 (AP)—Oregon pushed Oregon State all around a muddy field today to crush the Staters' last hopes of gaining the Pacific Coast Conference title, 28-0.

State, which went into the game a one-touchdown favorite and with an outside chance to overtake UCLA for the conference crown, simply could not cope with Oregon's power.

Halfback Dick James slanted to the right and Halfback Jim Shanley to the left. When the Staters began spreading for them, Quarterback Tom Crabtree called shots up the middle.

Shanley, sure-footed despite the mud from a week of snow and rain, scored two touchdowns and Crabtree added two more.

These resulted from drives of 65, 51, 71 and 61 yards. In only one of these did a pass figure. That was in the final march in the fourth quarter when, faced with fourth down and seven yards to go on the State 20, Crabtree passed 13 yards to End Phil McHugh on the 7. Four plays later Crabtree shoved over the goal line.

PALO ALTO, Calif., Nov. 19 (AP)—Quarterback John Brodie and his third-string understudy, Jack Douglas, engineered Stanford to an easy 19-0 victory over California today in their traditional Pacific Coast conference football windup.

The power-packed Indians, in control all the way, squared the long time series between the neighbor schools at 24 victories each—with 10 ties—before a crowd of 91,500 who sat under sunny skies at Stanford Stadium.

Incredible Stuff by Huskie Ace.

SEATTLE, Nov. 19 (UP)—Fullback Credell (Incredible) Green lived up to his nickname today as he led Washington to a 27-7 Pacific Coast Conference football victory over Washington State in a season's end game on a muddy field before 30,000.

Incredible as it may seem, here's what the 20-year-old Richmond (Calif.) Negro did today:

Carried the ball 258 yards, a new National total for an individual player in a single game this season (Jim Swink's 225 yards for Texas Christian last week was the previous high); ran for two touchdowns, one a 50-yard gallop; intercepted a pass which set up his 50-yard touchdown run, and ran the ball 27 times for an average of 9.5 yards per carry.

MARQUETTE BEATEN, 33-0, BY SPARTANS

Mich. State	6	0	13	14	33

EAST LANSING, Mich., Nov. 19 (AP) — Michigan State whipped Marquette, 33-0, today at Macklin Stadium and then erupted into a happy hysteria of celebration over the word that Ohio State had downed Michigan to send the M.S.U. Spartans to the Rose Bowl.

Obviously jittery over the outcome of the decisive Big Ten game at Ann Arbor, Mich., 65 miles southeast of here, the Spartans got off to a slow start.

Michigan State only led 6-0 at the half but apparently goaded by Coach Duffy Daugherty's "keep your minds on the game" dressing room spiel at the half, the Spartans came charging back for two touchdowns in the third and two more in the final period.

The crowd of 41,814 had portable radios spotted through the stands. At times the game on the field had to be stopped because of the noise of the crowd screaming over favorable developments of the Ohio State-Michigan game, won by the Buckeyes, 17-0.

Twice in 3 Years.

State went to the Rose Bowl in 1953 and is the first Big Ten team to make the Pasadena trip twice in three years.

Dave Kaiser made the first-period State touchdown on a 41-yard pass from Quarterback Earl Morrall. Walt Kowalczyk's five-yard end-around and a one-yard line buck by Jerry Planutis accounted for the scoring in the third-period surge.

John Lewis, who had two touchdowns called back by penalties, ran 16 yards around end for one final period score and Dennis Mendyk made the other from two yards out.

The happy crowd mobbed the team on the field at the finish and tore down the goal posts before the game even ended in a mad celebration.

State was showing its Rose Bowl jitters in the first half. One drive that carried down to the Marquette two-yard line was stopped by a fumble. Another went to the Marquette 10, but in four plays the Spartans could advance only to the eight and had to give up the ball on downs.

Penalties Stop Lewis.

Senior end John Lewis, who was plagued by officials ruling against his runs, got into the Marquette end zone on a 54-yard pass play, but had it called back on a penalty.

The two M.S.U. third period scores came within six minutes after the start of the half. By that time Ohio State was leading Michigan 3-0.

Kowalczyk raced 44 yards to the Marquette 17 to set up the first score by Planutis with 1:36 gone. Kowalczyk also accounted for the big distance in the second drive.

During the second half the radio fans in the stands were paying closer attention to what was happening in the big Michigan bowl than the heroics on the field in front of them.

When Hopalong Cassady made his scores for the Buckeyes, play had to be stopped so the Spartans could hear the signals of their quarterback.

Eight plays went 55 yards, culminating in the touchdown finally allowed Lewis in the fourth quarter. The final Spartan drive took 13 plays to carry 99 yards. Lewis went in from 17 yards out, but Mendyk had to do it again for the final score after Lewis's run was nullified by another penalty.

Cassady Plunges and Michigan Tumbles

Michigan was knocked out of a chance to represent the Big Ten Conference at the Rose Bowl when Ohio State, led by HOWARD (HOPALONG) CASSADY defeated the Wolverines at Ann Arbor, 17-0. Here Cassady (arrow) plunges for a short gain. He was downed by Michigan's RON KRAMER (87). Cassady set up a second-quarter touchdown and scored one himself in the fourth period.

OHIO STATE AGAIN WINS BIG 10 TITLE

Ohio State	0	3	0	14	17

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 19 (UP)—Howard (Hopalong) Cassady ran roughshod over Michigan in his final college game today to lift Ohio State to its second straight Big Ten title with a 17-0 victory which knocked the Wolverines out of a Rose Bowl bid.

Cassady, the 21-year-old senior from Columbus, O., raced 146 yards in 28 carries in the finest running display at Michigan Stadium since the days of Tom Harmon as a record crowd of 97,369 watched.

The fleet-footed Cassady scored Ohio State's first touchdown on a two-yard smash in the fourth period and set up a 17-yard field goal by End Fred Kriss in the second period with his shifty running.

The Buckeyes added a safety when Fullback Don Vicie tackled Terry Barr in the end zone and a second touchdown on Vicie's one-yard smash in the closing minutes.

Bucks Out of Rose Bowl.

Ohio State can't make the Rose Bowl trip since the Buckeyes played at Pasadena last New Year's day. Michigan State, which claimed second place in the Big Ten as a result of Ohio State's victory, is certain to get the bid.

It was Ohio State's first victory here since 1937 and stretched to 13 straight games the Buckeye Conference winning streak. They won seven in a row last year and six straight this season.

Cassady had to share honors with a stalwart Ohio State line anchored by Ken Vargo, Jim Parker, Frances Machinski and Leo Brown. Michigan was kept in its own territory until early in the final period when a pair of pass completions moved the ball barely across the 50-yard line.

Michigan, which now shares with Ohio State the record for the most outright Big Ten championships, thus ended its season with two loses in its last three games. The Wolverines won their first six starts before they were knocked from the unbeaten ranks by Illinois two weeks ago.

Each Won 8 Times.

Both Michigan and Ohio State have won the title eight times.

There were no threats in the first period but Ohio State took command in the second period and marched from its own 23 to the Michigan 7 before Kriss kicked his field goal.

Michigan held Ohio State inside the 5-yard line after the Buckeyes took the second half kickoff but Ohio State staged a 52-yard scoring march which Cassady climaxed on the first play of the fourth period with his plunge over center.

Play became rough in the closing minutes during which Ohio State picked up its final eight points and Vicie's touchdown. The crowd lined the playing field and formed to congratulate the champions at the final gun.

Ohio State scoring: Touchdowns—Cassady (2-yard plunge), Vicie (1-yard plunge). Field goal—Kriss (17 yards). Safety—Barr (tackled in end zone by Vicie).

MISSOURI U. LOSES TO KANSAS, 13-7

May Be the Last One For Faurot as Coach

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 19 — A golden era in Missouri University athletics might have ended in the tarnish of another defeat today. Don Faurot, who could fatten even the leanest seasons by beating border rival Kansas, reportedly told his players before the game that this might be his last as coach. The favored Tigers lost it, 13 to 7.

The old master of Ol' Mizzou, distressed by the poorest state university season in his 20 as coach, was understood to have bared the possibility of turning back the job as ringmaster of the Tigers in favor of his athletic directorship. This, presumably, would be in belief that he no longer could fire up his kids even for the traditional big one and not because of the dissatisfaction of minority pressure groups.

Faurot has expressed public gratification at the rousing vote of confidence from former players, fans and alumni of Missouri. But privately he has said he wouldn't want to coach his alma mater a minute beyond the moment that he or responsible administrative officials felt he had lost his touch. That is the touch that lifted the Tigers from basement to penthouse, from regional ridicule to national reputation, and from debt to prosperity.

Basement Blues.

Bitterly, Missouri fell back into the cellar and finished with the fewest victories in Faurot's lengthy and achievement-marked term as it was upended this chilly afternoon by a spirited Kansas team. This prevented the Tigers from taking the lead for the first time in a 64-year-old gridiron rivalry which began in 1891.

The "old man", as his long-time assistants affectionately refer to the trim, energetic 53-year-old Faurot, had whittled off a 10-game deficit in the most lengthy Missouri valley gridiron series before suffering his first upset at Jayhawk hands.

Certainly most disturbing to Faurot as well as to sympathetic observers in this bleak autumn of just one Tiger triumph was the ability of the Black and Gold to stand up and battle the foremost teams in the nation, meaning Maryland and Oklahoma particularly, and then permit themselves to be outhustled as well as outscored by lesser-ranking elevens.

It was the deterioration of Tiger offensive line play, that toppled Missouri a week ago at home against Kansas State and it was that again here this afternoon as the Red and Blue of K. U. delighted Jayhawk followers among 30,000 spectators. Outplaying M. U. up front, Kansas finished with three victories and a tie in 10 tries.

Weak in Pass Defense.

As before, however, an inferior Missouri backfield, desperately needing the transfusion expected to be provided by the Webster Groves foursome and other members of a talented freshman team, displayed a large weakness against enemy passes. It was on aerials of 24 yards and 18 that K.U. scored in the first and third periods, capping drives of 85 and 31 yards.

Once the Tigers staved off the Jayhawks at the 14-yard line after giving up the ball on a third-quarter fumble, but, by contrast, Missouri was down in scoring territory time and again and failed, scoring only once. It was the Bengals' sole touchdown in the final 14 quarters or three and one-half games of the season. Tiger threats died at the 10-yard line against the clock in the first half, then at the 18, 13 and 31 in the second half.

Jim Hunter, scoring the Tiger TD on a sneak that capped a 42-yard drive in the second quarter, was not always wise in his signal-calling, it seemed. But he was a hard-working kid, doing nearly 60 minutes of rugged duty, carrying 23 times for a 65-yard total trimmed in half by losses suffered trying to pass. In addition, he connected on eight of 14 aerials for 127 yards.

For Kansas, Co-Captain Dick Reich, 211-pound Steelton (Pa.) fullback sidelined most of the Hawks Win In New York; 33 for Pettit

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 — A solid first half in which the Hawks' redhot gunners blazed away at a better than .500 percentage, plus dominance of the backboards by their big men, enabled the St. Louis club to rout the New York Knickerbockers, 104-91, tonight at Madison Square Garden before 7245 fans.

The Hawks now boast a 3-1 record and continue to set the pace in the N.B.A.'s Western Division. St. Louis plays at Syracuse Sunday night before returning to St. Louis for a Wednesday night game with Rochester.

Bob Pettit, the 6-9 ace from Louisiana State, paced his torrid mates with 33 points but the Hawks victory was largely a team affair. They ripped the cords at 22-for44 rate during the first half, leading by 55-43 at intermission time, and proceeded to increase their advantage over a faltering Knick crew during a wild second half.

Knicks Falter.

The game was a contest during a first quarter of brilliant basketball, featured by crisp shooting by both teams. But in the second half Pettit, Frank Selvy and Chuck Share collaborated to swamp the New Yorkers, whose attack lost organization and significance.

Selvy, playing his last game before reporting for active duty with the Army Monday, had 21 points and distributed them evenly where they did the most good. Ricketts, with five baskets in the first half and 12 points in all and Share with 13 points were the other St. Louisans in double figures.

Walter Dukes made his first NBA appearance of the season for thhe Knicks after being sidelined with a knee injury incurred in pre-season practice, but his was hardly an encour-

OKLAHOMA	7	6	14	14	—41

LINCOLN, Nebr., Nov. 19 (UP)—Mighty Oklahoma ruthlessly battered a game Nebraska team into submission, 41-0, today to win its eighth consecutive Big Seven conference title.

It was the last Nebraska game under Coach Bill Glassford, and the Huskers put all the spirit they could muster into it.

But the Nebraska drive lasted less than one period as Oklahoma's hard-running backs and jolting linemen stopped every Cornhusker thrust and tore repeatedly downfield for offensive gains.

The Orange-Bowl-bound Sooners made it 54 straight games without a loss in Big Seven play, and racked up consecutive victory No. 28 in the current string.

Nebraska threatened only once against the Sooners, the nation's top team.

That was in the first period, when the Huskers went to the six. But Fullback Benneth Morris of the Sooners killed the threat by intercepting a Rex Fischer pass on his own goal line.

Three players, Nebraska's Fullback George Cifra, and Oklahoma's Tackle Byron Searcy and Fullback Bill Brown, were ejected late in the game when a fist fight broke out.

The game was played in 40-degree temperatures before a crowd of 38,000.

Purdue 6, Indiana 4

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 19 (UP)—Little Ed Neves plunged for a fourth-period touchdown today as Purdue continued its mastery over Indiana, 6-4, in the fifty-eighth meeting of the intrastate football foes.

Washington U. Gets 14 Quick Points, Bradley Sails to 27-20 Win

Polky Just Short in Record Bid

Bradley	0	13	7	7	27
Wash. U.	14	0	0	6	20

By Robert Morrison

Washington University's football Bears were hauled up short by the Bradley University Braves yesterday at Francis Field—short of points, short of power, short of an individual rushing record and short of the right side of the score.

As a result, the Myrtle and Maroon dropped a 27-20 decision to the Peoria team and with a winning streak snapped at four games, the Bears had to settle for a final record of five victories and four defeats.

Don Polkinghorne, the sophomore fullback who needed 74 yards to break Ted Dunn's school record of 884 yards rushing in a season, was five yards short of that accomplishment.

And Polky got what he did the hard way. He carried the ball 22 times for his 69 yards and tailback Kenny Miles's record passing for 206 yards and two touchdowns wasn't enough to offset things.

Bradley's Fifth Victory.

Bradley, in its first season under the ex-Chicago Bear Billy Stone, thus defeated Carl Snavely's team for the second year in succession and with one game left on their schedule the Braves boasted a 5-3 record.

The boys from Peoria came back from a 14-point first-quarter deficit to do it, and their 60-minute players, Senior Halfback Don Hakes and Freshman Quarterback Dick Jamieson, joined the late-comer Fullback Jim Clark to get the job done.

Snavely had warned the Bears that Bradley was a dangerous team and that's the way it turned out. The Braves recovered a Bear fumble to score their first touchdown and struck quickly through the air to get another with only 50 seconds left in the first half.

In the second half Bradley nearly doubled the yardage on the Bears for that 30 minutes of play and after moving ahead by 20-14 in the third period, clinched things with another touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Hakes, a 175-pound halfback from Peoria, slashed through the Bears for 101 yards in 18 carries. Jamieson completed just four of 12 passes but they were good for 96 yards, three of them to Hakes for 90 yards. And when the big senior fullback, Jim Clark, took over at that position in the second half and lumbered along the ground for 60 yards in eight tries, Bradley nearly matched Washington in total offense, 321 yards to 323.

58-Yard TD March.

On the cold afternoon which kept the crowd down to about 2500, the Bears jumped into the lead with an airborne 58-yard march for a touchdown early in the first quarter.

Miles tossed to Bob Ladd for 12 yards at the Bradley 46 early in that drive. He threw again to Ladd, who raced about 30 yards to complete a 46-yard aerial touchdown strike. When Don Sauer converted, the Bears led 7-0, and Miles was on his way to a single-game passing mark. The old record was 163 yards, set by Mel Siegel against Wabash earlier this season. Siegel this day was on the bench because of an injured shoulder.

Washington scored again in the opening quarter, moving 53 yards, all by air. A screen pass from Miles to Polkinghorne got 42 yards at the Bradley 11 and then Sauer snared a Miles toss at the goal line to score.

Ahead 14-0, the Bears were in great shape but Polkinghorne's fumble of a punt in the second quarter was recovered by Bradley's Roger Hanson on the Washington 30 and the Braves scored in three plays. Hanson went through the middle on a 29-yard trap gainer and then plunged over from the one.

Still the Bears looked in good shape until their next drive was hobbled at the Bradley 10. There, with fourth and goal to go, they elected to attempt a field goal, at least partly against the wind.

Four Plays—and Bingo!

Sauer's place-kick was low. Bradley took over on its 20 and scored in four plays. Two were incomplete passes two were complete. Hakes made 54 yards on the first completion, slipping between Washington defenders near midfield and running to the 26. The second completion was a perfect strike to Hakes in the end zone as he scored the first of his two touchdowns on passes from Jamieson.

The left-footed Hakes failed to convert so the Bears still led by a point at halftime.

But Bradley tallied on a 53-yard march right off the bat in the third period. Clark got 20 on a pitchout to reach the Washington 20 and two plays later Jamieson hit Hakes for a 10-yard touchdown toss. Hanson converted and Bradley led, 20-14.

Braves Hold.

A pass interference penalty helped the Bears move to the Bradley 27 later in the third quarter, but the Braves held. Near the end of the period Miles's interception of a Bradley pass in the Washington end zone stopped the Braves, but early in the fourth quarter they scored again on a 73-yard march, all on the ground. Hakes and Clark did the work, Clark scoring on an eight-yard end run.

The Bears came back with a 78-yard march, with Miles throwing to Sauer for 36 yards at the one-foot mark and Polkinghorne going over for the score. But Bradley ran out the remaining three minutes without losing possession.

Braves Sign Player.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Milwaukee Braves announced that second baseman Bill Schoener of Waltham, Mass., has been signed to a 1956 farm club contract with Corpus Christi, Tex.

Yale Beats Harvard, 21-7, In Their 72nd Meeting

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 19 (AP)—Alert Yale, playing with peak desire, and capitalizing on the breaks, stopped a two-year Harvard streak 21-7, in a driving snow today as these traditional rivals met for the seventy-second time on the slippery turf of the bowl.

The Blue, never behind and dominating most of the time, tallied a touchdown in each of the last three quarters, including an exciting 39-yard runback of an intercepted pass by Dennis (The Menace) McGill which proved the clincher.

The victory gave Yale a triple tie for the Big Three title with Harvard and Princeton and the runner-up spot in the Ivy League behind the Tigers. Princeton won the Ivy title today by defeating Dartmouth, 6-3.

McGill's score came after seven seconds had elapsed in the final period, and started the Yale rooters singing "Good Night Poor Harvard."

The Crimson was out of it after that touchdown.

Earlier, the chilled crowd of 56,000 saw Vernon Loucks score on an eight-yard pass from Dean Loucks for Yale's first marker in the second period and Al Ward plunge over from the one in the third after Capt. Phil Tarasovic had recovered a Harvard fumble on the Crimson 18.

Harvard's only touchdown came late in the third period on an eight-yard pass, Walt Stahura to Ted Kennedy. Kennedy made a shoestring catch in the end zone after the ball had been deflected by Teammate Dexter Lewis. Bing Crosby kicked the extra point.

As quickly as possible after the game ended Tarasovic took the game football, which always goes to the captain of the winning team, and presented it to Bob Spears, Yale's 1951 football leader, who is fighting for recovery from polio.

Spears was stricken last spring and came here from Ypsilanti, Mich., with his legs in braces to see the game.

Pitt Crushes Penn State; Bowl Hopes Brighten

PITT	0	7	7	6	20

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa., Nov. 19 (AP)—Pitt's charging line and driving backs made power pay off with a 20-0 victory over Penn State on snowy Beaver Field today for the best Panther season since 1938 and bright hopes for a bowl bid.

Before 31,200, huddled against the driving snow storm, the Panthers marched 32 yards for a second period score, and slugged it out through the line for a 77-yard touchdown drive in the third period.

Then, as if to seal the verdict, Corny Salvaterra, lanky junior, squirted through a hole over right guard, swung sharply left and raced 62 yards for the final touchdown.

They were the first scores that Pitt had made in four years against their old rivals from Mount Nittany.

That left the Panthers with a 7-3 log for the season, including victories over West Virginia and Duke as the Sugar Bowl and the Gator Bowl scouts in the press box got an eye full.

On this snowy day with the ground churned to mud long before the game ended, the Pitt line, flanked by John Paluck and Joe Walton was too big and too strong for the scrappers from Penn State and the drive of quarterback Pete Neft on the sneak plays and Lou Cimarolli and Bob Grier inside the tackles was the offensive story of the game.

Neft, scored the first touchdown from one foot out. Grier got the second on a two-yard drive. Ambrose Begamery kicked both of the points.

Penn State had only one real offensive drive that in the first quarter, but the Lions were scrapping to the finish.

Hawks Again Defeat Knicks for Third Win

aging performance. He started the second half and after three minutes and 45 seconds was out of the game after committing five personal fouls and being responsible for a technical.

The Turning Point.

New York played its best ball during the first period and was leading 17-13 when the Hawks pulled away to a seven point splurge on a pivot by Share and a pair of sets by Bob Harrison and Ricketts. Carl Braun and Gene Shue, who with Ray Felix led the Knick scorers with 11, 12 and 13 points respectively, brought the Knicks back to the lead temporarily on a pair of set shots. Then the Hawks came back with another seven point outburst on a hook by Share and a pair of leaping baskets by Ricketts and were never again headed.

St. Louis led at the quarter 27-23, and at the half by 55-48. A tap-in by Gallatin and a set shot by Dukes enabled the New Yorkers to a menace by a 60-65 count during the early stages of the second half. But here Dukes went into his fouling act through over-eagerness, and after five minutes of the third quarter the Hawks led by 75-55. St. Louis was in front by 87-69 at the end of the third period and then it was a case of pouring it on during the many opportunities offered by the lack-lustre New Yorkers.

Celtics Win, 104-102.

BOSTON, Nov. 19 (UP)—Bill Sharman sank a one-hand push shot and Ernie Barrett dropped in a free throw to insure the Boston Celtics' hotly-contested 104-102 National Basketball Association victory over the Fort Wayne Pistons tonight before 6485 fans.

Sharman was high man for the Celtics with 20 points while Barrett had 19. Ed Macauley scored 18. Center Larry Foust topped the Pistons with 25 points.

Lakers Win, 91-90.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 19 (AP) — Big Clyde Lovellette curled in a soft hook shot with just 11 seconds to play tonight to give the Minneapolis Lakers a 91-90 National Basketball Association victory over the Rochester Royals.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by W. J. McGoogan

Vince Martinez and Christensen Ready.

VINCE MARTINEZ, the New Jersey welterweight, and his opponent in Wednesday night's 10-round main event at The Arena, Chris Christensen, of Denmark, are on the scene and about ready.

They're scheduled to work out at The Arena's main building this afternoon, Martinez at 1 o'clock, Christensen at 2 o'clock.

Martinez arrived yesterday afternoon with his manager, Bill Daly, and their plane was late. By the time Vince reached The Arena it was decided that he should take the day off, so the few fans assembled had to leave without a view of a boy considered the outstanding challenger for the 147-pound crown now held by Carmen Basilio of Syracuse, N.Y.

Daly also manages James J. Parker the Canadian heavyweight and he has just returned from London, England, where Parker fought the South African giant, Ewart Potgieter to a draw there Tuesday night. Potgieter weighs 325* pounds and is 7 ft., 3 ins., tall while Parker is 6 ft. 3 ins. tall and weighs 225 pounds.

In Daly's estimation, Parker won the fight but Bill, of course, might be a little prejudiced.

Still Daly was not one of those who thought Pottie should be laughed at.

"He's got possibilities," said Daly. "He's only had nine fights altogether and knows little about the finer points of boxing but he can learn, as did Carnera.

"You'll remember that Carnera looked mighty crude and awkward, too, when you first saw him and he was criticized pretty severely. Then, when he developed into a pretty good boxer he never got the credit he deserved. Potgieter is in the same fix."

As to Martinez, Daly believes, naturally, that he has the next champion of the world. He and the boxer split up about a year ago over contract difficulties and Vince's family blamed the boy's inability to get fights on that disagreement.

Recently Daly, Vince and Vince's father signed a new 5-year contract and Vince is back in action.

He has had four bouts this year, defeating Chico Varona, Bob Provizzi and Lester Felton each in 10 rounds and he knocked out Mario Terry in 3 rounds his latest out on Oct. 29.

Vince thinks he is now rounding into his best form and should be ready for a title fight early next spring.

Virgil Akins, St. Louis welterweight, is one of those who is standing in the way of Martinez and a chance at the title for Virgil rates one step ahead of Martinez.

Ready to Box Akins.

DALY declared that he is ready for Akins as soon as he gets the proper financial terms. What Bill wants in the way of a guaranty is, of course, his own business but he has mentioned the sum of $12,500 previously which is quite a guaranty in this day and age of television in boxing.

"Anyway, Akins is in for quite a scrap in New York when he takes on Isaac Logart of Cuba, Dec. 2" Daly remarked, "he might get knocked right out of the box with that one. I saw their first fight in which Akins won a split decision and I thought that Logart had the better of it."

But if Akins gets past Logart again and decisively, it will be up to Martinez to fight Akins for the right to meet the winner of the return title match between Basilio and Tony De Marco scheduled to be held in Boston, Nov. 30.

All of that is predicated on the ability of Martinez to defeat Christensen and while Vince will be a heavy favorite to turn the trick at The Arena, the Dane is no mean opponent.

In 37 contests, Christensen has won 18 by decision, nine by knockouts, boxed two draws, lost six decisions and was kayoed twice.

This stacks up against the record of Martinez who, in 47 bouts, has won 21 by decision, 23 by knockouts and lost three. Vince has never been knocked out.

Vince formerly was a draftsman in an electrical plant in New Jersey but gave it up when he reached the top ranks of his division.

"It's all right to work and fight when you're boxing 4 or 6 rounders," he said, "because they don't pay you enough to keep you going. And unless you've got a job, you go into debt but when you reach the main events, you have to devote all your time to boxing."

Irving Schoenwald, matchmaker for the International Boxing Club at The Arena has announced completion of Wednesday's card and will be telecast nationally and here over KTVI, channel 36.

Joe Reynolds and Bobby Bickle, Topeka, Kansas, meet in the 6-round semifinal; Al Jones, St. Louis boxes Abe Cruz, Chicago in 6-rounds; in three 4-round bouts the lineup will be — Billy Tyree, Omaha, vs. Frank McGary, Chicago; Willie Frazier, St. Louis vs. Charley Spruell, Chicago; Ted McKane, Winnipeg, Canada, vs. Eddie Ford, Waukegan, Ill. The last named two will be fighting their first professional fights.

Brennan Involved in Penalty as Irish Rally to Win, 17-14

Hornung's Field Goal Beats Iowa

Iowa	0	0	7	7	14
Notre Dame	0	7	0	10	17

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 18 (AP)—Notre Dame, kept under pressure most of the game by Iowa's sizzling sophomore backs, today popped loose behind Quarterback Paul Hornung's aerials for a touchdown and field goal in the last seven and one-half minutes of play for a 17-14 victory.

The brief, sensational rally turned a record Irish home crowd of 59,955 into a frenzy and the field was swamped by uproarious fans as the game ended, giving Notre Dame its eighth victory in nine starts. The goal posts went down for the first time in the school's history.

Hornung was the hero of the spectacular victory surge.

After Iowa grabbed a 14-7 lead early in the fourth quarter, Hornung started firing passes as never before this season. Two hits in succession were good for 32 yards and finally he capped a 63-yard touchdown drive in five plays with a terrific bit of split second strategy.

With the ball on the Iowa 17, the big junior from Louisville faded back to pass but was nearly rushed off his feet farther and farther he retreated. On the 35, he spied Jim Morse in the far corner of the end zone, alone. He spiraled the ball into his arms.

After booting the extra point, Hornung again guided the Irish toward the Hawkeyes' goal with about three minutes left to play. His 35-yard toss to Morse was partially nullified later by a 15-yard penalty against the Irish for unsportsmanlike conduct but finally Hornung booted a 28 yard field goal for the victory edge of three points.

Notre Dame had moved to the Iowa 3 and, with fourth down coming up, a game official accused Irish Coach Terry Brennan of throwing the kicking tee onto the field for use in setting up the ball for a field goal attempt.

A 15-yard "unsportsmanlike" penalty ensued, and Hornung, with the ball down on the 18, placekicked a perfect three-pointer. Ten yards from the goal line to the cross bars is added to the length of the kick, making it 28.

The referee didn't specify and the press box was unable to learn the reason for the penalty for unsportsmanship. The inference was that it was imposed for coaching from the sidelines.

Later Brennan denied he threw the kicking tee in, saying someone on the bench did it.

Iowa scoring—Touchdowns: Harris (2, plunge), Reichow (6, pass from Drobina).
Conversions: Freeman 2.
Notre Dame scoring—Touchdowns: Studer (1, plunge), Morse (17, pass from Hornung).
Conversions: Hornung 2.
Field goals: Hornung (28).

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

There will be heavy rebuilding at University City High next season. Fifteen of Coach Stub Muhl's Indians completed their prep football careers yesterday against Country Day. U. City finished second in the Suburban League's Big Six with a 4 and 1 record. Lined up before the final game, many of them with smears of black grease below their eyes to protect them against sun glare, are: Front row, left to right—SAM MARKS, ALAN WINNERMAN, ED DREYFUS, JACK GROTH, MAURRY TAMARKIN, HARVEY OSTERHODM, CURTIS JONES. Back row—ED KESSLER, GILBERT BUKOWSKY, FRANK LEEMING, RICH ABERSON, BOB KOVAC, BILL COMFORT, ART MISEROCCHI, and GEORGE BRADBURY.

Terps Whip George Washington, Head for Orange Bowl Unbeaten

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Nov. 19 (AP)—Halfback Ed Vereb scored two first-half touchdowns behind his second string line and Maryland fought off George Washington throughout the scoreless second half for a 19-0 victory today to head for the Orange Bowl with its third undefeated team in five years.

Vereb hiked his season's touchdown total to 16 in 10 games as Coach Jim Tatum called on the season-long clutch players for the early cushion scores.

Lynn Beightol, quarterbacking the first string in place of Frank Tamburello, who operated the reserves with a heavily bandaged neck, got Maryland off to a 6-0 lead by throwing a 41-yard touchdown pass to End Russell Dennis the first time Maryland had the ball.

Tatum sent in his second string—working with Vereb—when Maryland recovered a fumble on the G.W. 26 later in the period. Vereb, on four carries, covered 22 yards, plunging over the final yard.

He came back in late in the second quarter to finish a 60-yard drive by scoring from four yards out with 17 seconds left.

Maryland's line led by vicious tackling Mike Sandusky and Jack Davis held G.W. to a net gain of three yards and one first down in the first half. The game was played on a soft field surrounded by snow which stopped just before the game started before 20,000.

In the second half, George Washington was stopped smack on the Maryland goal and again on the 21 and 16. Maryland made only one other threat to the 12.

Vereb missed the attempted conversion after the first touchdown which would have tied him with Bob Shemonski for the record number of points in a Maryland season, 97. The senior from Pittsburgh carried the ball 13 times for 76 yards.

Tamburello, who was in the hospital most of the week with an infected neck, worked against the clock to get Maryland's last touchdown. Three times in the march in which he contributed a 16-yard pass to put the ball on the 10 he called time out. He then called the last two plays in the time out huddle.

Tatum had followed his prearranged plan of sending in the second team along with Vereb with six minutes to play in each of the first two quarters. He had to hold off longer in the second half as Mike Sommer, 170-pound sophomore, found his running legs.

Sommer started G.W. goalward with a 40-yard run on a fake kick and Bob Sturm then completed his first two passes to advance George Washington to the 5 early in the third quarter. Bill Weaver was stopped just short of the goal on fourth down.

U. City Wallops Country Day In Final, 44 - 21

University City wound up a successful season by walloping Country Day yesterday and while doing so displayed a passing combination that could keep the Indians in the forefront again next season. The score in the inter-league match was 44 to 21.

Bill Comfort finished his career with the Indians by scoring three more touchdowns on runs of 18, 19 and 72 yards. Before the first half was over, however, Sandy Jaffe, a junior, threw the first of his three scoring passes—this one for 46 yards to senior Ed Kessler.

Later in the game Jaffe tossed to Morty Green, a junior, for 25 yards and a touchdown. In the last quarter Jaffe again connected with Green on a play good for 60 yards and another TD.

Comfort scored U. City's Initial touchdown on a run of 19 yards in the first quarter. Rich Aberson passed to Curtis Jones for 19 yards and a touchdown later in the quarter. Bob Kovac kicked the first of his two extra points.

It was Comfort scoring again in the second quarter on a run of 18 yards. Jaffe's throw to Kessler left U. City ahead at the half, 25 to 0.

Comfort returned a punt from his own 28 on a zig-zag touchdown run of 72 yards in the third quarter. The pair of Jaffe-to-Green TDs finished up the Indian scoring.

It was 38 to 0 before Country Day could score. Tate Robertson plunged from the two. Later on Robertson passed to Randy Wieland from the two for a touchdown, and the same Robertson - to - Wielandy combination worked for 42 yards and a TD near the end of the game. Curt Wolf kicked three extra points.

Nail Wins Futurity At Pimlico

BALTIMORE, Nov. 19 (AP)—Nail became the second greatest money-winning 2-year-old of all time today at Pimlico when he won the thirty-third running of the Pimlico Futurity by a length and a half from Liberty Sun.

Picking up a check for $67,980 in the mile and a sixteenth race, the gray son of Nirgal and No Strings boosted his total to $239,930 for only eight starts.

As favorite with the crowd of 14,902, Nail paid $4.40 and was timed in 1:47 over a sloppy track.

Nail won by one and one-half lengths, the margin he held almost throughout the entire race.

Snow, which had been falling since early morning, stopped just before the field went postward for the futurity. Earlier in the day, the snow had fallen so heavily that portions of the races were completely obscured from view.

Nail, owned by Mrs. Anson Bigelow, took the lead at the start under Hedley Woodhouse. He had only one serious challenger throughout, and that was Calumet Farm's Liberty Sun, the runner-up. Brandywine Stables' Countermand was third.

From the half-mile pole to the finish, Liberty Sun was in second place and within easy striking distance. He reduced the winner's lead slightly in the last four furlongs but couldn't close the gap.

Only one horse, Hasty Road, ever has earned more money as a 2-year-old than Nail. Hasty Road won $277,132 in gaining six victories out of nine starts in 1953.

Nail has accounted for three stakes races—the Belmont Futurity, the Remsen and today's Pimlico Futurity. In the Garden State Stakes, he finished tenth to Prince John, Career Boy and Needles.

Red Murff's Record.

Red Murff, who will get a chance with the Milwaukee Braves next spring, has won 113 minor league games as against 70 defeats while pitching six years in the minor leagues.

Flippin Stars in 6-3 Win

DARTMOUTH	0	3	0	0	—3
PRINCETON	0	0	0	6	—6

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 19 (AP)—Sore-kneed Royce Flippin and Bill Agnew of St. Louis, roused Princeton for one mighty fourth period burst that carried the Tigers to a 6-3 victory over Dartmouth and to the Ivy League football championship in a blinding snowstorm today.

Until Agnew sliced nine yards for a touchdown with a minute and 33 seconds gone in the final quarter, Darthmouth's hard-hitting line and superb quarterback, Bill Beagle, completely dominated the play.

Agnew is a graduate of John Burroughs school.

It was Beagle who kicked a wobbling, 11-yard field goal in the second period to draw first blood in this bitter traditional battle and it was the Dartmouth line that stopped a 69-yard Princeton march just a yard short of the goal.

Flippin, out of action most of the year with an injured knee, was thrown into the game for a passing series shortly before the end of the first half and then sent out to direct the Tigers' last half attack.

He personally carried the team on its unsuccessful 69-yard drive after the second half kickoff and directed the march that led to the winning touchdown on a 36-yard drive.

Agnew broke through Dartmouth defenses for eight yards and then for nine to crack the Big Green's defenses. Dick Martin, getting a bad pass from center, tried to run the ball across for conversion but was tackled.

Dartmouth scoring—Field goal: Beagle (11-yard line). Princeton scoring—Touchdown: Agnew (9, run).

Texas Tech Wins Over Pacific, 13-7

LUBBOCK, Tex., Nov. 19 (UP)—Jack Kirkpatrick, a third string quarterback, came off the bench today to steer Texas Tech 58 yards in the fourth quarter to the touchdown that gave Tech a 13-7 victory over College of the Pacific.

A sun-baked crowd of 16,500 fans watched Tech score in the first quarter on a 52-yard drive and College of the Pacific take the lead in the second quarter.

Texas Tech came from behind on Halfback Hugh Fewin's one-foot plunge into the end zone at 8:41 of the final quarter.

Kirkpatrick cooly directed the Raiders in a 58-yard drive after Halfback Don Cornell's punt had gone only 18 yards to the Tech 42. With Halfback M. C. Northam, Fullback Lonnie Graham and Kirkpatrick carrying, interspersed with passes from Kirkpatrick to Fewin and End Ken Vakey, the Raiders moved to the Tiger 4. Northam went to the goal and Fewin carried over.

College of Pacific	—	0	7	0	—7

Texas Tech scoring: Touchdowns—Sides (3, plunge); Fewin (1, plunge). Conversions, Kirkpatrick.

Northwestern Holds Illinois To Tie, 7 to 7

NORTHWEST'N	0	7	0	0	—7
ILLINOIS	—	— 7	0	0	—7

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 19 (UP)—An inspired, fighting Northwestern team, winless in eight games, battled Illinois to a 7-7 tie today and missed an opportunity to upset the Illini when Dale Pienta fumbled on the Illinois eight-yard line in the final minute of play.

Northwestern, outfighting and outcharging Illinois all afternoon, moved to the Illinois eight-yard line with one minute and 33 seconds remaining in the game, but on a fake field-goal attempt, Pienta fumbled and Illinois recovered to kill Northwestern's gallant upset attempt.

Jim Troglio, a 173-pound halfback from Spring Valley, Ill., outplayed Illinois' spectacular Bob Mitchell and scored the touchdown which gave Northwestern a tie.

Illinois started out as though it was going to run away with the game. Mitchell, carrying the ball for the second time, raced 30 yards through left tackle and outraced the Northwestern secondary to score a touchdown on the sixth play of the game. Dick Miller converted and Illinois led 7-0.

Troglio sparked an 81-yard Northwestern march in the second quarter and plunged over from the four-yard line after he raced 28 yards to put the Wildcats in scoring position.

Northwestern threatened to score again in the third period when Jerry Weber ran around his right end for 25 yards to the Illinois 11-yard line. Illinois' forward wall stopped Northwestern cold, however, and Illinois took over on its 12.

Northwestern scoring: Touchdown—Troglio (4, run). Conversion—Eldridge. Illinois scoring: Touchdown—Mitchell (30, run). Conversion—Miller.

Frosh Star

JAMES A. BURKE

James Burke Chosen Captain At Dartmouth

Dartmouth College's undefeated freshman football team just elected St. Louisan James A. Burke as its captain, it was announced by the St. Louis Dartmouth Club.

Burke, who was co-captain last year of C.B.C. football team, was praised by Dartmouth's backfield coach, Wilbur Volz.

"He is an outstanding runner, the best defensive back I have seen in years, and an excellent student," Coach Volz said in his letter to St. Louis Dartmouth Club. "I think he's going to be a great football player the next three seasons."

Last Saturday, in the game between Dartmouth and Brown U. freshman teams, Burke scored two touchdowns, one on a runback of the kickoff which he caught on his five-yard line.

At C.B.C., Burke was president of the student body, president of his class for four years, a lieutenant-colonel in the R.O.T.C. and a member of the track, football, basketball and soccer teams.

Son of Mrs. Rose Burke and the late Jim Burke, the former C.B.C. star was the recipient last fall of the W. Clark Schmidt Memorial Scholarship.

Burnine Sets Record For Pass Receptions As Mizzou Is Defeated

season with injuries, pounded for 65 yards in 17 carries, and John Francisco, Massillon (O.) sophomore halfback, gained 93 in 14 attempts and flagged down a pass for a touchdown.

Going Into Receivership.

As a result of frequent passing, the Tigers finished with 272 yards net gained to Kansas's 243, and, as usual, the receiving of Hank Burnine, agile M.U. end playing his last college game, was outstanding. Burnine's five catches gave him two more Missouri records, a single-season high of 44 and a career total of 75.

As mentioned, however, it was the Jayhawks who struck through the air with more telling effect. In their opening drive of 85 yards, 16 plays were needed, three of them passes. Twice, Wally Strauch, sophomore quarterback from Elmhurst, Ill., connected with End Paul Smith, a native Kansan. Then, with third down and needing nine yards, Strauch arched one to Francisco, who had filtered into the end zone and took the 24-yard peg alone. John Handley converted.

Before the first quarter ended, Hunter, who had been alternating from the split-T and spread, daringly ran from punt formation on fourth down at his own 47, needing 13 yards and going 14. But the gamble that worked wasn't sufficient to stimulate the Tiger blockers up ahead, so it wasn't until Reich fumbled on a short-yardage try for first and 10 that the Tigers got under way in the second period.

Taking over at the Kansas 45, the Missouri athletes required 12 plays to go on in. En route, Hunter passed to Burnine for 18 yards. Faking a pitch, Hunter ran for seven, and another time Joe Wynn plunged for six. Then after Johnny Powell, the only truly fast Tiger back, had bolted for nine yards, Hunter sneaked across. Gene Roll, No. 1 fullback limited to place-kicking because of a cracked cheekbone, tied the score.

Too Little, Too Late.

Before the half ended, Sonny Stringer had made an over-the-shoulder interception and 23-yard runback with a misdirected K.U. pass. Hunter, from the T, passed to Bill McKinney for 16 and then from the spread connected with Stringer, who was hauled down at the Jawhawk 10. The ball-carrier didn't get out of bounds, though, and the clock ticked off the last 10 seconds of the half before the slow-reacting Tigers could put the ball in play.

Opening the third quarter, Hunter fumbled and Kansas recovered on the Mizzou 32, but gave up the ball at the 14. A first down later, Smith, charging in from right end, deflected and recovered a Hunter lateral on the Tiger 31-yard line. Apparently stopped, Dave Preston, sophomore quarterback from Warren, O., bootlegged the ball at his hip, rolled out to his left and fired a pass which End Lynn McCarthy of St. Peters, Minn., caught on his knees for a TD.

When Al Portney, rugged Missouri tackle from St. Louis, rushed in to block Handley's point try, the Tigers had a good chance. They seemed to be ready to capitalize on the opportunity, too, as suddenly the pallid ground game picked up. Hunter, Bill Rice and George Cramer carried, then Jerry Curtright raced 24 yards on a reverse. But with first down at the 24, a holding penalty stunted the drive and it sagged at the 17.

The brightest opportunity came in the opening minutes of the last quarter when Punter Ted Rohde of Kansas, back on fourth down, fumbled and couldn't get his kick away, the Tigers taking over on the Jayhawk 12. Hunter, rolling out, lost five to offset a nine-yard pass to Burnine, then used Wynn for a meager one-yard gain before fumbling on fourth down as he tried to get out from under center before he had the ball.

Recklessly, Preston threw a pass intercepted by Clayton's Carl Osterloh and returned 14 yards to the K.U. 48, giving Missouri one more chance with about seven minutes to go. Hunter immediately pitched to Burnine at the Jayhawk 37. An offsides followed, however, Stringer, rushed, passed wildly. Hunter then connected with Burnine for nine yards, but two more aerial efforts went awry.

And it wasn't long before Don Faurot, the veteran gridiron headmaster who reportedly had told his boys beforehand that this might be his last one as coach, was striding briskly across the field to congratulate Kansas' young Chuck Mather. Had an era really ended?

Cards Mailing Contracts; Some Players to Be Cut

Others in Line for Increases

Getting down to the business of signing players to their 1956 contracts about 45 days ahead of the usual schedule, General Manager Frank Lane of the Cardinals said yesterday "a very few of the Redbirds will be asked to take cuts in salary."

"And a few will get raises, too," he added. "None of the suggested cuts will be what you'd call drastic," he said.

In view of the 1955 Cardinals' disappointing showing and their seventh-place finish, it was generally expected that there would be some salary revisions. Lane said some contracts have already been mailed to players and others will be moving daily.

He said he will have personal talks with those players living in the St. Louis area. These include pitcher Tom Poholsky, infielders Al (Red) Schoendienst and Ken Boyer, and outfielders Harry Elliott and Stan Musial. Wally Moon, who also makes his home here, will be reached by the mail man at Havana, Cuba, where he will play ball for Mike Gonzalez's Havana Reds.

In recent years, Cardinal contracts have not gone into the mails until after Jan. 1, but Lane explained that he likes to get the job done early. Further, the deadline for mailing the documents has been moved up from Feb. 1 to Jan. 15.

"I like to get contracts out of the way early so that the players and myself can start concentrating on the business of building a winning team," explained Lane.

St. Louis Duck Hunters Try Public Area.

ALTHOUGH the state's Fountain Grove public shooting grounds usually has its greatest number of waterfowl around Thanksgiving, there was a good supply of ducks and geese on hand on the occasion of our visit recently to the area—in northern Missouri near Meadville.

By 4:30 a.m. hunters had gathered in the Conservation Commission's headquarters building, waiting to be assigned to blinds. Legal shooting time was about 6:20 a.m.

Shortly, windows of two checking booths in the building were opened and Hamlet Clark, area supervisor, and his assistant began processing the hunters, taking temporary charge of their licenses and having them draw numbers for blinds.

For two of us, the total charge was $5. That included rental of a dozen decoys. We drew a blind called G-4. Following instructions, we drove a short distance to a dock, where an attendant was busy taking care of hunters.

Each two shooters were given a boat, a set of oars and bundles of straw to hide the boat from sharp eyes of passing waterfowl. With one man at the oars, the other handled a flashlight, picking out markers for G lane in the cold darkness.

Getting to G-4, quite a distance from the dock, proved more than adequate as early morning exercise for the oarsman. The blind, on a patch of land surrounded by shallow water, consisted of large casks firmly set in the earth.

These casks, each with small wood seats in them made comfortable hiding places for the hunters, well concealed by brush pulled partly over the top.

Just as a trace of light appeared in the sky, both ducks and geese began appearing in large flights from different directions. At times, the geese were in the familiar V formations.

From a nearby refuge came a continuous chorus of the fox-like barking sound made by the big Canadas. The geese would occasionally take to the air in huge numbers but, after milling around, would settle down again, wise enough to stay within the confines of safety.

Unfortunately for the occupants of blind G-4, the birds, for the most part, stayed too high or too far away to be reached by shotgun pellets. However, two mallards swept wide and circled straight into the decoys.

Much to the hunters' disgust, the birds quickly departed under their own power, their feathers only ruffled by several gun blasts at them.

Later, a pair of fast-moving ducks came out of the East over the blind, not low but still within range. Again, the shooters' aim was poor and the waterfowl population remained undiminished.

Two men in a nearby blind found themselves in just the right place, for several bunches of ducks picked that spot for a landing. As each bunch approached, circling lower and lower, there was a volley of shots and one or two ducks folded their wings and dropped, while the remaining birds maneuvered frantically to get away.

Fountain Grove, first opened for public shooting in 1948, has 38 of its 46 blinds in operation this year. Eight are closed because of low water.

Success of hunters has ranged from poor to very good. On Nov. 1, the 77 shooters on the area bagged only 35 ducks, an average of less than one-half each. Just six days later, on Nov. 7, the bag by 88 hunters totaled 209 birds—an average of 2.4 each.

The first two days of the season, Oct. 28 and 29, were good for the hunter. The average kill on those days was 2.7 and 2.2 ducks per hunter—commendable considering the high shooting pressure.

Clark, the area manager, said the number of waterfowl on hand in the first two weeks of the season was larger than for the corresponding period last year.

The bag of birds in the first 11 days of the season included 102 geese, all Canadas, although there are a few blue and snow geese on the area. Among the ducks downed were seven canvasbacks.

Fountain Grove is about 230 miles from St. Louis by automobile.

400 Gather to Pay Tribute to CBC's Klemm

Bill Klemm, coach for 25 years at Christian Brothers College, was the subject of a "This Is Your Life" type of program at the Gold Room of the Jefferson Hotel last night and at the end of the evening he was presented with government bonds totaling $2500. About 400 former members of football, basketball and track teams coached by Klemm attended the affair.

Appearing in the program were a group of persons who had been involved in various incidents during Klemm's career.

Among these were: Eddie Hickey, basketball coach at St. Louis University, who was a forward on the same high school team with Klemm in Spalding, Neb.; Bill Bandle, a lineman who intercepted a pass against St. Louis U. High in 1938 and ran 70 yards for the winning touchdown, only to be criticized by Klemm for not carrying the ball properly; Father Ed Reilly, who said he was once scared into running in a state track meet by Klemm's voice booming from the grandstand.

John (Babe) Murphy, present football coach at C.B.C. and a former player for Klemm, told how Klemm often had told him never to become a coach; Father Pete Meara recalled how Klemm had seen through the "illness" excuse he brought when the student wished to skip track practice in order to compete in the Golden Gloves; and Henry Schemmer, Klemm's rival through the 25 years as track coach at University City High, reminisced over their many meetings in important meets.

A series of questions about his coaching career were asked Klemm in a simulated quiz program, with correct answers bringing him the $2500 in bonds as reward. J. J. A.

Rutgers Beats Columbia; Only 1000 Brave Snow

RUTGERS	0	0	6	6	12
COLUMBIA	6	0	0	0	6

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP)—Bob (Polar) Bear mushed 25 yards through the blinding snow after taking a short pass from Bill Witacre in the final quarter today to give Rutgers a 12-6 victory over Columbia in a game played before about 1000 animated snowmen.

The customers amused themselves by tossing snowballs and the band paraded with umbrellas at half time while the snow blotted out the line markers and turned the players into dim figures performing in half light.

Rutgers was held scoreless in the first half as Columbia marched 64 yards in eight plays after receiving the opening kickoff. Alex Giampetro scored from the one after a 32-yard run by Roy Altman.

Beaumont Passing Fancy, Rallies to Beat Washington Tech, 21-13

Jackets Wind Up Second

By Harold Tuthill

Beaumont, the 1954 Public High League football champion, overcame a 13-to-12 halftime deficit and defeated Washington Tech, 21 to 13, yesterday afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium. The victory, the fifth in six league engagements for the Blue Jackets, enabled them to finish in second place behind champion Central.

Jim Carney scored three times and added another point on a conversion to lead Southwest to a 28-to-6 victory over Roosevelt in the second portion of the matinee twin bill.

In the night part of the tripleheader and final Public High League game of the season, Cleveland defeated Soldan, 41 to 12.

Beaumont's only loss in league play was a 19-13 setback by Central, the team which will represent the P.H.L. in Thursday's Accident Benefit engagement with St. Mary's, the Catholic Athletic Conference winner.

Yesterday Beaumont flashed a devastating passing attack which showed 11 completions in 13 tried during the first three quarters. The Jackets attempted a total of 20 and completed 12, gaining 152 yards.

Beaumont found itself trailing early when Tech took over on downs at the Jacket 46. After a nine-yard passing gain and a short rush, Tech's Nickel Anderson broke loose and ran 35 yards for the first tally. His plunge for the extra point was short.

Drive From Own 39.

Beaumont bounced right back, scoring a tying touchdown on a drive which began at its 39 and ended when Bob Brand passed eight yards to Cliff Jordan with 43 seconds left in the period. Dyer's kick for the extra point was no good.

Jim Rosner kicked off for Beaumont to Jehoda Gaines. He eluded the entire Beaumont team as he ran 98 yards for the touchdown which put Tech ahead, 12-6.

Sherrell McKinney converted with a dash around right end.

In the second quarter Beaumont marched 62 yards, the payoff coming on a 30-yard pass play from Brand to Barth. Dyer's kick was to the right.

Nauert Scores.

The Jackets took the second half kickoff and covered 60 yards, Leo De Vere scoring from about a yard out. Jerry Nauert took a handoff over for the extra point.

A subsequent third quarter move extended over into the final period, but the Golden Lions held at their two-yard line. There Don Herd, Tech quarterback, was tackled behind the goal line for a safety. That ended the scoring.

Tech's defeat dropped it into a third place tie with Sumner, both 4-2 in their first Public High football competition. Vashon, the third all-Negro school to play league football for the first time, wound up with 3-3.

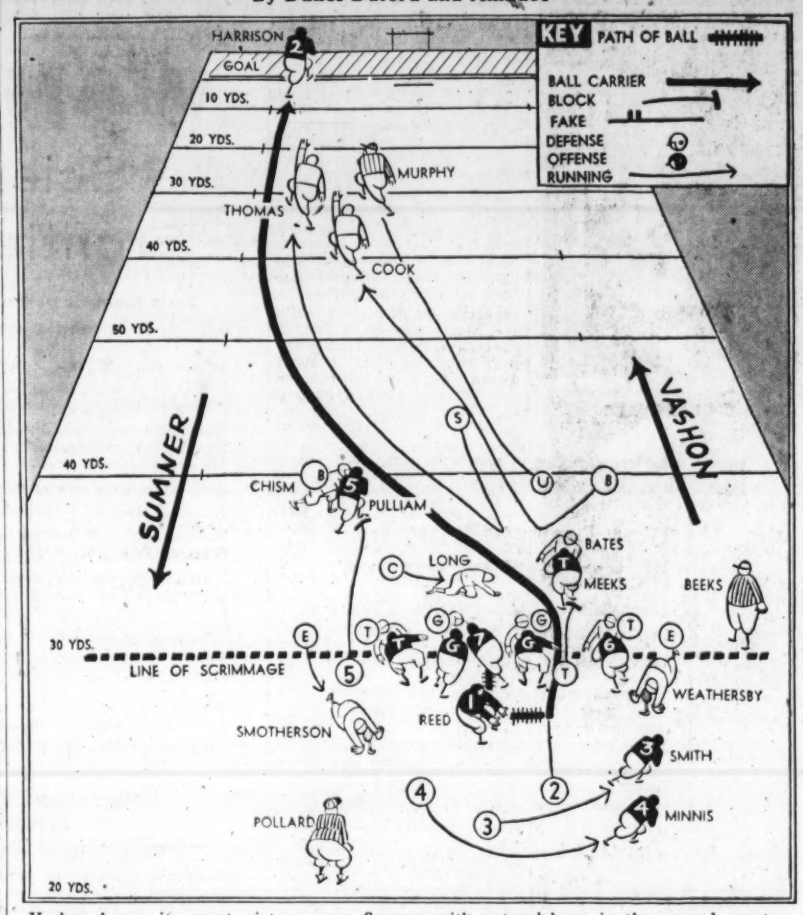
Swift Vashon Wolverine Runs 70 Yards

By Dukes Duford and Amadee



Vashon began its upset victory over Sumner with a touchdown in the second quarter. Right halfback Bob Harrison ran 70 yards through the Sumner team for the tally, which gave the Wolverines a tie at half time, 6 to 6. Vashon, on its own 30, lined up in a regular T formation while Sumner used a 6-2-2-1 defense. Quarterback Carl Reed (1) took ball from Center Dave Grant (7) and gave the ball to Harrison (2) who exploded through a big hole made by Right Guard Willie Hall and Right End Dennis Ballard (6). Right Tackle Francis Meeks took the line backer out of the play and another key block was thrown by Left End Oscar Pulliam (5) who took the defensive Right Halfback, Wesley Chism, out of the play, thereby giving Harrison a clear field. Vashon ultimately won, 13 to 6.

Gene Hart Would Rather Pull Out Victories Than Yank Teeth

By John J. Archibald

Whenever a St. Louis University High player delivers a teeth-rattling tackle, Coach Gene Hart thinks of what might have been. All through college he studied and planned to be a dentist, but instead Gene finds himself yanking players instead of molars and plugging defense holes instead of cavities.

Hart took over as head coach of the football Junior Bills this season after the departure of popular C. J. Taylor and has directed his team to five victories and two ties. He can make his first season with the Blue and White an undefeated one if St. Louis can turn back Assumption on Thanksgiving day.

All this comes just five years after Hart was turned down in his application for dental school and took a teaching-and-coaching job while he waited for another chance.

"It was in 1950," said Hart, "and the school in which I wanted to enroll was able to accept only about 50 of the 200 applications. So even though I had taken a pre-dental course while at Rockhurst College in Kansas City, I agreed to take a position with a school in Bucyrus, Kan., for one year.

"Shortly after I accepted the job, I learned I could enroll in dental school," Hart continued, "but I didn't want to go back on my word. Besides, I had played football in both high school and college for Rockhurst and sort of looked forward to trying my hand at coaching for a while."

He Liked the Flavor.

The taste of coaching was all Hart needed. When he heard of an opening at St. Peter's High in Jefferson City, because Babe Murphy was then leaving to take the job at C.B.C. in St. Louis, Hart applied and was accepted.

That first season at St. Peter's was no picnic.

"When Babe left, 20 seniors departed at the same time," said Gene. "We managed a 5 and 4 season, but the next year the team won just three out of nine. I switched over from a T to a single-wing after that, and the team's record the next two years was 7-2 and 8-1."

Then he stepped into the St. Louis U. High job. The Junior Bills were tied by Southwest, 7-7, in the opener, but came back with important victories over Roosevelt and Beaumont.

The season's highlight was the meeting with East St. Louis. By tying the Flyers, 12-12, the Junior Billikens stopped a 35-game winning streak by the East Siders.

Details of that struggle at Oakland Stadium are still vivid to Hart.

"I'd never seen a high school team hit as hard and quick as the East St. Louis boys," Gene said. "Some of the good college squads can do it, but it was amazing to see how all seven of the East St. Louis linemen would hit us at the same instant.

"Our team took a severe pounding that night," Hart continued. "If you don't have the bench strength when you play East St. Louis, you're sunk. Our boys were still aching several days later. It's a thrill to take on a team like that though, and we plan to meet them again next season."

Layoffs Not Welcome.

Since the East St. Louis game it has been somewhat difficult for Hart to keep his team keyed up because of the school's schedule troubles. There were two weeks off, then a trip to play Douglass of Columbia. After that there was another two-week layoff, then the C.B.C. game. Both of the latter were victories, and in the Junior Billikens' most recent contest they defeated Lincoln of East St. Louis.

Only four touchdowns have been scored against St. Louis U. High in its seven games. Hart credits linemen like Guard Bob Craddock and Tackle Jerry Wilkes, two of the many seniors on the team.

"Craddock is a terrific competitor," Hart said. "And he's as good at downfield blocking as he is on defense. Wilkes, a 225-pound muscle man, can best be appreciated when you look at the films of our games. He's great. And so is Willie Reinwart, our center and linebacker. Willie plays every minute of the close games."

"If I were going to pick out a couple of backs I'd name Fullback Paul Christ and Halfback Al Salsich," Hart went on. "Salsich can pass as well as run, but Christ is one of the hardest boys to bring down that I have seen. He carried the load in the second half of our game with C.B.C."

New . . . A Point Kicker.

There's something new in Junior Billiken football this season in addition to the coach. Kicking for extra points.

"I was told that when we kicked points against Roosevelt, it was the first time St. Louis U. High's team had tried this since 1943," Gene said.

"We tried out several boys at kicking early this year and one of them was a soccer player, Kevin McGinnis," said Hart. "He's our left tackle, but he's a point kicker too. He booted three out of three against Lincoln last week."

It's not too difficult to develop a kicker, according to would-be dentist Hart. Not nearly so hard as pulling teeth.

TCU Wallops Rice, Clinches 'Cotton' Berth

T.C.U.	—	—	7	14	7	7—35

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 19 (AP) — Texas Christian toyed with Rice for a 35-0 victory today to move into the Cotton Bowl as host team Jan. 2.

Chuck Curtis's passing and the running of Ray Taylor and Vernon Hallbeck administered the worst defeat in 34 years of football competition with the Owls.

Rice was losing its sixth straight game—the first time in a quarter of a century of coaching for Jess Neely to suffer this humiliation.

Texas Christian clinched at least a tie for second place in the Southwest Conference race.

Texas A.&M. is ineligible for the bowl game because it is on probation for violating recruiting rules. Under the conference ruling, the second place team gets the Cotton Bowl place and TCU, in insuring itself of a tie for second, automatically advanced to the game because it beat the only team able to tie it for second—Texas.

Boston U. Shuts Out Temple for Sixth Victory of Season

BOSTON U.	—	0	7	12	6—25

BOSTON, Nov. 19 (UP)—Favored Boston University ended the season with a 2-6 record today by walloping slow-moving Temple University, 25-0, before an estimated 8000 snow-covered fans at University field.

Boston scored once in the second period, twice in the third and again in the last period in dealing Temple its eighth straight loss without a win this year.

Temple outrushed the winners on the ground—covered with a wet snow—95 yards to Boston's 92. However, Boston made good on 15 of 31 passes for 264 yards while Temple gained only 13 yards on two completions in 11 tries.

Southern Illinois Wins, 20-0, Over Northern Illinois

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — The pass-snagging of team captain, Wayne Williams, and a three-touchdown outburst in the second quarter gave Southern Illinois University a 20-0 verdict over Northern Illinois today and third place in the I.I.A.C. Conference.

It was the final conference game for both teams, Southern finishing with four triumphs, one defeat and one tie. Northern failed to win a conference game, losing five and tying one.

Southern attempted five passes in the first half and all were completed with Williams, 6-foot-4 left end, on the receiving end. They were good for 120 yards.

Jack Schneider plunged over from the three-yard mark for the first touchdown after a 64-yard drive. Gerald Hart scored the second from the four after two passes to Williams put Southern in scoring territory. Ken Walker's 38-yard pass to Williams accounted for the third, set up by a pass interception by Gene Herman.

Bill Spratt failed to kick the extra point after the first TD. His two other kicks from placement were good.

DOWN THE STRETCH

by Herman Wecke

Early Birds at Work.

IT'S more than five months before the St. Louis district racing season begins at Fairmount Park, April 28, but already workmen are busy with improvements at the course. . . . The improvements were agreed upon at a meeting of officials after the close of the 1955 campaign. . . . And only recently President James F. Edwards, Treasurer Andres R. Winters and General Manager Ray Bennigsen were here inspecting the work. . . .

Improvements which will greet fans at the track for the 60-day-and-night meeting of 1956, will include a larger betting ring at the top of the grandstand. . . . This has been accomplished by moving the press box to the top of the stand, next to the stewards, placing judges and other officials. . . . Plans call for the air conditioning of the press box, the officials' stand as well as the secretary's office, general office, calculating and ticket checking rooms and the steward's office. . . .

Work also is progressing in the barn area . . . Roads have been graded and leveled and made ready for oiling when horses begin arriving next spring. . . . Barns have been repaired as have tack rooms and some 100 tons of earth has been put into the stalls.

Change in Parade.

ONE of the innovations planned for next season is a change in the post parade. . . . For the shorter races, the horses will parade from the grandstand gate as has been the custom since night racing was introduced. . . . However, for the longer events, the entrants will parade from the clubhouse gate. . . .

Jack Klucina will again serve as racing secretary. . . . He will confer with Bennigsen in the near future to talk over plans for bringing horsemen to the Collinsville track. . . . There will be the usual lot from Sunshine Park, Fairgrounds, New Orleans, Hot Springs and Ohio track.

A meeting of officials will be held to decide on the purse distribution, especially for the two holidays, Memorial day and July 4. . . .

With the meeting scheduled to close July 20, according to the schedule approved by the Illinois Racing Board, Fairmount will race on the nights following the afternoon holiday cards in order to get in its 60 days. . . .

Cahokia Downs is scheduled to open July 21 and run through Sept. 29. . . .

Move for Safety.

A NEW law will be incorporated into the Illinois rules of racing, according to an announcement from Paul Serdar, chairman of the Racing Board . . . It will be the result of an idea by Mickey McMahon, secretary of the Central Division of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association and has to do with better safety for horses in case of fire in the barns. . . .

Hereafter, a rope shank and halter will have to be at each stall so that grooms will have an easier time leading out the horses. . . . Serdar agreed with McMahon that it's pretty tough to lead out a horse holding to its mane or neck. . . .

The Illinois Racing Board has approved 174 days of racing at Chicago's four tracks in addition to the 120 at Fairmount and Cahokia. . . . The campaign will open at Sportsman's Park, April 23 and close at the same track Nov. 10. . . .

The schedule:

Sportsman's Park: April 23 through May 12.

Balmoral Jockey Club at Washington Park: May 14 through June 16.

Arlington: June 18 through July 26.

Washington Park: July 30 through Sept. 3.

Hawthorne: Sept. 4 through Oct. 13.

Sportsman's Park: Oct. 15 through Nov. 10.

Fairmount: April 28 through July 20.

Cahokia: July 21 through Sept. 29.

Weeks TV Boxing.

Syracuse Hands West Virginia Setback, 20-13

WEST VA.	—	0	13	0	0—13
SYRACUSE	—	0	6	7	7—20

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 19 (AP) — Syracuse made its first visit to West Virginia University in nine years today and handed the Mountaineers their second straight football defeat, 20-13, in a snow storm.

Syracuse scored twice after recovering W.V.U. fumbles, and two other touchdowns were called back.

The Mountaineers scored first with 34 seconds gone in the second period, and again with less than two minutes remaining in the half. But after intermission, West Virginia could get nowhere, and didn't make another first down until a minute and a half remained to play.

Today the difference was made by the Orangemen's tremendous left halfback, Jim Brown, who bored through the Mountaineer line with ease. Brown didn't get any touchdowns but he swept up yardage to put Syracuse out of trouble whenever it was needed.

For the estimated 22,000 fans, who sat through the cold snowy afternoon, there was little consolation. It was, however, the fourty-fourth consecutive in which West Virginia has scored and set a new W.V.U. record.

Coach Art (Pappy) Lewis said the weather was the worst he has seen at home in the six years at the W.V.U. helm. It never stopped snowing.

It was the first time in 31 games that Freddy Wyant has not started at quarterback for the Mountaineers. He was injured in the Pitt game last week and didn't get into action.

70 Players in Olympic Soccer Tryouts at Fairground Park Today

Athletes Show in 2 Games

By Dent McSkimming

Ever since Eddie Hart was chosen as a member of the 1924 Olympic soccer team, St. Louis boys have been among this country's most serious challengers for such international honors.

Today, in the trial games at Fairground Park, more than 70 local players and four from out of town will try to prove to a committee that this city is still a fruitful source. Three or more members of the national selection committee will watch and take note. Names of the United States squad will not be announced, however, until late next month.

Through the years starting with Hart's trip to Paris, where the United States opened with a victory over Estonia and then lost, 3-0, to Uruguay (the ultimate champion), St. Louis has placed 17 players on Olympic soccer squads.

Four were picked in 1928 and traveled to Amsterdam for the games. They were John (Tooter) Rudge, Jim Cronin, Joe Murphy and John Kane. Only one, Eddie Begley, was picked in 1936 for the Berlin Games; and in 1948 five were selected for the trip to London. They were Bob Annis, Charley Colombo, Gino Pariana, Ray Beckman and Bill Bertani.

Six on 1952 Squad.

The largest representation was in 1952, when the American team was quickly eliminated by Italy in the games at Helsinki. On that squad were Bob Burkard, Harry Keough, Charley Colombo, Ed McHugh, Ruben Mendoza and Elwood Cook. Another St. Louisan, Marty Krumm, now a resident of San Francisco, was also chosen, and Russ Murphy of this city was picked as an alternate.

There are several reasons why so many St. Louis players have been so honored. One is that not many American soccer centers have such a wealth of native-born players who thus qualify in the matter of citizenship. Another is that for the past 25 years there has been no professional soccer as such.

Almost all of the local players who are ineligible for the Olympics because of professionalism received their pay-for-play as baseball players, not as soccer men.

Furthermore, St. Louis teams, perennially, are leading contenders for national championship honors, and are thus in the soccer limelight. The fact that five St. Louis boys were on the United States team that defeated England in the World Cup game at Belo Horizonte, Brazil, in 1950, added to this city's stature. And the successive victories of Kutis over two German First Division touring clubs hasn't hurt this city's prestige.

Because of their association with the United States team in recent international matches, half a dozen or more local players are known to the selection committee. In addition to those named above, there are Herman Wecke and Bill Looby.

Program Starts at 1:30.

By way of assisting in the financing of the Olympic program, there will be a charge of 50 cents for today's program. The action will be on Grounds Two at Fairground Park. Spectators will be supplied with programs listing the names of the 75 or more players with their numbers.

Two games will be played, one between the Blue and the White squads to start at 1:30 and that between the Reds and the Greens at 3:10. Every player on the list, including four from out of town, will be in action at least 30 minutes.

Referees, who are donating their services to help the Olympic fund, will be: Larry King and Stan Lutostanski in the first game, Bill Keenoy and Al Tanner in the second.

Spectators will have an opportunity to make their own selections known to the committee. In the printed program will be a form with 11 positions noted. There is no guarantee, however, that the committee will act upon the ballots.

Similar trials are being held in Chicago, New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

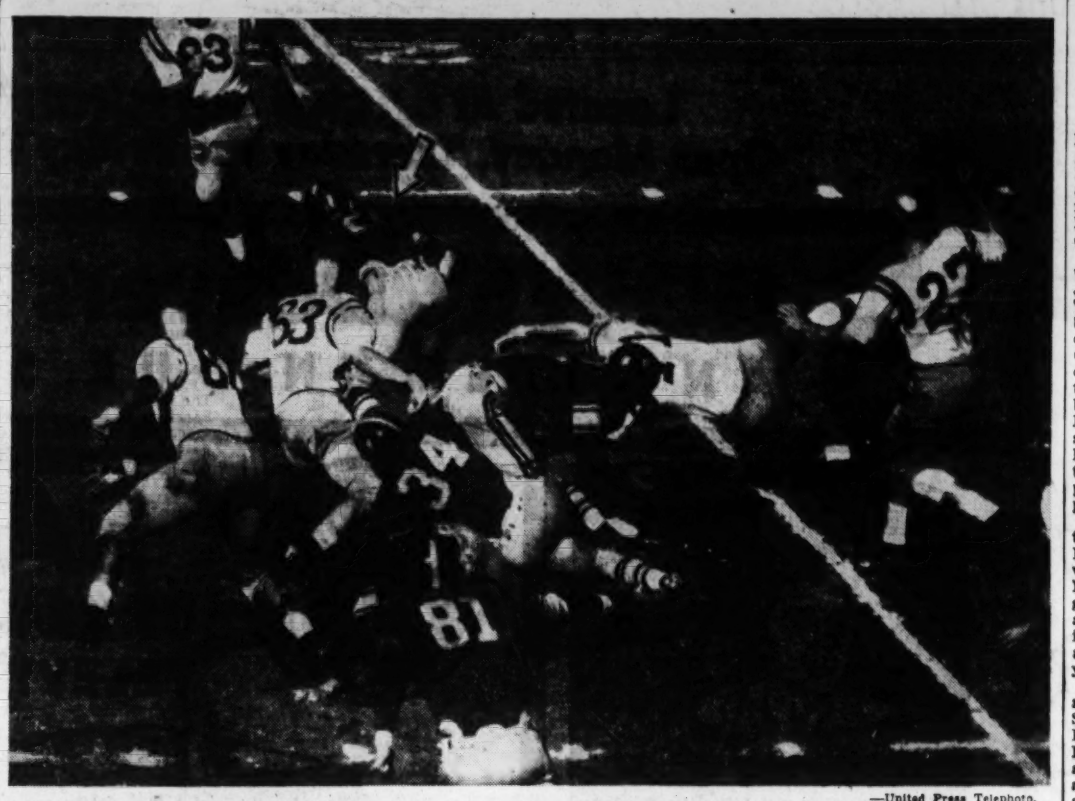
97-Yard Run to No Avail



—United Press Telephoto.

JON ARNETT of Southern California is passing his 20-yard line en route on a 97-yard kickoff return at the start of the game with U.C.L.A. But the long run was called back. The entire Southern Cal line was offsides on the kickoff. U.C.L.A. won the game, 17-7, and the Pacific Coast Conference title.

Kentucky Spoils Vols' Bowl Hopes With 23-0 Win

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 19 (AP)—Keyed Kentucky abandoned its touted passing game today and, powered by the rugged running of Bob Dougherty, Bob Hardy and Don Netoskie, flipped the switch on Tennessee's comeback express with a 23-0 victory.

The Wildcats thus stretched their string to three straight over the Volunteers, their longest in 42 years.

And it meant 12 Kentucky seniors went through school without tasting defeat from arch-rival Tennessee since the Wildcats tied the Vols four years ago.

Kentucky enjoyed the upper hand throughout the bruising fifty-first renewal of the ivy-draped rivalry, one of Dixie's oldest and bitterest.

It rolled for a field goal in the first quarter and touchdowns in each of the last three periods to complete its most one-sided win over Tennessee since a 27-0 rout in 1935, and it was Tennessee's worst loss of the year.

Furthermore, the loss most likely eliminated the Vols from further bowl talk, which had been stirred up by five victories and a tie in their last six games.

And Kentucky achieved it by throwing just three passes and completing two of them, although the Wildcats are famed for their top-notch passing attack.

With 36,000 fans jammed into Stoll Field on a damp and dreary Saturday, the partisan Kentucky audience was given plenty to cheer about.

Lafayette Snaps Lehigh Streak, 35-6

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 19 (UP)—Lafayette snapped Lehigh's seven-game winning streak today with a 35-6 victory on a snow-sodden field in the ninety-first meeting of the schools.

Lafayette scored in every period to end the season with a 6-2 mark. Lehigh, which dropped its opener to Cornell and came back to win seven in a row, finished with a 7-2 record.

Wisconsin Is Gopher Victim

WISCONSIN	—	0	0	0	6— 6
MINNESOTA	-	7	0	7	7—21

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 19 (AP) — Sophomore halfback Bob Schultz shredded favored Wisconsin with a fierce running display that brought Minnesota a 21-6 victory today and spoiled the valedictory of Badger Coach Ivy Williamson.

Schultz, a 177-pounder with the drive of a fullback, scored two touchdowns and performed superbly on defense to steer the Minnesotans to their third victory against six setbacks.

He received hefty support from a quick-charging Gopher line and another, sophomore fullback Dick Borstad, whose pile-driving gave the Badgers no chance to set for Schultz.

A crowd of 62,714 sat cheerfully in 26 degree cold to watch the Gophers gain their first triumph over Wisconsin in seven years.

It was a bleak finish for Williamson, appointed Wisconsin athletic director last week. The loss was Wisconsin's fifth against four victories and represented Williamson's first losing season in seven years with the Badgers.

Alouettes Defeat Argonauts, Will Play Eskimos for Cup

MONTREAL, Nov. 19 (UP)—The Montreal Alouettes defeated the Toronto Argonauts, 38-36, today for the right to meet the Edmonton Eskimos for the Grey Cup in Vancouver next Saturday.

Monkeys Meet Raiders Today In Forest Park

The Monkey Juniors, who handed the McCrarys their first defeat last Sunday, will attempt to throw the Muny Football League race into a bigger muddle when they meet the Vets A. C. Raiders in the first game of a doubleheader today at the Forest Park drill grounds. Kickoff time will be 1 o'clock.

It's the last regular season game for the Monkeys (3-2), who must win to retain a chance for the title. The Raiders, 8-0 victors over the Monkeys in their first meeting, have a 2-1 record.

The McCrarys (3-1) are likely to have an easy time with the Goodfellow - McClaran Merchants (0-4) in the 3 o'clock contest. Winners by 20-7 over the Monkeys in their season opener, the McCrarys were jolted, 14-6, by the same team last Sunday.

Colorado Wallops Iowa State, 40-0

BOULDER, Colo., Nov. 19 (UP)—Colorado wouldn't allow Iowa State within a long punt of its goal today, rolling to a 40-0 victory on a muddy field in the last Big Seven Conference game of the season for both teams.

The smallest crowd of the season here, 12,500, watched Colorado's sophomore backs earn a 12-0 halftime lead and pad it with 14 points in each of the final two periods.

Delaware Gains Its Seventh Win in Row

LEWISBURG, Pa., Nov. 19 (UP)—Delaware University, playing in the snow and hoping for a Sun Bowl bid, plodded to a 27-12 victory over Bucknell University today in its drive for the classic at El Paso, Tex., Jan. 2.

The triumph was the seventh in a row for the Blue Hens, who completed their season with an 8-1 record. Bucknell ended 1955 play with a 2-8-1 record.

L.S.U. Stops Arkansas, 13-7

LOUISIANA STATE	—	0	0	7	6—13
ARKANSAS	—	0	0	0	7— 7

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 19 (AP)—Halfback Levi (Chuck) Johns bounded off three Arkansas tacklers in the line and raced 65 yards for a touchdown to break up a defensive battle and start Louisiana State toward a 13-7 victory over Arkansas here today.

The sprint, on the first scrimmage play of the second half, was the initial defensive lapse of the game. The capacity crowd of 35,000 watched LSU add the winning touchdown on a 74-yard thrust early in the fourth quarter. Fullback O. K. Ferguson got the score on a 20-yard jaunt through left tackle.

On the ensuing kickoff, Halfback Ronnie Underwood put the Razorbacks back in the game when he took the ball on the 12, wiggled through three tacklers at the 25, and then outran L.S.U. End John Wood down the sidelines to score. George Walker added the extra point that put the Porkers within six points of the Tigers.

Arkansas couldn't advance past midfield in the remaining six minutes, despite a couple of nice passing gains by Quarterback Walker.

Louisiana State scoring — Touchdowns: Johns (65, run), Ferguson (20, run). Conversion: Graham.

Arkansas scoring — Touchdown: Underwood (88, kickoff return). Conversion: Walker.

Billikens Play Tall Freshman Team Tonight

Coach Eddie Hickey's St. Louis University Billikens will get their first test of the 1955-1956 basketball season tonight against D. C. Wilcutt's Billiken freshmen in the school's West Pine gymnasium starting at 8 o'clock.

The starting lineup for the varsity is likely to include Capt. Jim McLaughlin (6-4) and Joe Todd (6-3) at the forwards, Al Serkin (6-7) center, Harold Alcorn (6-0) and Grady Smith (6-1) at the guards. Serkin is expected to give the Bills the height needed under the backboards and to keep the Bills' fast break going at top speed. McLaughlin has proved he can play the forward position with the same ease and poise as he displayed at the pivot spot last year.

In a second Billiken group is the following combination: Jack Mimlitz and Bill Wynn, forwards; Joe Uelk, center; Dean Millenbine and Don Stanton, guards. Mimlitz and Millenbine are sophomores, the others juniors. McLaughlin and Smith are the only seniors on this year's Billiken squad.

Wilcutt is expected to start a tall team against the varsity. Steve Redshaw (6-4) and Don Hake (6-4) at forwards; John Dolan (6-8) or Bob Ferry (6-8) at center, and Ron Flood (6-1) and Richard Rogers (6-2) at the guards.

No admission will be charged for the game.

Final results of a Missouri Valley Conference pre-season all-star poll, conducted by the athletic publicity department of St. Louis University, were announced today.

The first five include: McLaughlin, St. Louis U., and C. Mack Carter, Oklahoma A. & M., forwards; Don Boldebuck, Houston, center; Ralph Goldstein, Detroit U., and Jack Foster, Houston, guards.

Second five included: forwards, Todd, St. Louis U., and Jack Gower, Bradley U.; center, Bob Hodgson, Wichita U.; guards, Junior Born, Tulsa, and Smith, St. Louis U.

Third five included: forwards, Jerry Hansen, Bradley U., J. C. Duncan, Tulsa U.; center, Dale Peier, Oklahoma A. & M.; guards, Alcorn, St. Louis U. and Mel Wright, Oklahoma A. & M.

The poll was taken among sports writers, broadcasters, and TV announcers in the Missouri Valley Conference area.

Murphy on Army Squad.

When the United States Armed Forces soccer squad at Wiesbaden, Germany, was reduced to one team, last Tuesday, Pvt. Russell Murphy was included in the roster. In a letter to his family here, Russ told of his selection and said that the team was leaving the next day for games in Paris and in London. Later it is expected the team will be sent to the United States for whatever final trial the United States Olympic committee may arrange. Murphy is in the Army's military police establishment, due for discharge in January. Before he entered service he was a member of the Kutis club.

In the eighth Bill Skowron hit relief hurler Manuel Marikit's sixth pitch sending the ball into right center for another homer. In the ninth Elston Howard homered into the left center stands.

Notre Dame runners finished first, fourth, fifth, sixth and eighth. Other team scoring: Western Michigan, 50; Marquette, 52; Bradley and Wheaton competed but lacked full teams.

National Champ Loses In Cross-Country Run

DES MOINES, Nov. 19 (AP)—Billy Tidwell of Emporia (Kan.) Teachers beat the national champion in the Midwest AAU cross-country meet yesterday.

The rangy Tidwell stayed abreast of Kansas's Allen Frame, 1954 NCAA winner, until the final 200 yards of the snow-covered slopes.

Then Tidwell put on the pressure in a driving finish and his final spurt left Frame 10 yards behind. The winning time was 21:07—very good for 26-degree weather and the rugged four-mile course.

Kansas would have won the team title but the Big Seven Conference doesn't allow its members to compete for AAU team championships.

As a result, the team championship went to South Dakota State with 30 points., Then came Emporia, 39; Grinnell, 70, and Beloit, 73.

President Eisenhower's remodeled three-story country house on his 496-acre farm in the fertile, rolling foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains has become the "Little White House" during his convalescence. Historic Town in Southern Pennsylvania Becomes Focal Point of Nation as the Locale of President Eisenhower's Convalescence Gettysburg National Military Park is dotted with 415 muzzle-loading Civil War cannon. The Eisenhower farm now vies with the historic $3,500,000 park as a tourist attraction.

Two presidents have attended this vine-covered Presbyterian church on Baltimore street in Gettysburg. Here, Mr. Eisenhower has frequently gone to Sunday morning services. It is also the church Abraham Lincoln attended on November 19, 1863, the day he gave his Gettysburg address. During the Battle of Gettysburg it was used as a hospital.

Secret Service men keep tower under surveillance. A parking area is being constructed in front of tower to handle increased traffic caused by tourist interest in farm.

Gettysburg has neither passenger train nor airline service, though there is landing field for small planes. York is nearest train connection; Harrisburg is closest scheduled airline field. Pressroom entrance is under movie marquee where truck is backed in. Television signals are beamed at nearest permanent microwave station, 28 miles away at Yellow Springs, Maryland.

Gettysburg Fire Department is responsible for protection of Eisenhower farm. This pumper always stands by when a party is in progress at the farm, where fire hydrant and pond have been installed. Volunteer fire department has three pumpers, rescue truck, 75-foot ladder truck. Pumper and rescue truck are at airfield when President flies in his small plane.

Inside the 75-by-80-foot auditorium during final stages of its conversion into a pressroom. Tiers of seats at far side were removed and walls put in to make private offices for James Hagerty and his White House press staff. Movable partitions will provide a conference room; a small darkroom is being built. The pressroom will accommodate more than 100 reporters, photographers, newsreel, television and telegraph personnel. The major news services will pay a rental fee.

The room in Annie M. Warner Hospital that will be held in readiness for President Eisenhower should he need it. Room is in a sunny corner on the first floor of a new annex. Bed is of type than can be raised and lowered electrically. Should the President have to enter the hospital, the entire wing would probably be closed off for quiet and security.

WHEN GETTYSBURG LEARNED that President Eisenhower would return to his farm outside the town to recuperate from his illness, its residents spurted into activity. Biggest problem was to accommodate the huge White House press retinue that would follow the President to report on his progress and cover affairs of state originating at the nation's informal capital.

Henry M. Sharf, president of the 100-room Hotel Gettysburg, offered an auditorium in the hotel annex as a pressroom. James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, sent his assistant, Murray Snyder, with two Army Signal Corps technicians to look over the auditorium. They found it large enough, centrally located, and they offered advice on converting it to a pressroom. Sharf immediately began a $20,000 remodeling project. The hotel had been considering turning the old auditorium into a banquet room; the emergency expedited the job.

Western Union, anticipating the transmission of enormous quantities of copy, prepared to equip the pressroom with 25 high-speed automatic telegraph machines, capable of handling up to 75,000 words an hour. The United Telephone Company of Pennsylvania spent $200,000 to expand its service. Fourteen miles of 100-pair cables were strung between Gettysburg and Hanover in little more than a week. There are now about 50 service lines direct to the Eisenhower farm, facilities for 100 more.

Gettysburg is a small town in south Pennsylvania, five miles north of the Mason-Dixon line. It has achieved world fame because of three visitors. The first was the Confederate Army under General Robert E. Lee, who picked Gettysburg as the spot for the showdown with Union forces on Northern territory. In a three-day battle, beginning July 1, 1863, the Southern Army was defeated. The site of the internecine conflict became a national park in 1895.

Second visitor was President Abraham Lincoln, who dedicated the National Cemetery at Gettysburg November 18, 1863. His short speech beginning "Fourscore and seven years ago . . ." has become part of English literature.

Third visitor was Dwight D. Eisenhower, a captain when he came to Gettysburg in 1918 as commanding officer of Camp Colt, birthplace of the Army Tank Corps. In 1950, the Eisenhowers purchased for $40,000 a 189-acre farm about two miles outside town. After being elected President, Mr. Eisenhower acquired several adjoining tracts, swelling the total acreage to 496.

These three happenings have not only given Gettysburg its distinction, but its main source of business — some 700,000 tourists visit the historic sites annually. Once they came just to see the battlefield; now they want to observe the Eisenhower farm too.

Gettysburg nestles in the fertile fruit country of southern Pennsylvania. The borough of 7200 population was established by Scotch-Irish immigrants as a trading center. It is still regional shopping center for more than 37,000 people; its retail stores do an annual business of more than $18,000,000. There are eight factories employing a total of about 1100 persons.

President's Arrival

The President smiles as he looks out at beaming crowd that greeted him Monday on his arrival in Gettysburg. Pleased also is Mrs. Eisenhower, who holds a birthday bouquet of orchids and red roses, presented to her by Patricia Weaver, 13-year-old daughter of Gettysburg's Burgess (Mayor) William G. Weaver. Patricia is standing behind the President. Accompanied by the town's high school band, in right foreground, the crowd serenaded Mrs. Eisenhower, who was 59 Monday, with "Happy Birthday to You." In brief remarks, the President indicated that Mrs. Eisenhower had initiated their decision to settle at Gettysburg, but said, "I am just as delighted as she that you are the people who are going to be our neighbors, God willing." The Eisenhowers motored to Gettysburg from the White House where they had spent the weekend after their flight from Denver. Cheering crowds welcomed them back to Washington.

School children's friendly waves are returned by the President as he leaves the welcoming ceremonies for the trip to his nearby farm home. The Lincoln Room, in background, was occupied by President Lincoln after he delivered the Gettysburg address. A physician's examination after the journey from Washington showed that Mr. Eisenhower suffered "no fatigue whatsoever," Press Secretary Hagerty said. At the farm, the President entered the second stage of his recuperation from heart attack he suffered September 24 while vacationing in Colorado. First phase was spent in an Army hospital at Denver.

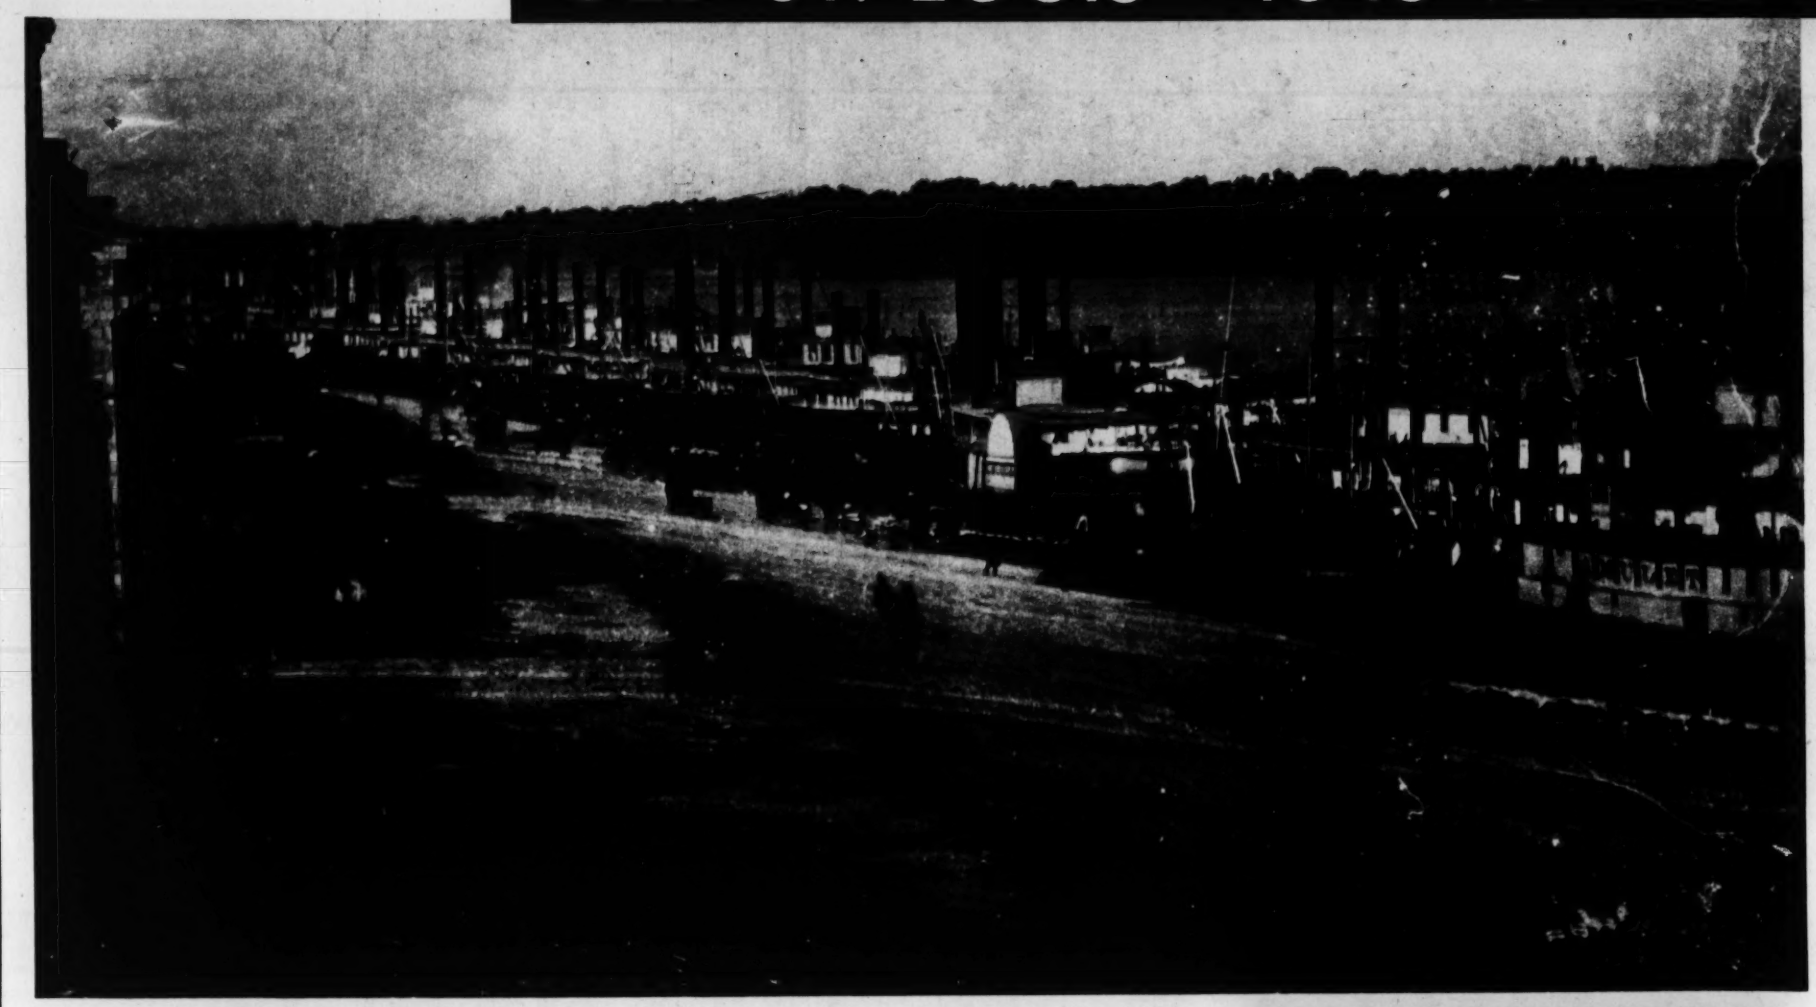
OLD ST. LOUIS—1845 to 1867



Presenting a forest of tall black smokestacks, steamboats line St. Louis' famous levee in this 1867 view toward the north from about the foot of Market street. Wagons and roustabouts dot the paved wharf, which retains much the same form today. Among the boats that can be identified are the Amulet and the side-wheeler Dubuque, whose portside paddle wheel makes a drum-like bulge. Despite its scratched surface, this is one of the outstanding daguerreotypes in the Missouri Historical Society's collection of early St. Louis scenes.

Dressed in the height of fashion, these women posed for an "informal" lunch time portrait in 1855. Holding the lunch is Mrs. John F. Altemus, wife of a tailor who had a men's furnishings store at 26 North Third street. Her friend is unidentified.

Chief Keokuk of the Sac and Fox Indian tribes, with turban headdress, goatee and grizzy bear claw necklace, had his picture made on St. Louis visit in 1845. A famed orator and friend of white settlers, he opposed Chief Black Hawk, foe of whites.

Members of Union Fire Company No. 2, a volunteer outfit, pose proudly with their new engine, The Dinkey, near their engine house on Third street just south of Washington avenue. The year was 1851. Founder of company was Samuel Hawkens, famed gunsmith.

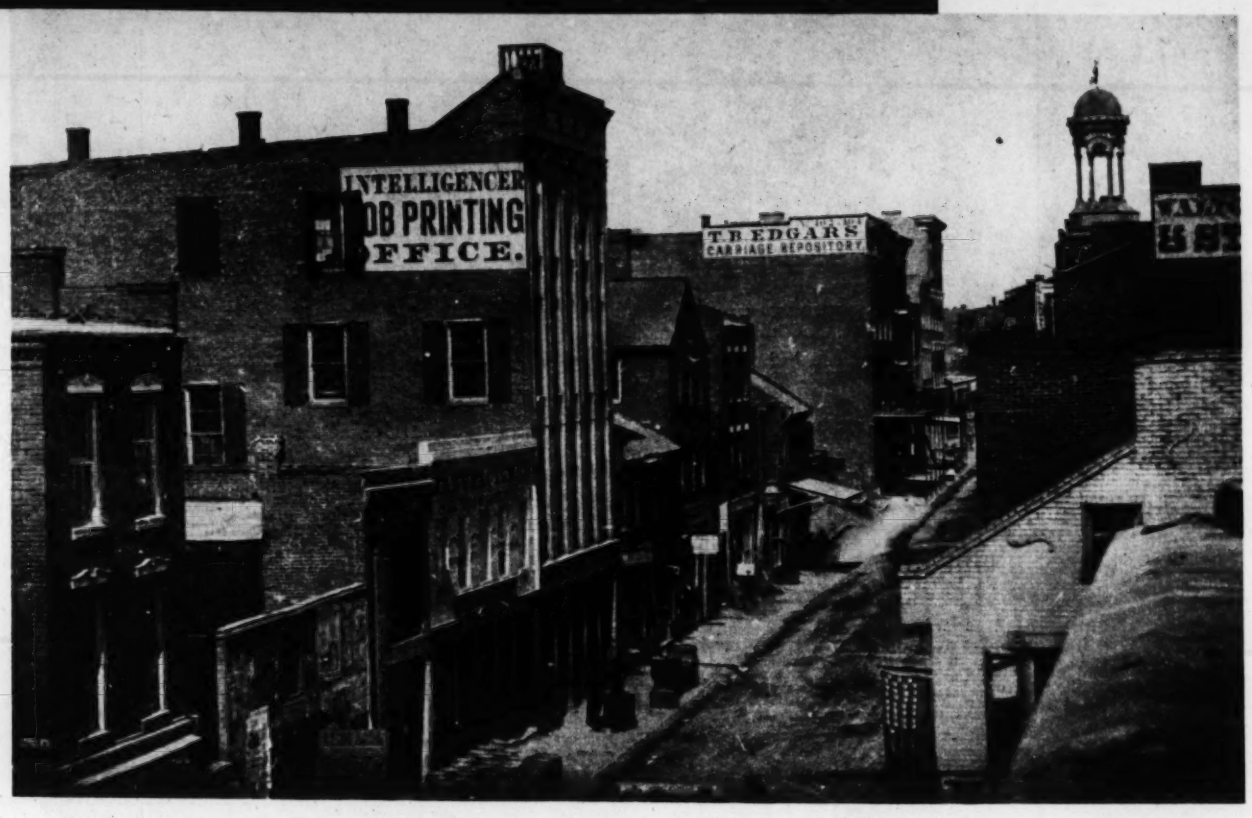
It Is Seen at Missouri Historical Society's New Gallery in an Exhibit of Photos Made From Early Daguerreotypes

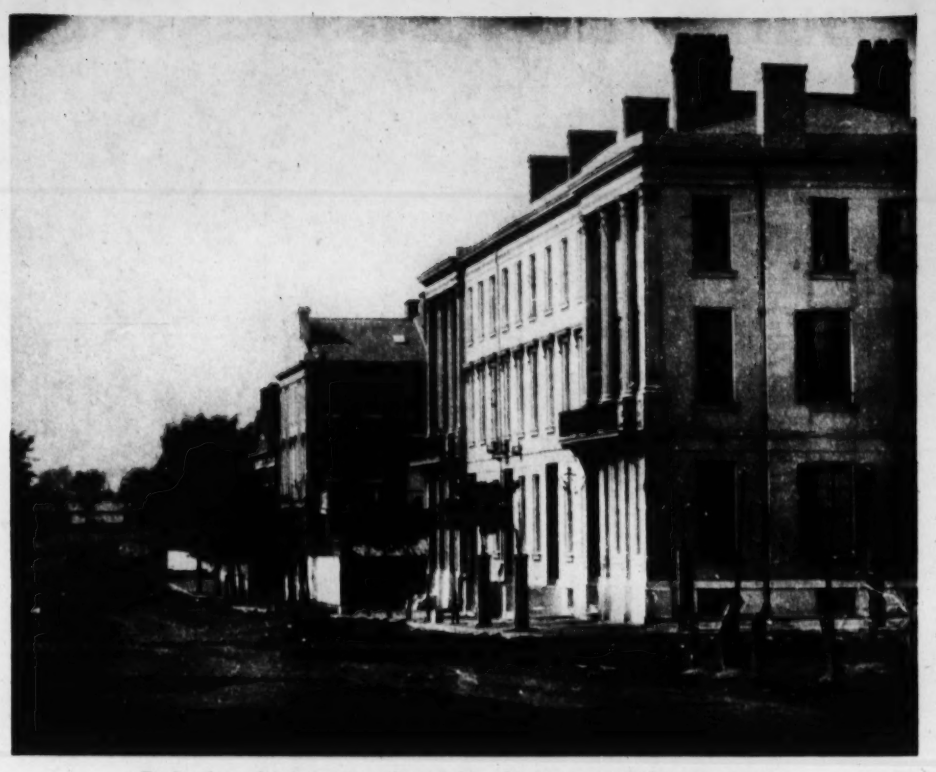


This is the way the heart of downtown St. Louis appeared in 1854. View is of North Third street from the roof of a building at the southeast corner of Third and Olive streets—in what is now the riverfront parking area. Old and new buildings line the narrow dirt street, among them the office of the St. Louis Intelligencer, a newspaper that flourished in the 1840s and '50s; Edgar's "carriage repository"; Walton's Hotel and Stable (part of sign visible at right). Cupola is on fire engine house at corner of Third and Locust. Flag at lower right has 31 stars.

ST. LOUIS WAS GROWING from a frontier village into an industrial city when the first daguerreotypists arrived here in the 1840s. While these early day photographers mostly made portraits of the city's residents and visitors, they sometimes turned their primitive cameras on scenes about them. In so doing they composed an unusual pictorial record of the lusty young metropolis during the two decades before the Civil War.

The Missouri Historical Society began collecting such pictures soon after its founding in 1866 and now has more than 300 daguerreotype views, the largest single collection of its kind in the country. (Daguerreotypists seldom made scenes because of the long time exposures and lighting difficulties involved.) The collection never was publicly shown because the small daguerreotypes—somewhat like later tintypes—were not suited to display and funds were not available to make enlarged photographs of the originals.

However, that obstacle has been overcome. Today the society opens to the public its new pictorial gallery in the west wing of Jefferson Memorial in Forest Park with its initial exhibit, titled "Life in St. Louis, 1845-1867." The show includes 60 enlargements of early daguerreotype views, seven of which are reproduced on these pages. The enlargements, some measuring three by four feet and more, are property of The Boatmen's National Bank of St. Louis.



Early day elegance is reflected by classic-revival design of row house on Pine street between Seventh and Eighth, fashionable west-end residential section in the 1850s. Houses, built in 1846-47, were occupied by prominent residents, among them Meriwether Lewis Clark; Nathaniel Paschall, St. Louis Republican editor; Manuel De Franca, portrait painter. Building was razed in 1900.

In 1857 scene, cattle laze in bed of drained Chouteau's Pond, now the busy Mill Creek valley railroad yards. Henri Chouteau's mansion stands on ground now occupied by a fire station at Twelfth and Spruce. In distant background are onion-shaped spires of Central High School, built in 1856, and spire of First Presbyterian Church at Fourteenth and Lucas (now Locust), dedicated in 1855. Pond was drained in 1851-52.

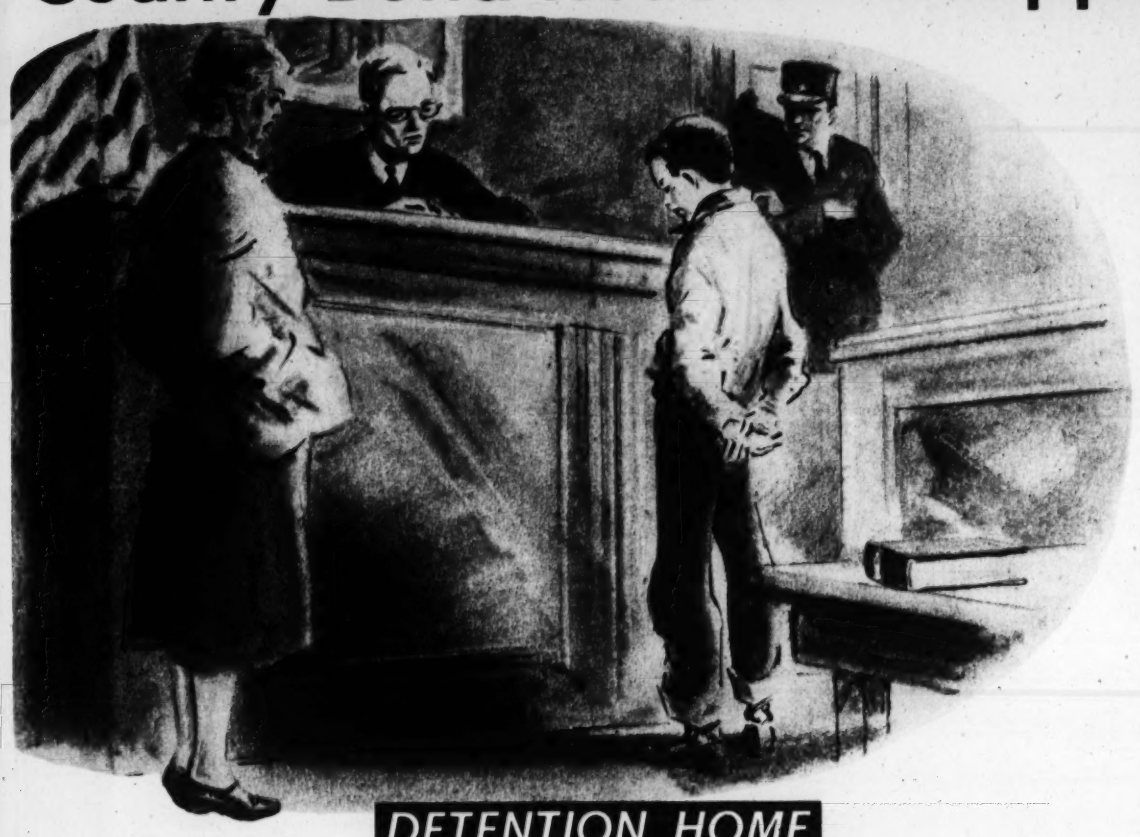
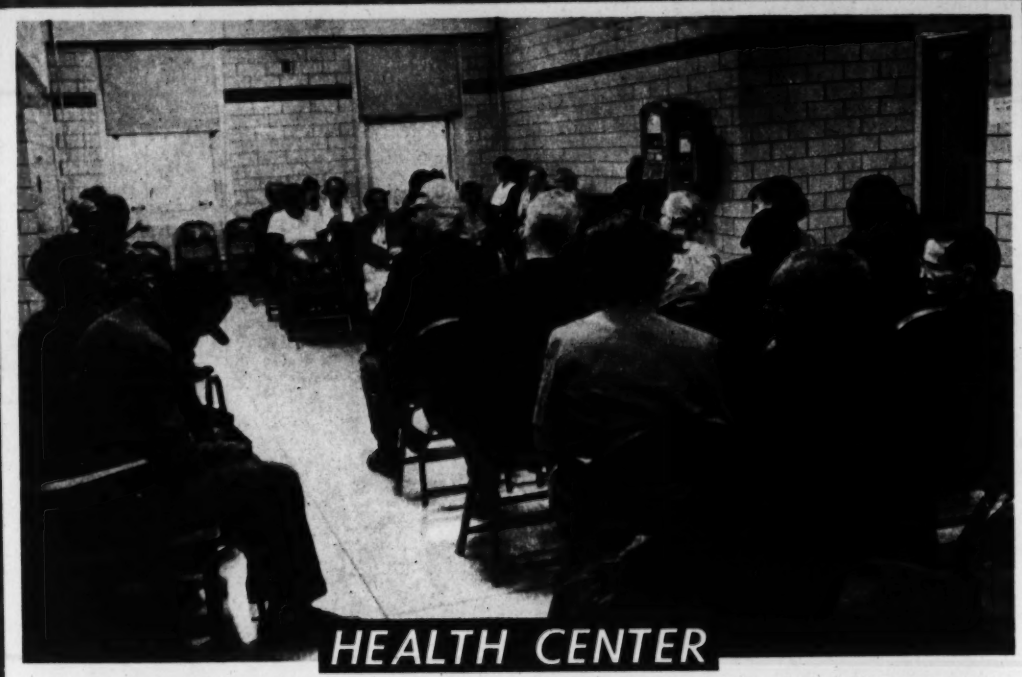
County Bond Issue Will Supply Urgently Needed Facilities



DETENTION HOME

St. Louis County has no facilities for handling children declared to be delinquent by the Juvenile Court. They must either be sentenced to the state reformatory at Boonville or sent home on probation. Under Proposition No. 2 of the bond issue to be voted on Tuesday, $600,000 would be provided for a detention home which would serve as an intermediate training school and treatment center. In addition, $200,000 would be provided for a welfare center for the care and study of neglected or abandoned children. Since 1953 the county has leased an old private home for this purpose, but it is entirely inadequate. The new center would be built on the County Hospital grounds.



HEALTH CENTER

The overcrowded waiting room of St. Louis County Hospital (part of a corridor must be used) and the cramped quarters for resident physicians (photo below) are indicative of the county's inadequate medical facilities. Bond issue Proposition No. 7 provides $1,500,000 to implement funds voted in the 1954 bond issue in order to complete the previously planned building program. This includes a 200-bed hospital for chronically ill and for temporary care of mental cases (no such facilities now); a new health center, which would relieve overcrowding in present hospital; living quarters for resident physicians, who now occupy badly needed hospital rooms, and rehabilitation of existing buildings. This amount substitutes for a grant of federal funds that was expected in 1954 but which has not been received.

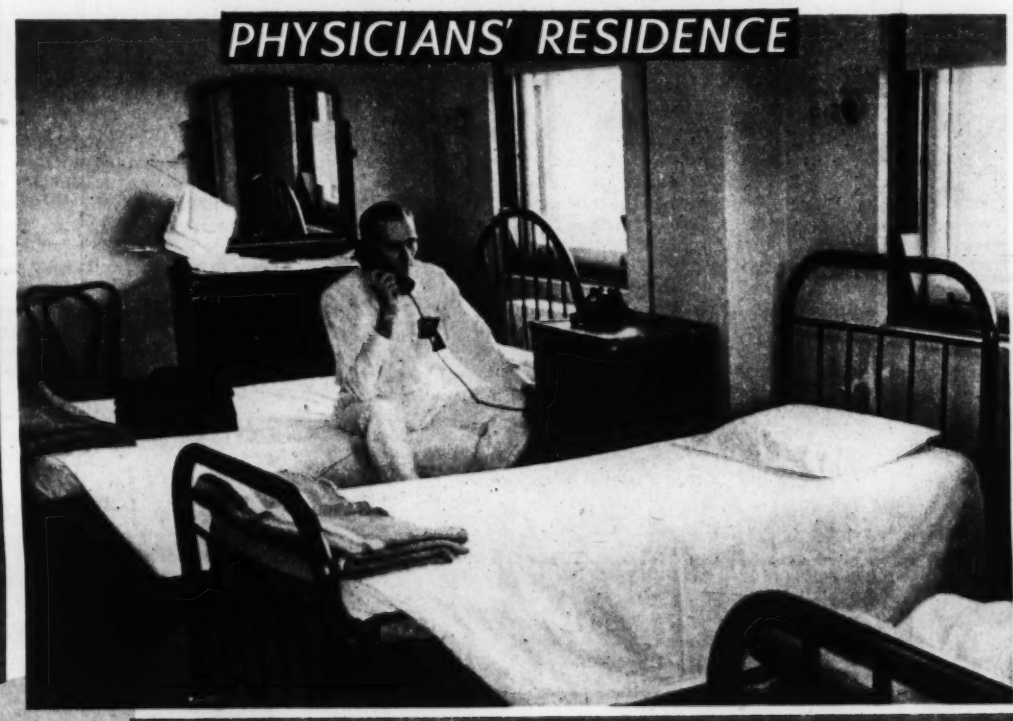
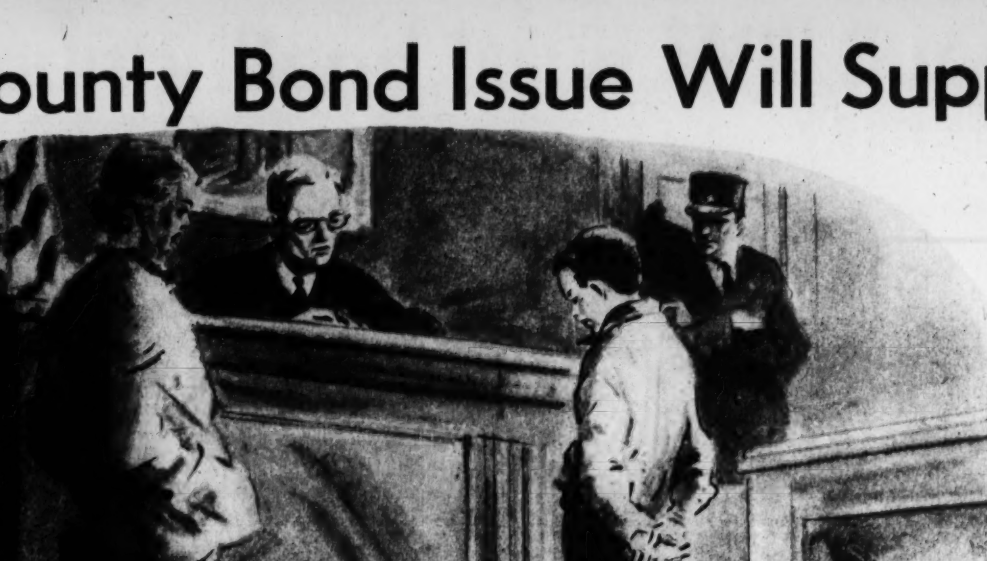
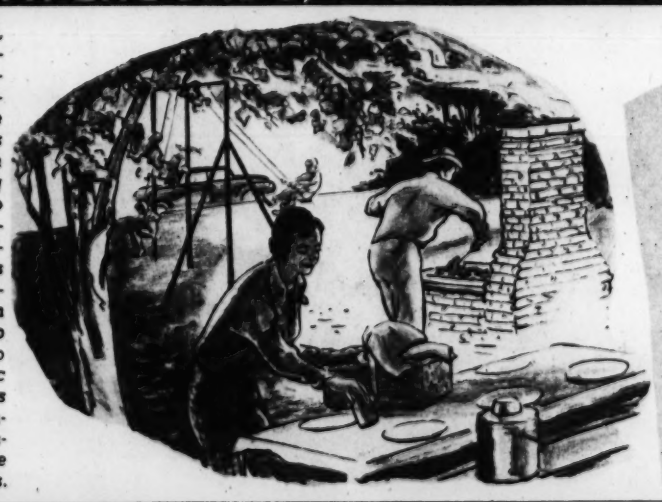
PHYSICIANS' RESIDENCE





PLAYGROUNDS, PICNIC AREAS

Children playing in the street, like these boys in a new subdivision in the northwest section of the county, are a familiar sight that points up the need for neighborhood parks and playgrounds. With through traffic overflowing onto residential streets to avoid overcrowded thoroughfares, it is fortunate more children are not victims of this disgraceful lack of recreational facilities. Proposition No. 4 provides $2,200,000 to buy the land for and equip 100 playgrounds and athletic areas of three to five acres each and to build a substantial number of roadside turnouts which would be made into small park-picnic grounds.



CONTROL CENTER

St. Louis and St. Louis County form a single community as far as an enemy bomb or the forces of nature are concerned. To cope with either, the joint city-county Civil Defense organization must have a headquarters to keep community services functioning in event of disaster. The city has put up its share of the needed funds. Proposition No. 8 would provide the county's share—$100,000 for a control center building, for radio and other equipment and for warning signals in unincorporated areas.

VOTING MACHINES

The county needs twice as many voting machines as the 400 that were purchased with bond issue funds in 1954, if paper ballots are to be eliminated entirely. Proposition No. 5 provides $675,000 to buy the additional 400 machines.

By ROBERT E. HANNON of the PICTURES Staff

ON TUESDAY the people of St. Louis County will decide for or against progress by voting YES or NO on eight propositions in a $39,712,000 bond issue. By approving each of the proposals—three relating to highways, five to welfare facilities—they will be voting for improvements urgently needed and long overdue.

In voting YES for each proposition, they will also be voting, of course, to tax themselves to pay for the improvements. But the added tax would be slight compared to benefits received.

At an average cost of $4.68 a year—about the price of a fifth of liquor or less than that of three cartons of cigarettes—county taxpayers would buy: A modern $100,000,000 highway system, a 200-bed county hospital addition, 100 playgrounds, 400 voting machines, a welfare center for neglected children, a detention home for juvenile delinquents, a new Civil Defense control center.

The need for these improvements is generally recognized by county residents. Some opposition has been voiced because of the necessity of increasing taxes after the recent blanket boost in assessed valuation of property, which in itself caused tax increases in many instances. The fact remains, however, that the proposed improvements are vital to the county's existence as a community. If the community is to continue to function, they will have to be made sooner or later. The longer they are delayed the more they will cost.

"There is no excuse...."

Members of the executive committee of the Citizens Bond Issue Campaign Committee — business and professional men, labor and civic leaders—outlined the situation that led to the bond issue program in this way:

"The kind of population growth that has overtaken St. Louis County brings with it a tremendous need for public facilities and services that were unnecessary not so long ago. The county's 15 years of booming growth and general prosperity have failed to generate a corresponding growth in those things the people need but cannot supply for themselves privately.

"For example, people can buy their own automobiles—and the people of St. Louis County today have twice as many automobiles as they had in 1940. But they cannot go out individually and buy their own streets and roads. So traffic has doubled but streets and roads have not.

"There is little excuse for the fact that many county children have to find room on a city baseball diamond if they want to play baseball. Or for the fact that we tolerate dangerous crossings of main line railroad tracks in densely populated residential areas.

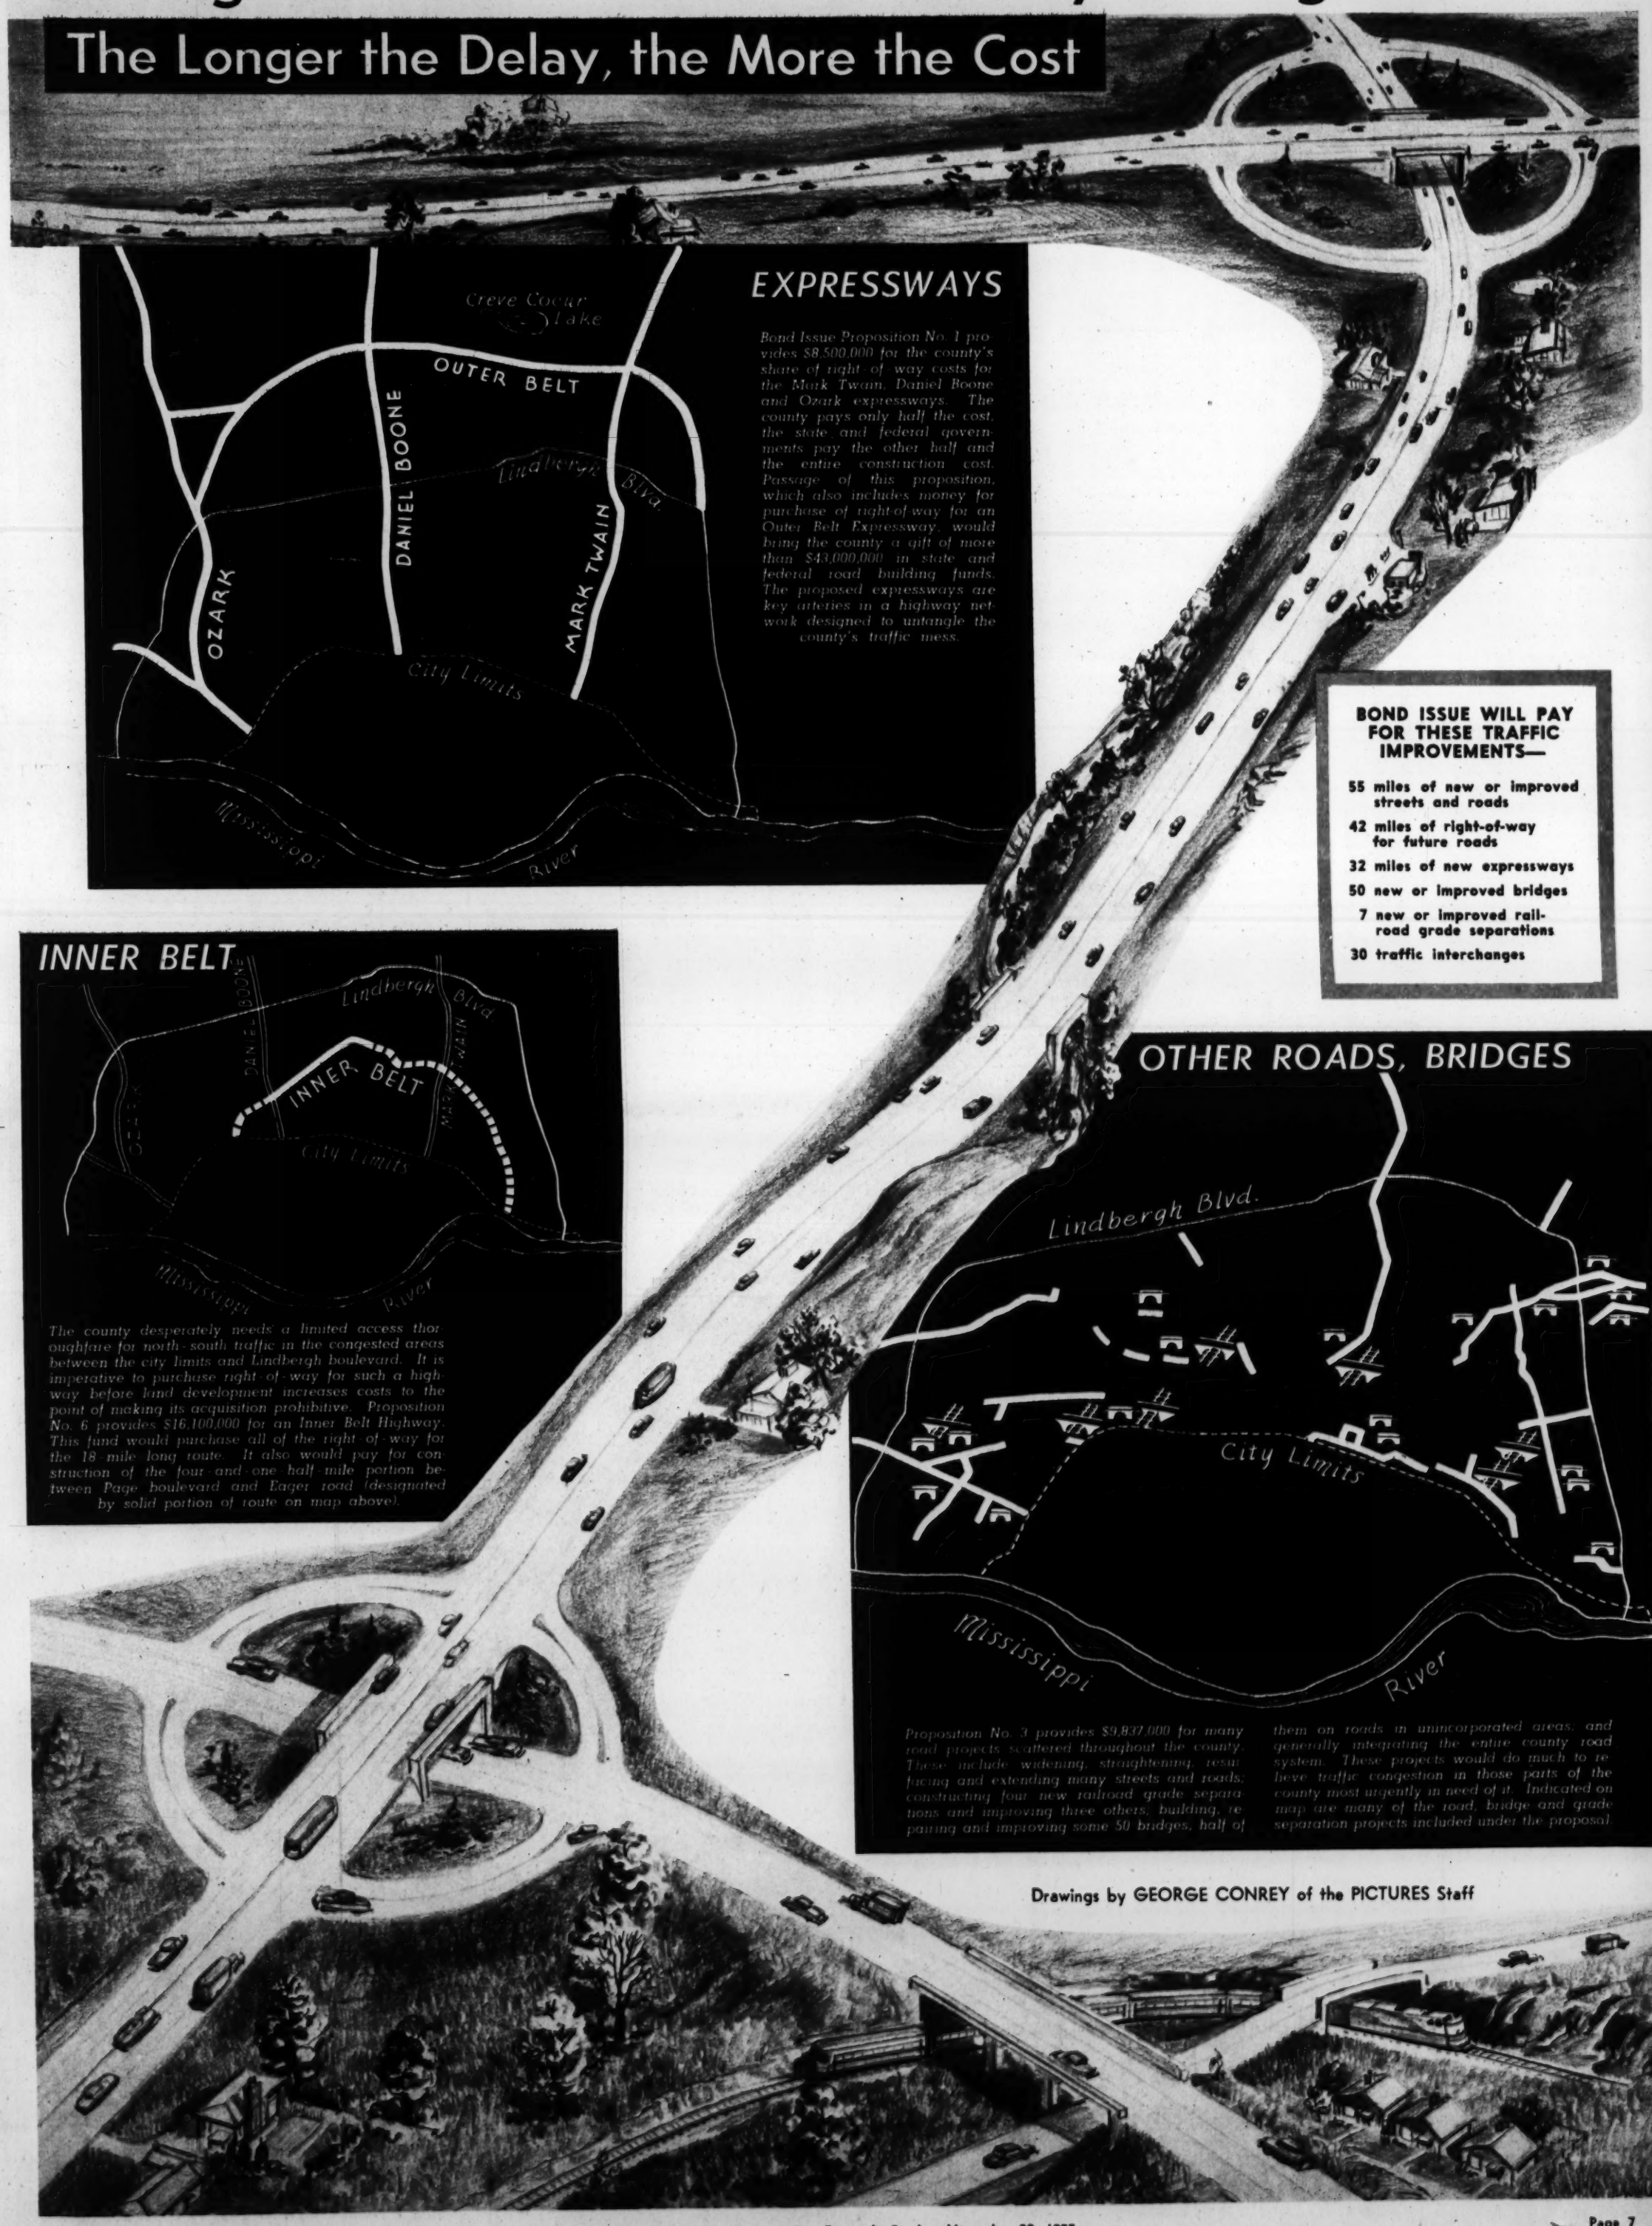
"There is no excuse for the fact that we use a rented, inadequate old house for handling our neglected and abused children, nor for the fact we have no intermediate detention home for our juvenile delinquents.

"There is no excuse for the crowded waiting and treatment rooms in St. Louis County Hospital. And there is no excuse for the fact we have no public facilities for taking care of our aged and infirm residents, our chronically ill.

"St. Louis County has for too long turned its back on too many public improvements. The result is a definite threat to the county's attractiveness as a place in which to live and work."

Solving the Traffic Problem Is the Key to Progress

The Longer the Delay, the More the Cost



EXPRESSWAYS

Bond Issue Proposition No. 1 provides $8,500,000 for the county's share of right-of-way costs for the Mark Twain, Daniel Boone and Ozark expressways. The county pays only half the cost, the state and federal governments pay the other half and the entire construction cost. Passage of this proposition, which also includes money for purchase of right-of-way for an Outer Belt Expressway, would bring the county a gift of more than $43,000,000 in state and federal road building funds. The proposed expressways are key arteries in a highway network designed to untangle the county's traffic mess.

BOND ISSUE WILL PAY FOR THESE TRAFFIC IMPROVEMENTS—

- 55 miles of new or improved streets and roads
- 42 miles of right-of-way for future roads
- 32 miles of new expressways
- 50 new or improved bridges
- 7 new or improved railroad grade separations
- 30 traffic interchanges

INNER BELT

The county desperately needs a limited access thoroughfare for north-south traffic in the congested areas between the city limits and Lindbergh boulevard. It is imperative to purchase right-of-way for such a highway before land development increases costs to the point of making its acquisition prohibitive. Proposition No. 6 provides $16,100,000 for an Inner Belt Highway. This fund would purchase all of the right-of-way for the 18-mile long route. It also would pay for construction of the four-and-one-half-mile portion between Page boulevard and Eager road (designated by solid portion of route on map above).

OTHER ROADS, BRIDGES

Proposition No. 3 provides $9,837,000 for many road projects scattered throughout the county. These include widening, straightening, resurfacing and extending many streets and roads; constructing four new railroad grade separations and improving three others; building, repairing and improving some 50 bridges, half of them on roads in unincorporated areas; and generally integrating the entire county road system. These projects would do much to relieve traffic congestion in those parts of the county most urgently in need of it. Indicated on map are many of the road, bridge and grade separation projects included under the proposal.

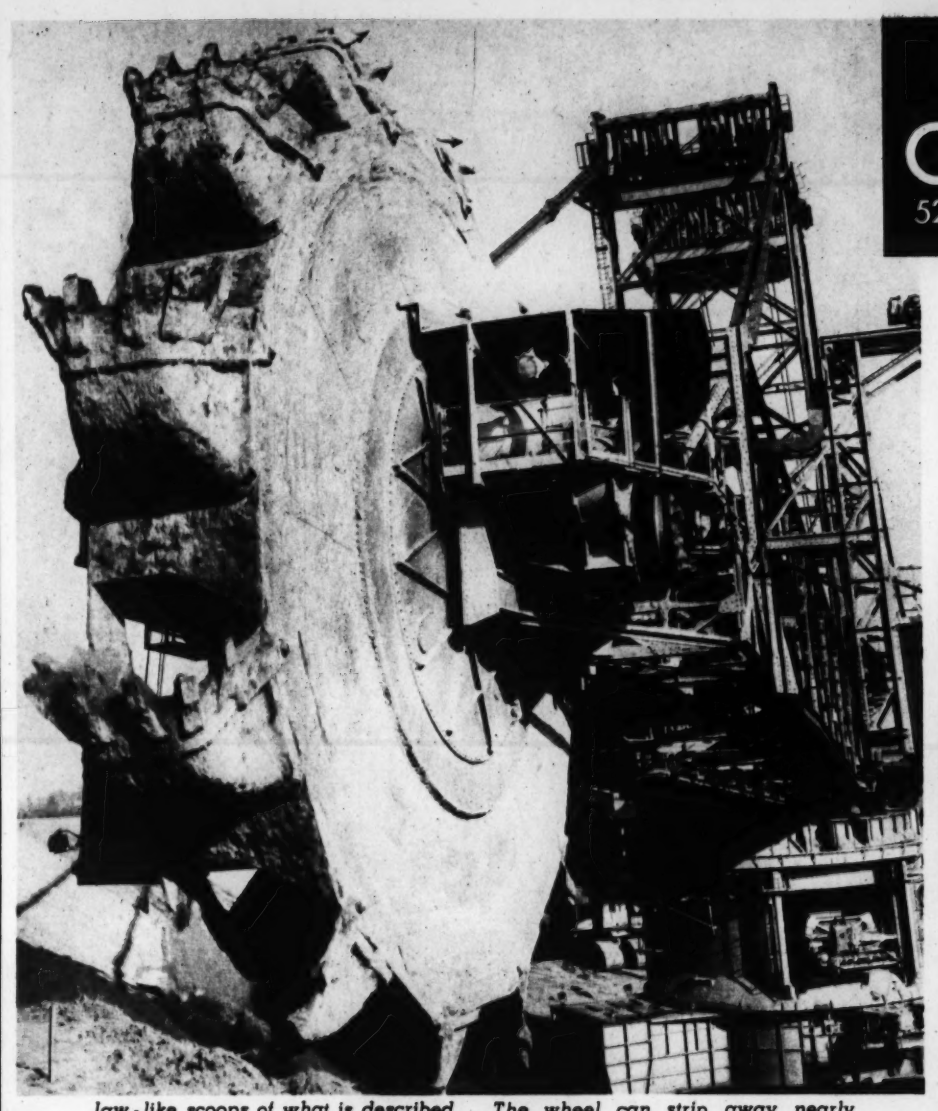
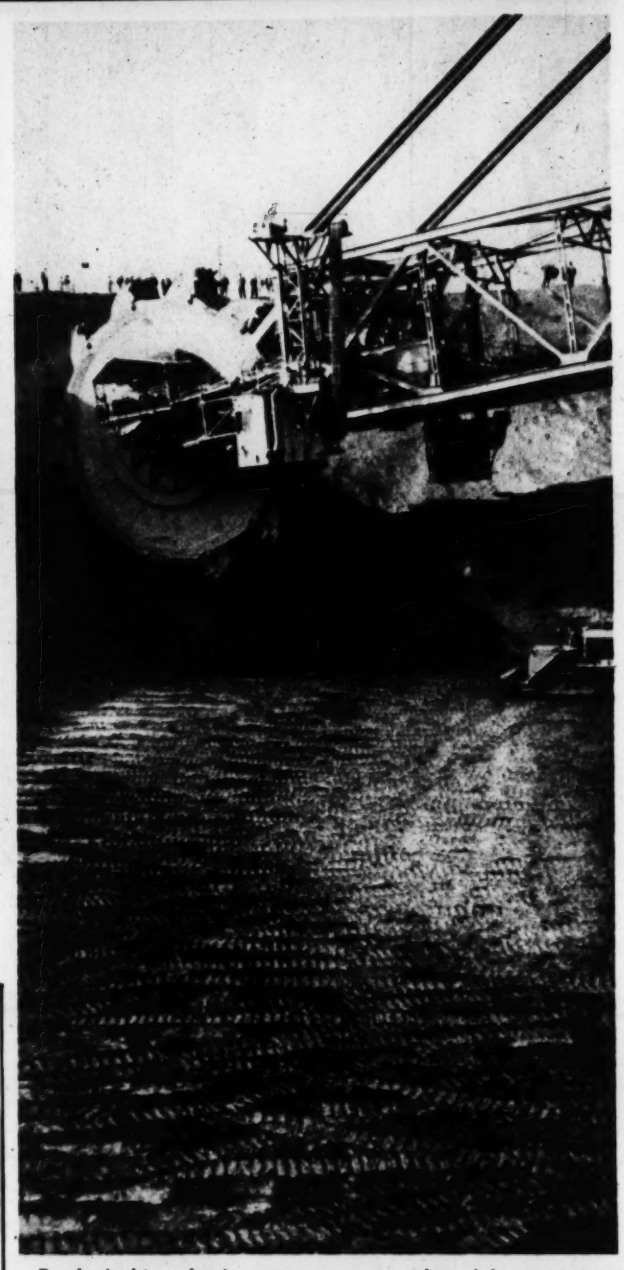
STRIP MINE'S GIANT DREDGE

52-Foot Wheel Digs Lignite in Germany



Jaw-like scoops of what is described as the world's largest dredge bite into ground at a lignite pit near Cologne, Germany. There are 12 of the toothed buckets on the dredge's giant steel wheel, which is 52 feet in diameter. The wheel can strip away nearly 100,000 cubic yards of material a day. Dredge weighs 5500 tons, is 656 feet long, moves on 18 caterpillar tracks, was built by two German firms at a cost of $5,000,000.



Dredge's big wheel gnaws away at sides of huge pit it has dug out. Bulldozer partly visible at right is dwarfed by size of the wheel. Just behind wheel is dredge's "neck" through which a conveyor belt carries lignite (a variety of coal intermediate between peat and bituminous coal) to railroad cars spotted underneath the machine by radio signals from one of the dredge's control cabins. The wheel is controlled from cabin shown nearest camera.

Operator, inside the wheel control cabin, manipulates wheels and levers that determine speed and depth of the wheel bite. Wheel is powered by one of the dredge's 116 motors. Two more of the big dredges are scheduled to be built in Germany.

Bob Ingham asks:

HOW DID YOU GET STARTED IN BUSINESS?

BOB INGHAM, well-known radio and television sportscaster, KSD and KSD-TV, St. Louis

W. E. KIPPER,
manager of Kansas City Division, Standard Oil Company:

"I started in the best place a fellow in this business can start—in touch with the public. That was nearly 33 years ago when I was driving a Standard truck in Belleview, Kansas. Then I took the company's sales training course and worked in several sales divisions and offices. One lesson in particular has stayed with me through the years—a combination of good service and quality products just can't be beat."

JACK SILER,
Standard Oil salesman, Sheridan, Wyoming:

"I'm just getting a real start now. I've been a full-fledged salesman for less than a year. Before that the company gave me on-the-job training in a service station and in the sales division office. This is a mighty competitive business, so the company made sure I was well trained in successful selling. That training has paid off already."

IRVIN E. MILLER,
Standard Oil laboratory superintendent, Mandan, North Dakota:

"When I was still in school studying chemical engineering, I'd heard that Standard was outstanding in research. So when my opportunity came eleven years ago to join the company, I took it. I started at Standard's lab in Sugar Creek, Mo., and moved to this new laboratory in 1954. I want to tell you it's a real thrill to see an organization grow and to be able to grow with it."

EDWARD A. METCALF, manager, Standard Oil Refinery, Neodesha, Kansas:

"Well, unlike some oil men, I haven't moved from place to place. I started here as a secretary, worked as an auditor, and I'm still at Neodesha today. Every minute has been interesting. After returning from service in World War I, I went into operations and worked up through the ranks to superintendent. In 1942 I was promoted to manager."

Last year more than 3,300 new people "started" with Standard Oil Company. To help our employees reach the best jobs they are capable of doing, many kinds of training are constantly available—on-the-job training and formal training such as schools, programs and courses. In a company as large as ours, one promotion in a key position often means a series of promotions benefiting many people.

There are opportunities for advancement in research, engineering, manufacturing, transportation, sales, administration and other departments.

One other thing. No Standard Oil job is too big for an employee to aim at, for practically all of our officers, directors and other executives have come up through the ranks.

VEAL SCALOPPINE MARSALA

(Scaloppine di vitello alla marsala)

Scaloppine does not mean veal. It means "pieces," so when you order scaloppine the word must be qualified. This dish makes an excellent meal with salad or peas or stringbeans or boiled rice or buttered pasta.

INGREDIENTS: 2 lbs. palm-size veal cutlets, wafer-thin; 1 tbsp. flour; 3 tbsps. butter; 1 cup well-seasoned stock, or a bouillon cube plus 1 cup boiling water; salt; 1 basil or bay leaf; 6 cloves; ⅓ cup marsala (Italian equivalent of Madeira or sherry).

Lightly salt and flour the scaloppine. Saute gently in butter which is hot but not brown. As scaloppine browns add stock slowly. When it comes to a boil, lower flame, cover pan, and cook for 20 minutes, turning pieces over at least once. Care should be taken that the flour does not lump. Add basil or bay leaf and cloves. Add wine, bring to boil. Serves 6.

VARIATION: With mushrooms: Leave out basil and cloves. After the stock, add cup of very thinly sliced mushrooms, cook 20 minutes; add wine, bring to boil, and serve.

Parente's — 6600 CHIPPEWA — FL. 2-6600

Potato-Giblet Dressing for Roast Turkey

1. Mrs. Byrne puts giblets in water to simmer for about an hour. Potatoes are boiled until tender, but firm. Chopped onion and celery are sauteed in oil.

2. Cold boiled potatoes are peeled and shredded. Soft bread crumbs, salt and pepper are combined with the onion and celery, then potatoes are added.

3. Milk and eggs are beaten together, then added to mixture, folding in gently but thoroughly.

By MERNA LAZIER

A DELICIOUS potato-giblet dressing which may very easily steal the show from the traditional Thanksgiving turkey is a specialty of Mrs. Patrick F. Byrne of Olivette. She prefers this dish because it serves the purpose of both the potato and dressing courses and may be prepared in advance. It is baked just before serving, thus eliminating the last-minute job of mashing potatoes. The dressing may be stuffed into the turkey cavity, but Mrs. Byrne prefers to bake and serve it in a separate baking dish.

Mrs. Byrne cooks the potatoes and giblets separately in advance, as the potatoes should be cold and the giblets very tender. Potatoes are shredded rather fine. If potatoes are shredded while hot they will tend to disintegrate and will also absorb too much of the milk and eggs. They are then combined with the bread crumbs, sauteed onion and celery, and are seasoned to taste with salt and pepper. Undiluted evaporated milk is beaten into the eggs, then this is added to the other mixture. Poultry seasoning and parsley are put in with the finely chopped giblets, folding in rather than beating. The dressing is formed into balls with an ice cream scoop or small cup and put in a greased baking dish. It is baked for 30 minutes at 375 degrees just before serving. If prepared in advance, dressing should be covered with foil and refrigerated until time to bake. Amounts given will make about 15 servings.

INGREDIENTS: Four large, firm, red potatoes (four and one-half cups when shredded), four and one-half cups soft bread crumbs, three eggs, one and one-fourth cups undiluted evaporated milk, two cups chopped celery, one-half cup chopped onion, five tablespoons cooking oil for sauteing, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, two and one-half teaspoons salt, two and one-fourth teaspoons poultry seasoning, two tablespoons dried parsley and the giblets from the turkey.

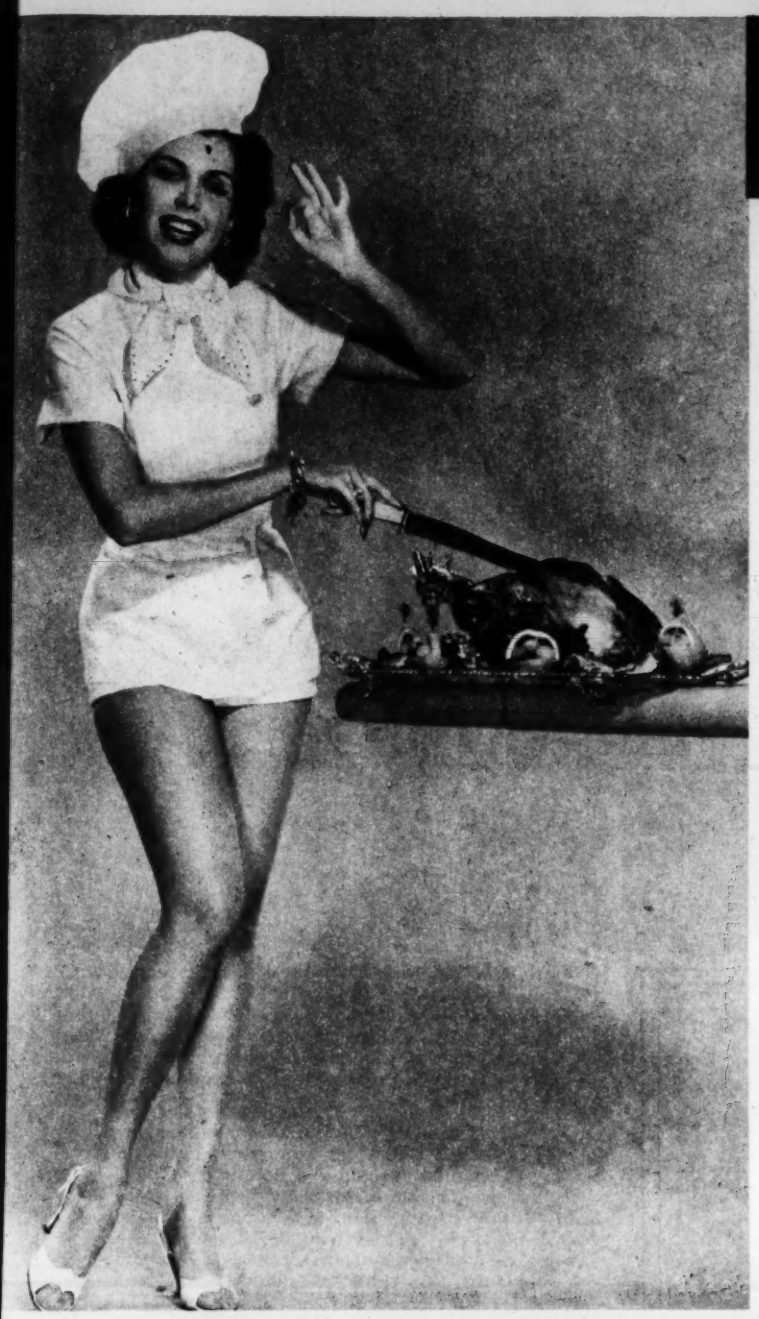
From Hollywood— Turkeys With Corn



OVER MOST OF THE COUNTRY, holidays are taken pretty much as they come, each with the customs made appropriate by time and tradition. In Hollywood, holidays are commemorated with certain additional inimitable touches, most of them lent by comely young women not very warmly clad, who are worked into the seasonal theme in ways that are sometimes remarkable. Thanksgiving, the celebration of abundant crops and other good things, lends itself handily to Hollywood's designs. Thanksgiving permits observance of the abundance of the film capital's most staple crop—pretty girls, and, thanks to the studios' willingness to share their blessings, of the girls themselves. In these three photographs are to be found Dancer Ann Miller touching a roast turkey with the blade of a carving knife, Starlet Barbara Nichols stalking an imaginary turkey with a blunderbuss around a neatly contrived shock of fodder, and Lucy Marlow, another starlet, leading a live turkey and carrying a basket of fruit. It is a foregone conclusion in the idiom of press agentry that the turkey in such cases is especially thankful to be the object of such flattering attention, fatal though it may be.

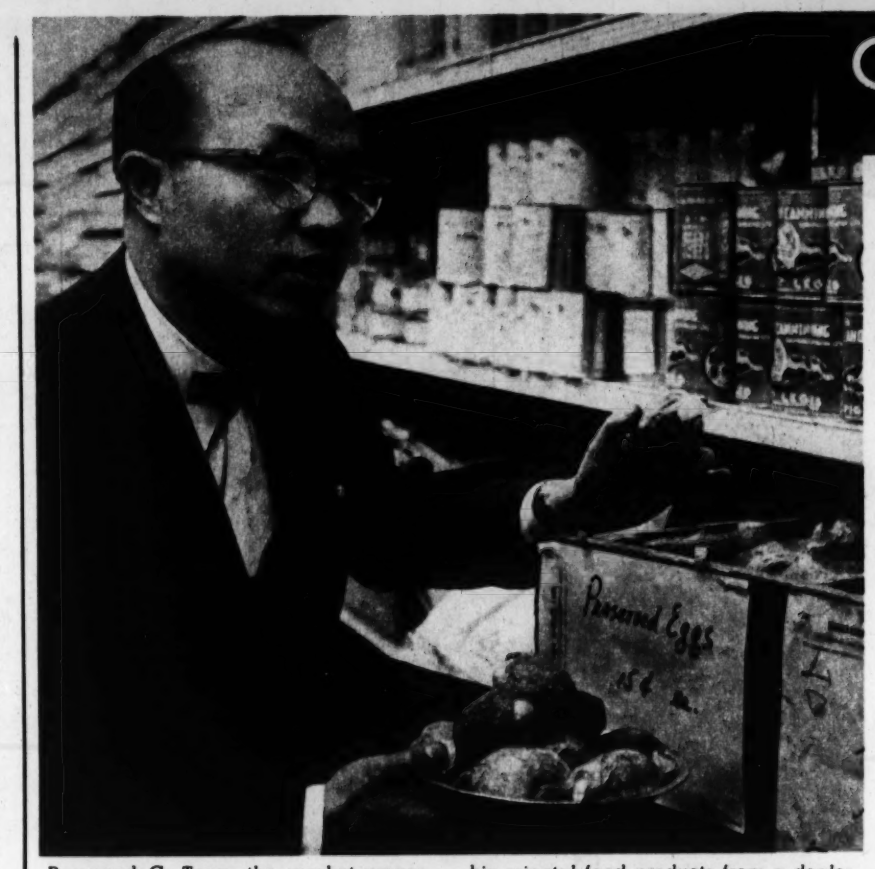
CHINATOWN SUPERMARKET

Oriental Foods Are Sold American Style in New York Store



Raymond C. Tong, the market owner, displays eggs that have been aged in a coating of mud for 15 years. A native of Hong Kong, the proprietor buys all his oriental food products from a dealer there. Tong has been in New York since 1947, has a master's degree in economics from New York University.

Mrs. Chi Yin Tong, right, wife of the store owner, sells a flattened dried duck to customer Betty Wang. Many of the foods offered, such as octopus, shrimp and fruits, have been preserved by the oldest process known—dehydration. Americans fond of oriental dishes are among the store's regular shoppers.

ANCIENT ORIENTAL FOODS, most of them processed in Hong Kong, are sold in modern supermarket fashion at a store in New York's Chinatown. The store, the only one of its kind in the Western Hemisphere, is equipped with self-service shelves stocked with boxes and cans of such unusual foods as chook soon (bamboo shoots), mar tai (water chestnuts), lotus roots, pickled leek, seaweed and fried spotty fish. Each item carries price, weight and description in both Chinese and English. Staples of the American diet are also sold. So are Chinese slippers and other nongrocery items.

United Press Photos

The Chinese supermarket's entrance, at 20 East Broadway. Just inside are grocery carts which can be used, as in most other supermarkets, to haul children along with the purchases.

What is known as a "bird's nest" because of its shape and appearance is held by Mrs. Tong. Actually it is tea packed into a solid piece from which portions are broken off for brewing. The store also sells American coffee.

THE FESTIVE SEASON IS HERE..

and good things are plentiful

This week we usher in the season of festivities; days of gay parties, of bountiful tables, of family gatherings, friends and laughter, and the fragrance of oyster and sage dressing while the turkey cooks.

This time of year we count our blessings; not that we haven't counted them many times, but as Thanksgiving eve approaches, we realize more keenly, perhaps, than at any other time, the meaning of home, of loved ones, and what living in this land of plenty has meant to generations before us and to ourselves.

And, although we have far out-distanced the sleigh that went over the hill to grandmother's house, our womenfolk still delight in varying menus and serving new surprises in food.

Thorough reading of the Post-Dispatch Thursday Food Section and Monday's Food Advertisements, will keep you informed of what to buy and where and when to buy it, and twentieth century ways to prepare it.

CHURCH IN THE VALLEY

Van Heflin, Joanne Woodward in Film "Count Three and Pray"

1. Luke Fargo (Van Heflin), who fought for the North, returns to his hometown in a Southern valley after the end of the Civil War. The word "traitor" has been painted on chimney of his ruined house.

2. Luke, remembered in the community for his liquor-drinking, horse-racing and woman-chasing ways, but who has become a self-ordained preacher, proceeds to the war-ruined village church and its abandoned parsonage. Lissy (Joanne Woodward), an orphan living in the parsonage, fires two shots at Luke and then profanely orders him to leave.

3. After demanding that Lissy stop swearing, Luke goes to town to get supplies. Although anticipating the hatred he will encounter, Luke walks to store operated by Yancey Huggins (Raymond Burr, right), "white trash" who got rich during the war. Huggins sicks his louts onto Luke, who fights back reluctantly but decisively. Luke takes his supplies back to the parsonage, establishes a truce with Lissy, and sets about rebuilding the church.

4. Georgina Decrais (Allison Hayes), belle of an aristocratic family ruined by the war, openly tries to court Luke. Lissy, too, finds herself becoming fond of him. Luke ignores outside distractions to concentrate on his building.

5. Huggins, determined to ruin Luke, of whom he is intensely jealous, has by intimidation turned townsfolk against Luke, causing a dispute even at dedication of the new church. In a final effort at humiliation, Huggins frames Luke into an apparent involvement with Georgina. The Bishop convenes a hearing to determine whether Luke may continue as a preacher.

6. The Bishop clears Luke, largely because of testimony by Lissy. Then Luke asks the Bishop to perform another duty while in the community—and Luke and Lissy are married in the new church. The congregation renews its support of them both.

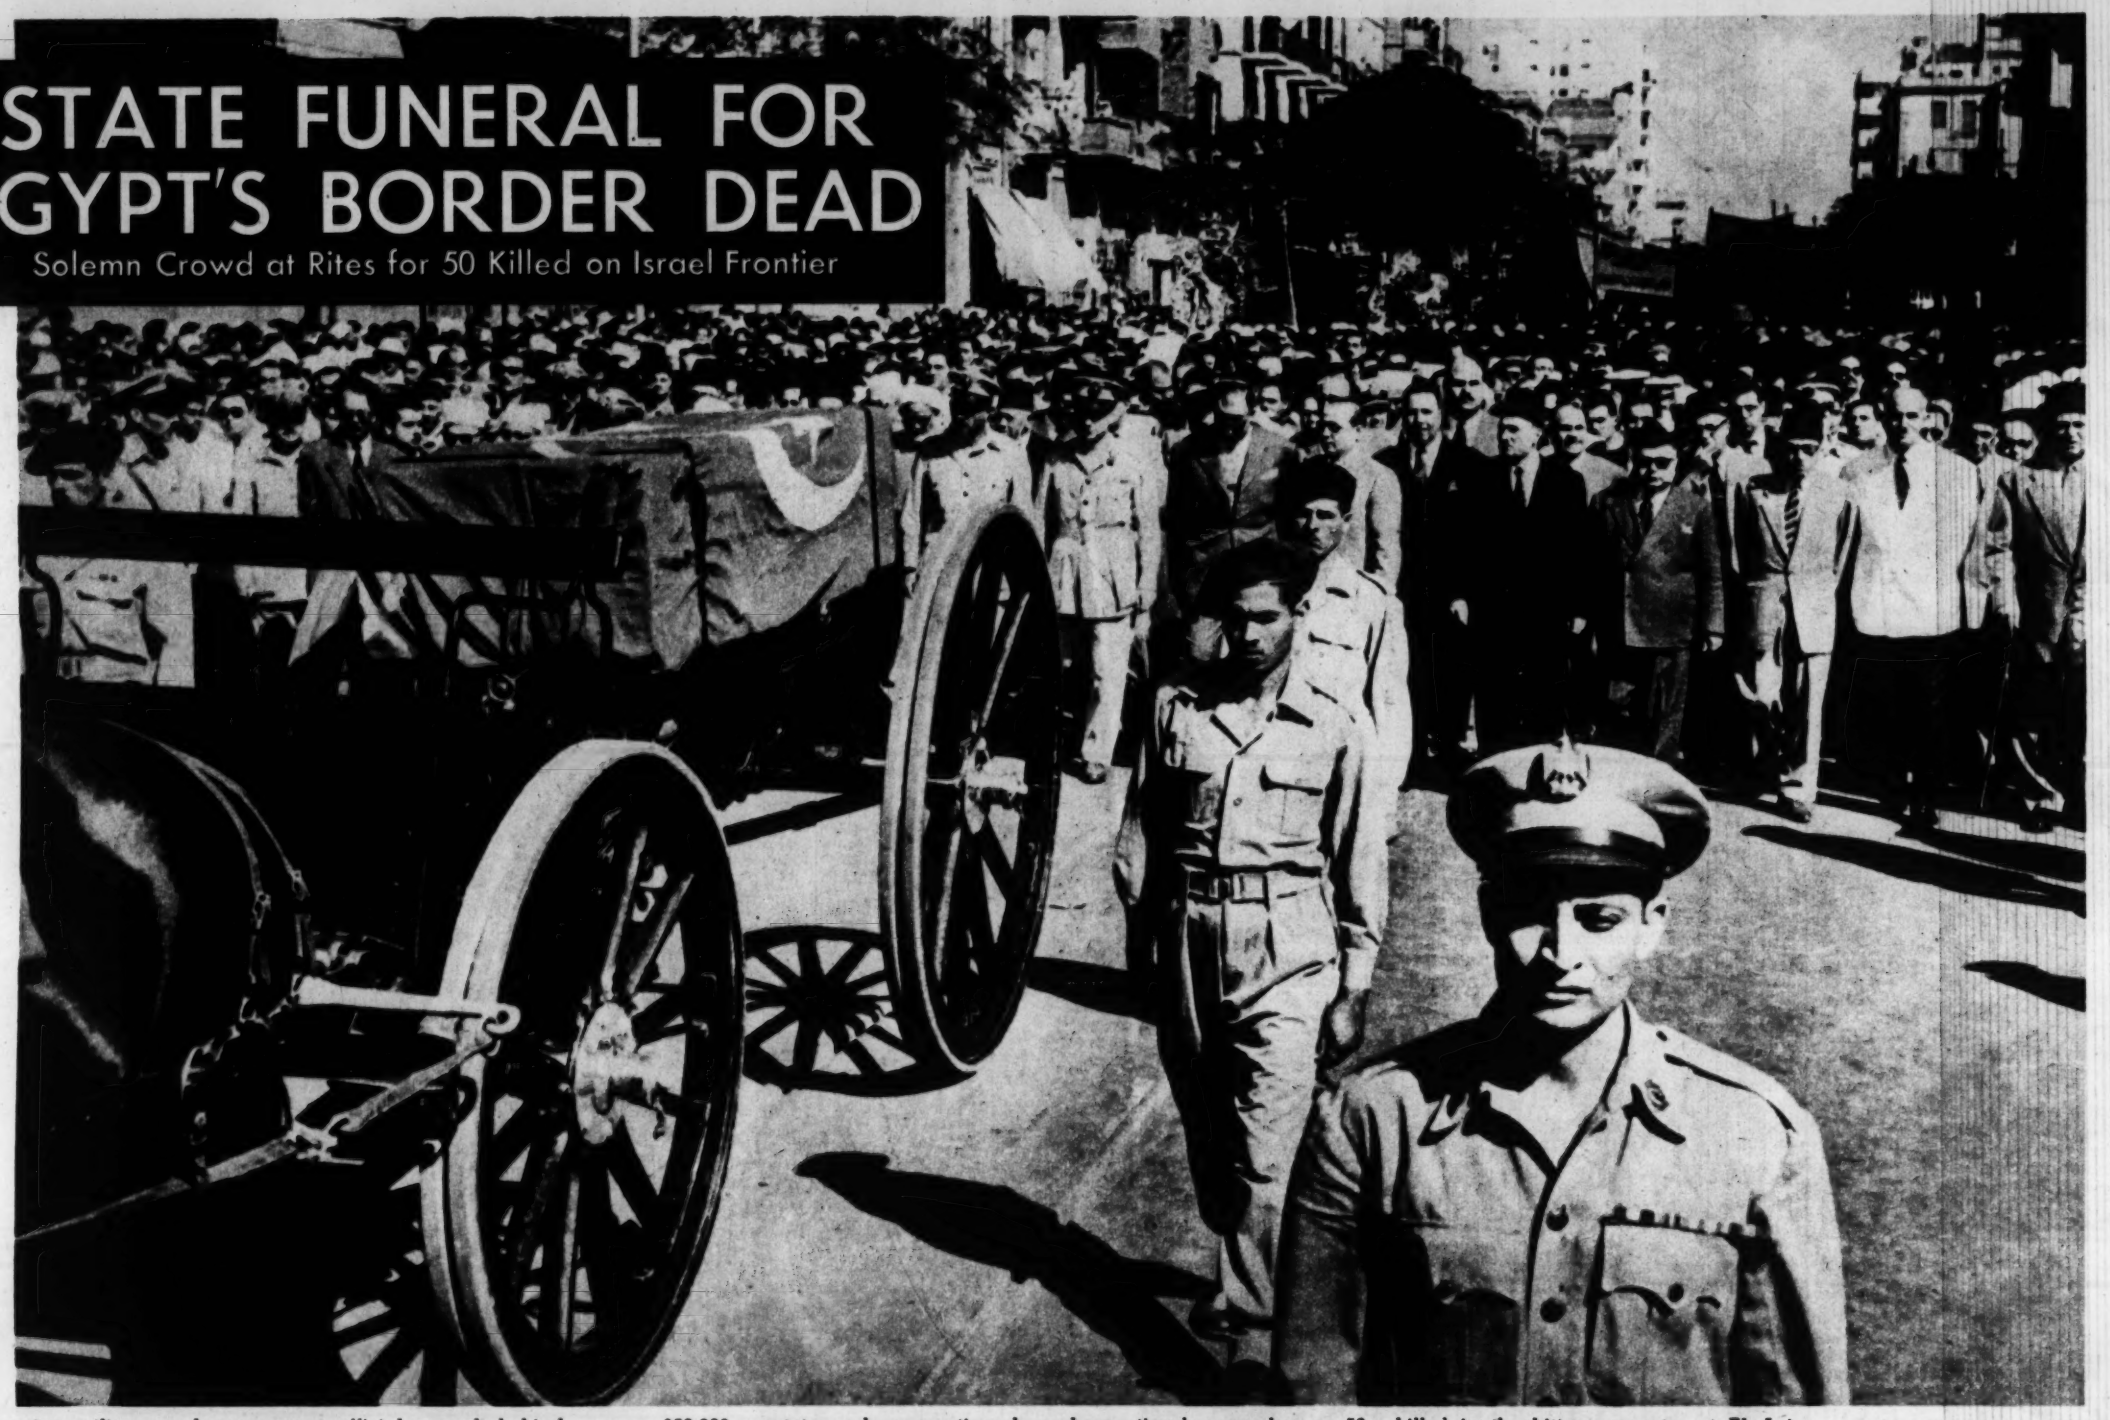
STATE FUNERAL FOR EGYPT'S BORDER DEAD

Solemn Crowd at Rites for 50 Killed on Israel Frontier



Egyptian military and government officials march behind flag-draped coffin in state funeral for three soldiers killed in fighting on the Egyptian-Israeli border. Coffins were borne on horse-drawn gun carriages through Cairo streets past some 250,000 spectators whose emotions have been stirred by recent tension between the two countries. This token funeral commemorated all the troops—Egypt reported its number as 50—killed in the bitter encounter at El Auja. Burial of the three soldiers was in Martyrs' Cemetery at Al-Khalifa Mosque, beside graves of some who lost their lives in the Palestine war of 1948-49.

"IF THAT'S THE DOLL HOUSE YOU MADE FOR US," SHOUTS PUNCH, "DON'T BOTHER TO UNWRAP IT!"

THE GIANT COLOSSAN IS PUZZLED AND TAKEN ABACK BY PUNCH'S BEHAVIOR

THE KIDS CAN HARDLY BELIEVE THEIR EYES...IT'S THEIR SPACE-SHIP!! BRIGHTLY POLISHED AND LOOKING BRAND NEW!!

"THE ENGINES ARE WORKING AGAIN," SMILES THE COLOSSAN, "HOW ABOUT AN EXHIBITION FLIGHT, BOYS, TO SEE IF OUR SCIENTISTS DID A GOOD REPAIR JOB"

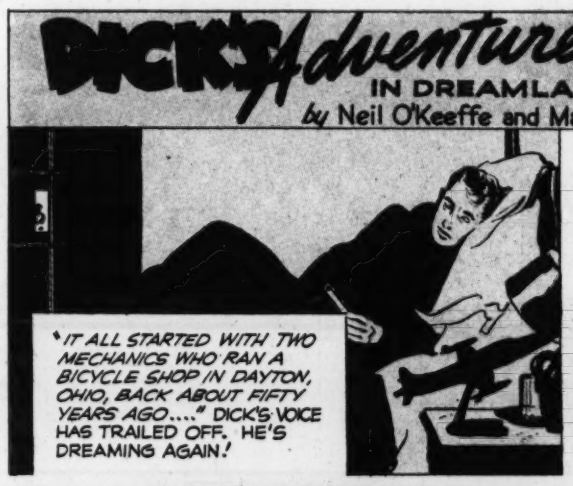
DICK'S Adventures IN DREAMLAND

by Neil O'Keeffe and Max Trell



"IT ALL STARTED WITH TWO MECHANICS WHO RAN A BICYCLE SHOP IN DAYTON, OHIO, BACK ABOUT FIFTY YEARS AGO...." DICK'S VOICE HAS TRAILED OFF. HE'S DREAMING AGAIN!

YES, IT'S A DREAM. IT'S THE CITY ROOM OF A DAYTON NEWSPAPER ON AN AUTUMN DAY IN 1903. THE EDITOR IS HEATEDLY BAWLING OUT HIS ENTIRE STAFF.

"I WANT THAT STORY!" HE SHOUTS. "IF MY SO-CALLED REPORTERS CAN'T GET IT, MAYBE MY CUB CAN! COME HERE, DICK! THE REST OF YOU GET OUT!"

THE EDITOR POUNDS HIS DESK. "THIS IS GOING TO BE THE GREATEST STORY SINCE COLUMBUS DISCOVERED AMERICA! IT'S HAPPENING RIGHT HERE IN DAYTON! I WANT IT!"

ON THE FACE OF IT THE ASSIGNMENT SOUNDS SIMPLE ENOUGH. DICK GOES TO AN ADDRESS ON WEST THIRD STREET, GLANCES AT THE SIGN AND SAYS: "THIS IS THE PLACE!"

HANGING AROUND THE STORE, DICK RECOGNIZES REPORTERS FROM OTHER DAYTON NEWSPAPERS. IN ADDITION THERE ARE CORRESPONDENTS FROM NEW YORK, SAN FRANCISCO, LONDON, PARIS AND BERLIN.

"NO USE GOING IN! YOU WON'T LEARN ANYTHING!" DICK IS TOLD. "WE TRIED IT. THOSE TWO BROTHERS JUST LISTENED AND SMILED." BUT DICK WANTS THE STORY. THE ALLEY GIVES HIM AN IDEA. "THOSE BIG-SHOTS WENT IN THE FRONT DOOR. I'LL TRY THE BACK!"

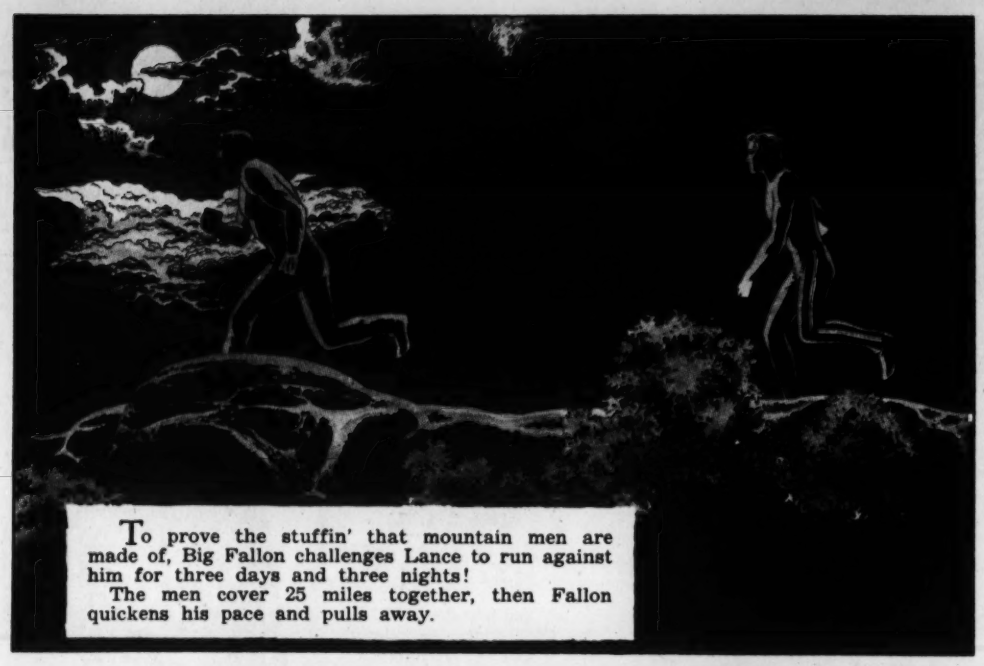
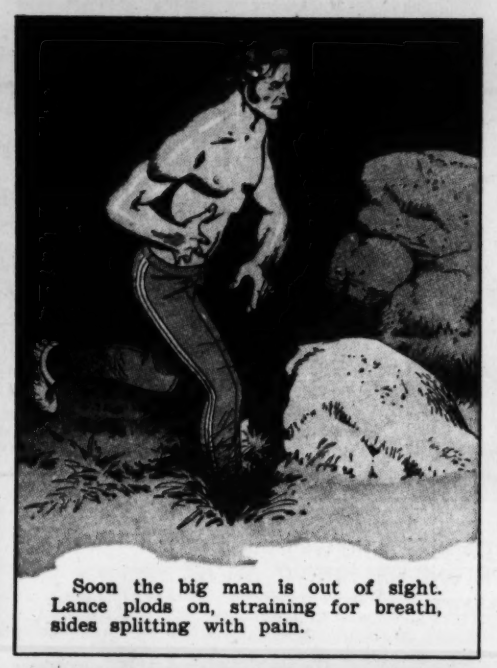
LANCE

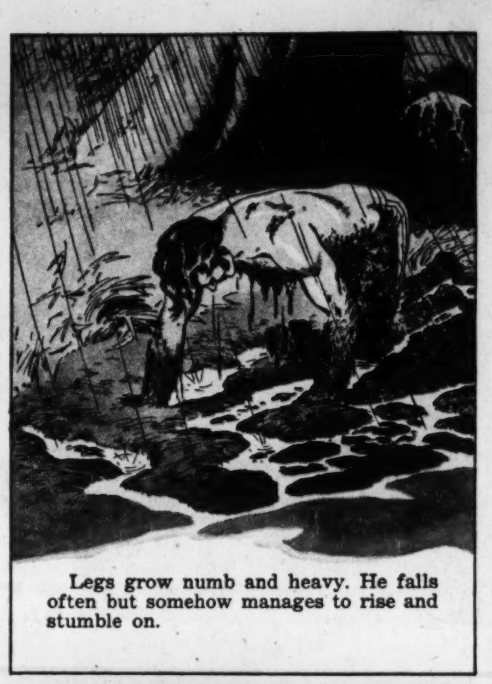


To prove the stuffin' that mountain men are made of, Big Fallon challenges Lance to run against him for three days and three nights!

The men cover 25 miles together, then Fallon quickens his pace and pulls away.

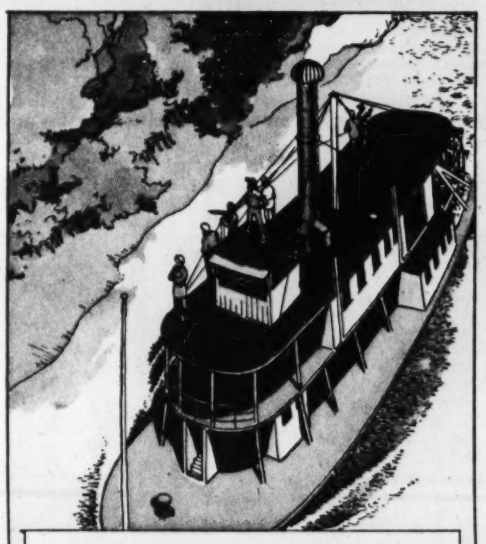


Soon the big man is out of sight. Lance plods on, straining for breath, sides splitting with pain.



Legs grow numb and heavy. He falls often but somehow manages to rise and stumble on.

Finally, after 20 hours, his body gives up. He falls and doesn't move.



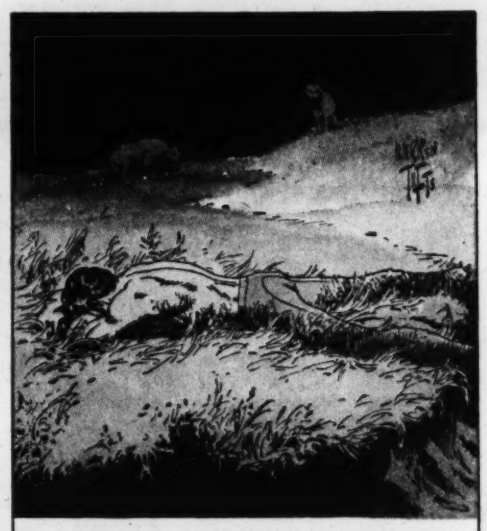
Far downriver, anxious eyes scan the riverbank, the trappers growing more concerned as each passing mile fails to show sign of the lieutenant.

Night again.

"We come near a hunnerd mile," one says. "Thet's a pile o' runnin' fer a man t'do."

"Mebbe we carried this joke too fur," another says.

Sergeant Blaze, cursing them all, climbs to the pilot house and hangs onto the boat whistle.



The shrill signals blast across the plains—but the man they search out does not hear. He lies motionless, exactly where he fell at noon.

I'll always remember...

MY THANKS-GIVING DAY IN CHINA

by TOM HARMON

THE AUTHOR: Football's Tom Harmon, onetime All-American halfback at the University of Michigan, is shown at right as the World War II fighter pilot who had an unforgettable Thanksgiving Day. He now is sports director of station KNX in Los Angeles and football commentator of West Coast games.

Thanksgiving time seems to call for football talk and thoughts of turkey and trimmings, but my strongest memory of the season — and its meaning — has nothing to do with either of them. Everything else takes a back seat to a delayed Thanksgiving I had in China, 12 years ago.

With a great gang of guys under Gen. Claire Chennault, I was a pilot in the 449th Fighter Squadron, stationed at a forward base trying against long odds to hold back the Japanese on a now more or less forgotten battlefront.

On October 30, 1943, while the team was on a mission up the Yangtze River to knock out a smelter mill, I was shot down. The last I saw of them — or they of me — my P-38 was flaming down from 4,300 feet and I was dangling in a parachute "playing dead" to fool an enemy plane that was taking pot shots to finish me off.

I must have looked like a goner. But I landed in a lake and hid under my parachute until friendly Chinese guerrillas turned up and somehow got me back to our lines 19 days later. I spent most of that time wondering about the others and about my family, and trying to heal the burns on my face, ears, wrists and legs with cold tea. Finally, after 32 days, I was flown back to rejoin my squadron.

I looked forward to a lot of kidding. There is a close feeling of comradeship between men who fly together day after day and who often don't come back. They rib each other constantly but would fight any outsider who tried it.

But when my transport plane put down on the squadron landing strip, I sensed something wrong. Instead of a bunch of wisecracking pilots, there was Father Joe Cosgrove, our chaplain, the two squadron surgeons and one of the guys.

'They Got the CO'

"Is this the welcome?" I yelled. "Where's the CO?" Father Cosgrove shook hands quietly. "Tom," he said slowly, "we got the smelter mill and six enemy planes. But they got three others besides yours. The CO was in one of them."

Going inside, I saw something I still can see. As in all fighter squadrons, when a flier didn't return from a mission his personal belongings were put together and sent to his family. Clothing and equipment went to whoever in the squadron could use it. And being gone 32 days is enough to make even your most hopeful friends wonder if you'll be back.

After the handshakes, each guy would slip back to my room. One brought back my pants, another my boots and so forth. They did it silently, without embarrassment.

I came back to the living that night, when the new commanding officer — a colonel instead of my dead Captain — threw a delayed Thanksgiving Day party for me, with a welcoming speech, the fixings and chocolate cake. It was one of the happiest homecomings I have ever known.

But the incident that I will forever remember is the Mass that Father Joe Cosgrove said for me the following morning. It was the Catholic Mass of Thanksgiving, and although there were then only about 10 Catholics in the squadron (including me), the entire 449th was there. It was a simple ceremony, far from home, with a guy named Harmon crying hard.

Time has somehow made me lose track of a great many of the boys of the 449th. A great many of our gang, as of other gangs, didn't return from the war. I was lucky.

I have, through football, received many awards that I highly prize. But for a deep feeling of "being wanted," that Thanksgiving Mass in China can never be topped. ■

A family's dream comes true

IN FORMER BED, Ray's feet hang out 5 inches. He used to sprawl at an uncomfortable angle across twin beds, pushed together.

ERIE, PA.

When PARADE's recent series, "American Families in a Boom Year," focused on a local family, the Ray Bellinghams, 6'8" factory hand Ray Bellingham spoke wistfully of a dream that always remained just beyond his $5,000-a-year budget: a bed tailor-made for his lanky frame. Today, thanks to a PARADE-reading bed-company executive, Ray is sleeping comfortably for the first time since he was 16, when his height shot over 6 feet.

The Bellinghams' story in PARADE's Oct. 2 issue came to the attention of Grant G. Simmons Jr., vice-president of the Simmons Co., bed manufacturers. Simmons dashed off a letter to the General Electric worker, telling him: "A person who has worked as hard as you have deserves a good, comfortable night's sleep." He followed up a few weeks later with a gift of a custom-built bed measuring seven by six feet — a $310 item. The bed, which has no footboard to gouge Ray's ankles (he used to pad them with pillows), quickly was installed in the master bedroom.

"Wonderful," sighed Ray when he tested out the king-sized mattress for the first time. "It's something I've always yearned for, but I probably would never have bought it. With four kids, a wife and a mortgage, I'd have felt awfully selfish spending all that money on myself."

"Wonderful," echoed his pretty blonde wife, Helen. Under the old system, she was wedged into one corner because Ray slept diagonally across pushed-together twin beds. "With all that space," says 5'3" Helen, "I can stretch out completely for the first time since we got married." ■

LOUD VEST (with dark suit) typifies new teen-age fashion formula: colorful but trim.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT:

BOYS ARE GOING CLOTHES-CRAZY

by LESTER RAND

TASSELED LOAFERS, kept polished to high gloss, now are favorite footwear. In second place: white bucks.

Probably the reason no one has mentioned this before is that everyone was too dumfounded to speak. But on these pages you see pictorial proof of haberdashery's most astounding reversal of form since Russian diplomat Vyacheslav Molotov modeled that 10-gallon hat: a sudden mania for clothes among U.S. teen-age boys. The fashion plates here knock 'em dead in Garden City, N.Y., but you could be blinded by the same blaze of tattersall vests, pastel-colored shirts and charcoal suits anywhere in the country.

As near as the Rand Youth Poll (which keeps its finger on the teen-age pulse through a nationwide network of 1,800 teen-age researchers) can pinpoint it, the craze began about 18 months ago. Parents have been watching it develop with some alarm and considerable bewilderment. Teen-age girls are more than bewildered; they're crushed. "When I used to go to the movies," one Detroit girl moaned, "I'd wear an old skirt, saddle shoes, bobby sox and a sweater. The other night, my date showed up in a charcoal suit, a red vest and clean white bucks. And we were only going to see Marlon Brando. I felt gruesome!"

Around Dover, N.J., they still speak with awe about Feb. 8, 1955. That day, by prearranged plot, every boy in the eighth grade blossomed out in his Sunday best. It was a not-so-subtle hint to the girls that flapping shirttails and rolled-up jeans were passé. The girls got the idea, but the boys still dress up once a week to keep the memory fresh.

A Few Remain Holdouts

In the face of this, a girl simply can't afford to look "grim." A few boys still date in torn T-shirt and faded blue jeans, but their ranks are thinning fast. Even the school idols — the athletes and the class leaders — are riding with the tide. A boy in Columbus, O., a baseball captain and top swimmer, showed a youth-poll researcher his wardrobe; it included slacks in colors ranging from tangerine through pink to light blue. His pride was a "cognac" (tan) dress shirt.

Once a boy who wore such colors would have been branded a "petunia." But today's teenager gobbles up just about anything in pink, heliotrope, mint or orange. The most popular item in footwear seems to be tasseled loafers. Some boys have even embraced walking shorts and knee socks, though this flirtation has a long way to go before becoming a trend. A new fad in the Southwest finds "steadies" wearing the same toilet-water scent. Our youth researchers report a burgeoning interest in hair-grooming aids, complexion aids, combs and nail files. CLOTHES ARE A TEEN-AGE REPLY TO JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

Garden City's Abraham & Straus, where some of the young bucks in these pictures buy their clothes, have greatly expanded their teen-age departments.

What's come over American boyhood? Some youth workers think the fashion parade merely reflects boom times. Others say there's more to it than that: sloppy dress has become synonymous with delinquency, and the Beau Brummells are trying to set themselves apart from the "bad actors." Another theory maintains that the dress-up craze is an attempt to reach maturity quickly. But everyone seems to agree that better dress parallels better behavior.

If you're the parent of a teen-age boy who's still a bit on the shaggy side, youth workers advise you not to worry. Many boys regard sloppiness as an inalienable right, and are fighting a rearguard action. And even if the leopards have changed their spots, they're still boys underneath.

In Boston recently, a boy arrived late for school, but he had an excuse in tune with the trend. "I would have been here on time," he told the teacher, "but I couldn't find a pair of socks to match my ensemble." ■

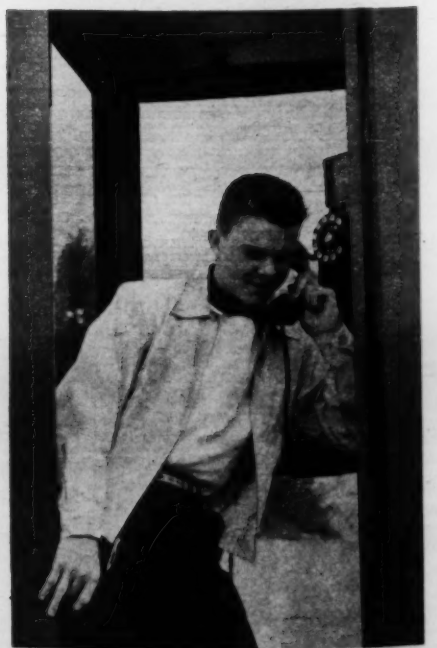
SCHOOL CLOTHES show "dressy" trend. These boys prefer coats and ties to long-time standbys of T-shirt and faded blue jeans.

LEISURE WEAR accents color, neatness. Current favorites include bright turtleneck sweater, storm coat fastened with wooden pegs.



CREW-CUT ROMEO models "Italian" sport shirt. Boys like loose-fitting shirts, sometimes have 15 or more, in a variety of colors, to choose from.

Medicine's new weapons against HEART DISEASE

You or someone you know may benefit from the all-out attack doctors are unleashing against the No. 1 killer

by ROBERT P. GOLDMAN

LAST AUGUST 1 President Eisenhower came through a physical examination with flying colors. Less than eight weeks later he suffered a heart attack. An anxious nation watched and waited while heart disease commanded its attention.

What most people refer to as "heart disease" actually includes more than two dozen separate illnesses. They can be divided into four main categories: atherosclerosis (hardening and thickening of the arteries), high blood pressure (which can lead to hardening of the arteries), rheumatic heart disease (damage to the heart muscle or heart valves resulting from rheumatic fever in childhood) and congenital heart disease (defects of the heart or its blood vessels present at birth). The first two make up about 70 per cent of all cases; the second two, about 27 per cent. The remaining 3 per cent are such rare forms as subacute bacterial endocarditis or thyrotoxic heart disease.

Currently, an estimated 10,000,000 Americans are afflicted by one or more of these illnesses. They take a terrible toll of 775,000 lives per year, and thus represent our No. 1 health problem.

The President was struck down by a coronary thrombosis, or blood clot. This was a result of atherosclerosis, the most prevalent form of heart disease. (It affects about seven times as many men as women.) His attack was typical of what hits someone in the U.S. almost every three minutes of every day.

Here's what happens. Blood flowing through a diseased coronary artery (so-called because they form a "crown" over the heart) slows down and begins to clot. When the clot (thrombus) is formed, it blocks off blood flow to the heart muscle. The result is a terrible pain, usually in the left shoulder and arm, which indicates the moment of attack.

Once deprived of blood, a portion of the heart muscle "dies." It becomes scarred and incapable of performing its normal task of receiving and pumping blood to the rest of the body.

Thus, the extent of the patient's heart-muscle damage — plus the care administered after an attack — holds the key to whether he survives. Of course, a damaged heart cannot do the work of a normal, healthy heart, so patients have to curtail their activities.

Since the President's heart attack, millions of Americans have wondered: Can such ailments be prevented? What is being done about heart disease? Where do we stand?

The answer to the first question is simple. No, heart attacks cannot be prevented. Most often they strike without warning. However, within the past few years medical science has unleashed an all-out attack probing into the mysteries of heart attack and every other form of heart disease. And in those few years, doctors have accomplished much to alleviate the pain and suffering of heart disease.

Actually, heart research on a scale warranted by its importance dates only from the period of World War II. Just before the war, the first successful surgical operation for congenital heart disease was performed. Since then, thousands of babies' lives have been saved by bold, imaginative heart surgery.

The Attack Speeds Up

Only during World War II did doctors nail down the essential cause and treatment of rheumatic fever, which can, if unchecked, lead to life-threatening rheumatic heart disease.

Only in 1948 did the American Heart Association expand its activities to include financial support of heart research. That same year, the National Heart Institute (U.S. Public Health Service) was formed to lend additional support to heart studies.

Only six years ago was an important lead uncovered as to the cause of atherosclerosis. This evidence, which implicates America's generally high-fat diet as the culprit, may hold the key to the conquest of our most serious health problem.

Years ago, doctors put their heart patients to bed and hoped they would pull through. Recent research has proved not only that prolonged bed rest can endanger the patient's life, but that many patients thrive when allowed to get back to work and pursue near-normal daily activities.

Thirty years ago, heart-attack victims like the President had less than a 50-50 chance of survival. Today, the chances are four out of five that the heart patient will live through his first attack. New drugs, better diagnostic devices and increased knowledge are responsible for that sharp upturn in prolonged lives.

But medical science is not stopping there. It is striking out in dozens of new directions.

You may have read of the so-called "mechanical heart and lung," an experimental instrument which might open whole new frontiers of life-saving surgery.

Almost every day, new drugs are being tested to determine if they will work against high blood pressure, heart failure and those agonizing chest pains doctors call angina pectoris.

Vast amounts of basic research into the chemical and physical aspects of heart and blood-vessel disease are being carried out.

The doctors want to learn why some people are equipped to handle certain chemicals in their bodies which may be linked to heart disease; what relation fat has to overall heart health; what actually "triggers" high blood pressure.

Researchers are seeking the answers to these questions and hundreds more. Gradually they are discovering the answers. With each answer, another area of heart disease ceases to be a threat.

In little more than a decade medical science has recorded some memorable successes. Two major kinds of heart disease, rheumatic and congenital, appear to be on the run. The other two, atherosclerosis and high blood pressure, are better treated than ever.

But "miracles" in heart disease do not happen overnight. Every new drug, every new test, every new surgical approach takes years to evaluate.

Only by slow, tedious toil, following lead after lead, has progress been made in heart research. That is the way future progress also will come.

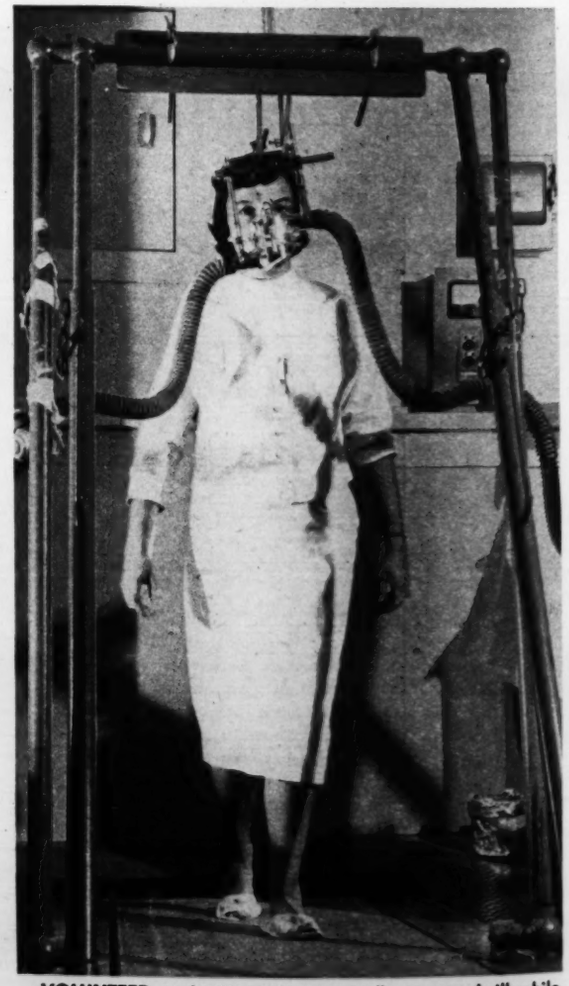
Two killers yield



VOLUNTEER at the Heart Institute walks on treadmill while breathing controlled amount of oxygen. Her heart and lungs are normal; the test measures how they function under stress.

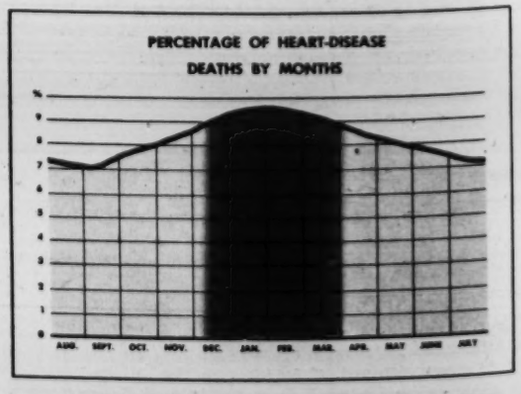


CHART shows that on the average heart deaths increase in the winter months. Doctors are not sure of the reasons. Cold may have a constricting effect on blood vessels or it may alter the metabolism and thus increase the heart's work load.

to surgery and drugs

To date, medicine has accomplished most with two main types of heart disease: rheumatic and congenital. In the first, the annual death rate has been cut by more than 30 per cent — from 29,000 to 19,000 — since 1940. Surgery for the most prevalent form of rheumatic heart-valve damage now is about 90 per cent successful.

Today, doctors can prevent both rheumatic fever and the recurrent attacks of it which can cause increasing heart valve damage. This, one authority told PARADE, "will in the future save more lives than the Salk [polio] vaccine."

Prevention is based on two facts: almost every case of rheumatic fever follows a certain type of streptococcal infection — and "strep" infections can be controlled by antibiotics. Given a way to detect all original strep infections, rheumatic fever could be virtually eliminated. Meanwhile, use of antibiotics (and sulfa drugs) is preventing thousands of recurrent strep infections, holding heart-valve damage to a minimum and prolonging lives.

Despite such precautions, rheumatic heart disease may reach the life-or-death stage; then doctors often operate. One operation involves cutting the mitral valve on the left side of the heart. Only seven years old, this already is 90 per cent effective. Less common, but also promising is repair of the aortic valve with a plastic ball.

Another Promising Picture

In congenital heart disease, the story is equally encouraging.

The first operation to correct a congenital heart defect was performed in 1938, when a team of Boston surgeons closed off a duct leading from the aorta and saved an infant's life. Since then, seven of the 15 common congenital heart conditions have been operated on successfully, often preventing almost immediate death. One example: the celebrated "blue baby" operation, now 80 per cent successful.

Incredibly, most rheumatic and congenital heart surgery is performed more or less "blind" — that is, the surgeon does not see the area in which he's operating, but merely feels it. Further, he operates in a "circulating field," an area where blood is still circulating.

Recent research therefore has sought ways to operate under direct vision and in a "dry field" — with the patient's blood bypassing the heart. Results have been striking.

In one technique, the patient is immersed in an ice-bath. This lowers his body temperature, slows the heart rate, lessens the body's need for oxygen and slows blood circulation to the heart for short periods. All that creates a relatively dry field. Ice-bath operations show real promise, but side effects will have to be overcome before they can be used routinely.

A second approach is to provide the patient temporarily with an artificial heart and lung. One hospital has reported keeping the patient's heart dry up to 73 minutes. Early results have fired doctors' imaginations.

Indeed, one prominent Philadelphia surgeon has said of the possibilities of the artificial heart and lung: "If reasonably safe . . . presently unthinkable advances in medicine and surgery would be opened. Immediate resuscitation after death, treatment of acute and chronic failure of the heart, major surgical replacements of the defective portions of the circulatory system . . . all these and many other presently unattainable objectives might well become practical realities."

DRINKING MILK as part of a three-week diet test, healthy Heart Institute volunteers help doctors learn facts on body mechanisms involved in heart failure.

Controlled cross circulation, a technique devised at the University of Minnesota last year, "borrows" the heart and lungs of another person in heretofore inoperable congenital heart cases.

A simple pump transfers blood from the patient's veins to the donor. From the donor, the blood gets oxygen — vital to maintaining life — and additionally helps create a dry field. Blood carrying oxygen of course is returned to the patient's arteries. Only one-eighth to one-fourth the volume of normal circulating blood is required. Thus the donor is safe while the patient gets enough blood to sustain him.

Out of 43 operations tried since spring, 1954, two-thirds of the patients lived and are doing well.

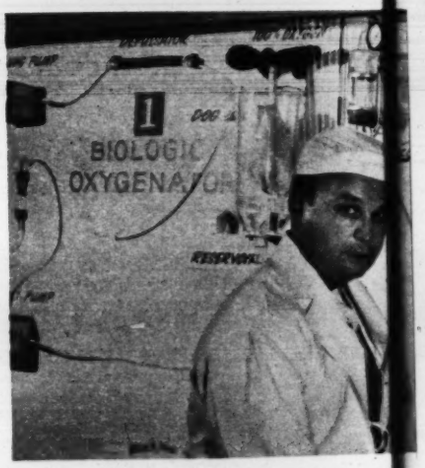
How we're fighting the No. 1 threat to our nation's health



Medicine's solid gains against rheumatic fever and congenital heart disease speak for themselves. Unfortunately, the other two big categories of heart trouble, atherosclerosis (coronary artery disease) and high blood pressure, are tougher nuts to crack.

New drugs, bold surgery, better diagnosis and diet control offer more hope than ever for those who are stricken by these ills. The greatest heart-research campaign in history is being waged against them.

But they still are the No. 1 health problem confronting the nation. They cause heart attacks and hardening of the arteries which take a death toll of about 400,000 Americans each year, more than cancer and polio combined.

Indeed, one group of doctors finds that "coronary artery disease is almost universally prevalent in middle-aged American men."

Today, artery disease cannot be prevented or cured. There is some disputed evidence that it can be slowed down. Its exact causes are unknown. And artery disease does not come and go. Once you have it, it stays with you.

All-out Attack

What are doctors doing about it?

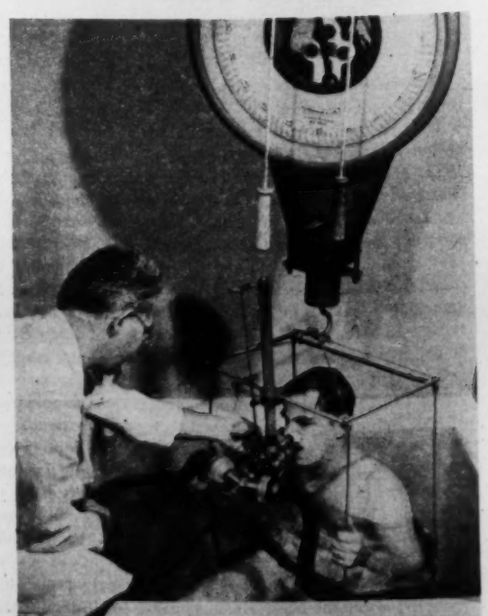
Surgery: To get more blood to the injured heart muscle after an attack, several operations are being tried—with some success, though it will take years to determine just how much.

In one operation, a piece of vein from an arm is hooked into the heart. It is felt that the new "plumbing" will carry additional blood to the heart muscle and thus keep it strong. (This operation was recommended by some surgeons for President Eisenhower.)

In a second operation, one end of a chest artery is fixed in the heart muscle. In still another, the heart muscle is irritated by talc or asbestos powder in the hope of creating a new blood supply.

A less frequent condition involves a ballooning out of the aorta, the great heart artery. Heretofore the condition

7-YEAR-OLD Larry Cordle, of Richlands, Va., is supervised in a "get-well" exercise session at the National Institutes of Health. Surgery corrected his heart defect.



DR. ANCEL KEYS, of U. of Minnesota, prepares a subject for underwater weighing—part of Keys' study of the effects of body fat, diet and exercise on the heart.

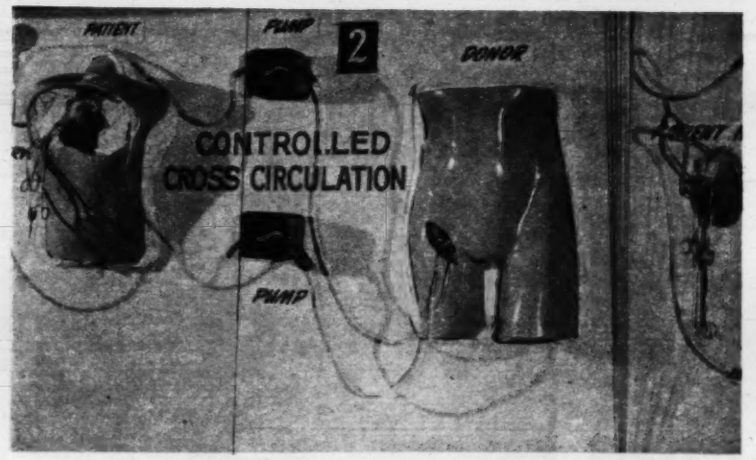


DIAGRAM shows the new "controlled cross-circulation" method of heart surgery which already has saved many children. Dr. C. Walton Lillehei (l.), of the University of Minnesota, helped originate the technique.

was fatal. But very recently doctors have found a way to take out the "balloon" and save lives. They either cut out the balloon and replace it with a healthy artery graft, or sew the repaired artery end to end.

Drugs: Doctors use drugs to prevent further blood clots after a clot has caused a heart attack.

One team of researchers reports that treated patients live three to five times longer than untreated patients. But the anti-clotting drugs are hazardous and do not work on all patients.

Within the past six weeks, two new anti-clotting drugs have been reported. They are said to be the safest and most effective yet discovered. If the claims hold up, the new drugs could help countless thousands of heart patients.

Diet: Many doctors feel that the answer to coronary artery disease lies in the food we eat. They say Americans consume too many fatty foods, thus setting up a chain reaction which results in clogged arteries and finally in heart attack. They reason further that decreasing your fat intake may lessen your chances of getting serious artery disease.

On this assumption, many doctors have changed their own diets radically in recent years. And, believing that low fat intake must begin early in life if it is to produce results (studies show that even healthy teen-agers develop traces of artery disease), many closely supervise the diets of their children.

All the evidence is not yet in, but many doctors are regulating their patients' fat intake as well.

Diagnosis: Determining the extent of injury to the heart muscle after attack has always been a big problem. It usually is determined by two recording devices, the electrocardiograph and the ballistocardiograph, but both have limitations. Now, a promising new technique is being tried.

In heart attacks, the damaged heart muscle releases a chemical into the blood stream. By testing the blood for this chemical, some doctors feel they can pinpoint the amount of damage.

If initial findings are borne out, the new technique could become a great tool in treatment and rehabilitation.

Meanwhile, perhaps the most mysterious of all diseases affecting the heart is hypertension (high blood pressure). When the pressure stays high for long periods, blood vessels thicken and harden. This hardening of vessels can cause death. But no one knows why most high blood pressure occurs.

Thus, this condition cannot be prevented. At times, it can be controlled. Four methods currently are used.

The first involves the use of drugs to lower pressure. Today, no single drug or combination works on even a majority of patients. But several drugs — rauwolfia, chlorpromazine and others — are being used with some success. A new drug made from ordinary rhododendron leaves has helped a few cases in preliminary tests.

How Many Are Helped?

Extreme pressure cases may require drugs for many years. Success for one, two or three years does not necessarily mean the problem is solved.

A second approach to high blood pressure involves controlled diet. Some cases benefit from a low-salt or the so-called rice diet. Other cases do not.

Still another approach involves surgery — the cutting of a nerve that may be responsible for high pressure. Many experts now regard this as of limited value.

Finally, recent studies indicate that stress and strain — plain old nervous tension — can force blood pressure upward. Thus, more and more doctors are concentrating on the patient's emotional problems. Some patients are helped — at least temporarily — while others are not.

All told, more than 50 per cent of blood-pressure patients probably get relief from the various treatments.

"from Contented Cows"

You can live a normal life —even with heart disease

The man at left is taking an important step in rehabilitation (restoring a degree of normal function) after a heart attack, one of the great postwar advances in handling heart disease. Though rehabilitation varies with the patient, a typical program goes about like this:

When the doctor deems it advisable, the patient is allowed to sit up in bed. Later he may dangle his arms and legs over the side of the bed. Then he is permitted out of bed for the first time. As he becomes stronger, he is allowed to take a few steps. Gradually the number of steps is increased, say from 10 to 20 to 30. Finally he may take a short walk.

If everything goes smoothly, the physician then allows his patient to return to work, at first for a day or only part of the day. Gradually, work time is increased as the patient's tolerance for it grows. Before each phase of rehabilitation, the doctor performs exhaustive tests to determine what his patient can and cannot do.

Thirty years ago such rehabilitation was largely a dream. First, fewer patients survived the danger stage of their particular heart ailments. Second, if they did survive, there was so little knowledge concerning the damaged heart's potential that doctors were virtually helpless.

Now all that has changed. Just how much was indicated last month by Dr. Paul D. White (the renowned Boston physician called in as consultant to President Eisenhower) before a meeting of the American Heart Association. "I would like to emphasize the beneficial effect of work on body, mind and soul," he said. "Idleness breeds unhappiness and is actually bad for the health. It is a rare patient indeed who is fit for nothing."

This attitude is indeed a break with the past. Behind it lie years of painstaking research by doctors all over the U.S. — research which has proved conclusively that heart disease need not spell the end of worthwhile living.

A Gamble That Won

Back in 1941, the nation's first "work-classification unit" for heart patients was set up at the New York University Medical Center. There, doctors decided to gamble. Wartime industry needed labor. Thousands of persons with heart trouble couldn't get jobs. But some doctors felt that heart cases could perform well in carefully selected types of work. So the NYU scientists started matching the patient to the appropriate job.

Their findings are classic medical history. Heart cases did all sorts of war work—from simple "sitting" jobs to tough, outdoor construction jobs — with no further damage to their hearts. In fact, work actually improved the condition of many.

The NYU unit served as a model for additional units which have since sprung up all over the country. From them and other rehabilitation facilities, doctors have learned:

1) Upwards of 70 per cent of all men who suffer "coronaries," such as the President's, can return to their original occupations if properly supervised by their doctors.

2) Countless "angina" patients can go about their daily chores virtually without limitation. This is made possible by drug therapy and other sound medical care. Even moderate exercise for many coronary and angina patients has been proved beneficial.

3) Reduction of strain, controlled diet and use of drugs enables a large percentage of high-blood-pressure cases to live near-normal lives at home and at work.

In sum, Dr. White declares:

"We may justifiably hold out hope to the cardiac patients who are afflicted by serious or at least very troublesome conditions. So many new advances are made nowadays in the medical and surgical treatment of cardiovascular diseases that almost anything is possible. Something just around the corner may prove helpful to some patient who at present seems hopelessly ill."

Adding it all up, the conclusion is clear: Medical advances against heart disease, plus new methods of after-care, offer the 10 million U.S. heart patients more hope than ever before. ■

The NEW Milton

Shifted to Hollywood to help sell color TV, he's milder,

by LLOYD SHEARER PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

HOLLYWOOD.

To date the sale of color-television sets throughout the nation has been disappointing. Last summer, in fact, several manufacturers halted their color-TV assembly lines and began ordering 21-inch sets from RCA to market under their own names. This put considerable selling responsibility on RCA's corporate shoulders.

Since the Radio Corporation of America owns NBC, and the National Broadcasting Company figuratively owns Milton Berle, and Milton Berle as "Mr. Television" helped sell millions of black-and-white sets in 1948-1954, Berle has been re-dubbed "Mr. Color Television." NBC also transplanted him to California to open its new Color City in Burbank. And in September Berle became the first top TV star to start a full season of color productions.

Whether this move will stimulate the sale of color sets is too early to tell. Certainly it has not stimulated Berle.

At 47, after 42 hectic years in show business, this frenetic, durable clown seems to be tapering off. He has lost none of his great talent, his enthusiasm or his gag file. But where once he produced, directed and starred in 39 TV programs a year, he now is limiting himself in the 1955-56 season to 13 TV shows, one every third Tuesday.

He also is limiting the rise of his blood pressure. Instead of raving, screaming, threatening, blowing whistles and fighting with his cast, Milton has become well-mannered and relatively self-controlled.

During the rehearsal of his first color show, for example, guest star Esther Williams suddenly decided that she didn't care to act in a comedy skit burlesquing the movie, Summertime. "I just don't think it's funny," she offered. "It won't play."

A year or two ago, Berle would have decapitated Esther verbally. Mr. Color Television merely said, "I think the bit will be a riot. It's my show, and if it lays an egg, I'll take the responsibility."

It turned out to be the funniest part of the program.

Similarly, during a rehearsal of Berle's second show, Ann Sothern happened to pronounce the word picayune as "pick-ay-une." Casually Berle said, "The word is pronounced 'pick-i-une.'" Miss Sothern said she didn't think so. Berle countered, "I've been down South, and I've heard them say it. Honestly, darling."

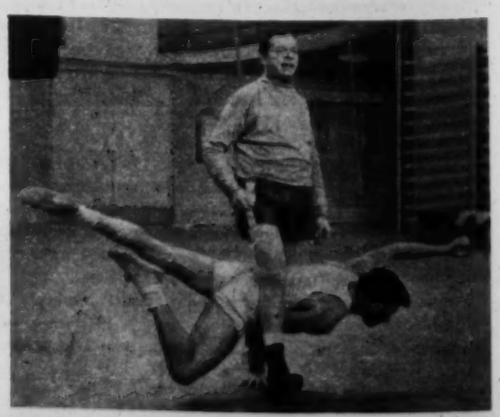
Having been called "darling," Miss Sothern deferred to the perfectionist showman. The old Berle might well have called her something else.

While it may not yet be obvious to his army of loyal followers, Berle this year also has discarded three practices which formerly earned him a certain professional ill will. He no longer appropriates the jokes or routines of other entertainers. He no longer insults his guest stars. And he no longer stands in front of an actor so that the TV camera reveals only the actor's ears.

Friends attribute Berle's new mildness partly to the calming influence of his second wife, Ruth Cosgrove — an ex-press agent from Paterson, N.J., whom he married in 1953 — and partly to the death last year of his mother, Sandra.

Sarah Berlinger (her real name) was one of the most colorful show-business mothers the entertainment world ever saw. She put Milton on the stage at age 5. For the next 40 years she served her boy as guide, manager, inspiration, stooge, confidante, traveling companion and one-woman claque.

Her love for her son was omnipresent. Anyone or anything that blocked



YESTERDAY, this kind of frantic routine made millions roar at uninhibited "Uncle Miltie."

Berle

mellower—and still funny

his success path was ruthlessly eliminated. Sandra banished Judy Malcolm, a beautiful chorus girl whom Berle was in love with years ago. Sandra disapproved of Milton's 1941 marriage to show girl Joyce Matthews, which ended in divorce. Not until 1953, when she was 76, was Sandra reconciled to losing her son to another woman.

Even so she remained to the end the vigilant protector of his interests. At Milton's and Ruth's wedding reception in a big New York hotel, Sandra looked out at the crowd of guests. Grabbing a friend's arm, she whispered, "This place is crawling with free-loaders."

TODAY, pondering a script, Berle looks more like an author than a comic.

Although he is currently less raucous and aggressive, more secure than ever before, Milton Berle still is tirelessly dedicated to his audience. "I don't care what sort of crowd you put in front of him," says his wife. "Milton will do anything, absolutely anything to make these people laugh. To him every audience constitutes a challenge."

This helps explain why Berle has refused to transfer his show to film, where it could keep earning money on reruns. "I'm the kind of guy who needs an audience," he admits readily. "I like to ad-lib, to clown around, to have a certain amount of give-and-take on my show. On film you lose some of the warmth and spontaneity."

Comedian Jerry Lewis, a friend of Berle's, shook his head on hearing this. "Don't believe a word of it," he cautioned. "The truth about this fella is that he loves people. He's always loved people. Only of late it's beginning to show."

Such is the new Milton Berle. In color, too. ■

In this little jar, forty million people found new hope for their hair

To look at it, you wouldn't think this plain little jar contained a "miracle." Yet, in five years, some 40,000,000 people have used it because, they said, it did "miracles" for their hair. Why? What makes this little jar so different from the thousands of other hair "groomers" and hair preparations available?

The secret of Charles Antell Formula 9

The first "miracle" was the discovery of lanolin, Nature's own protection for sheep wool against hot, drying sun. Charles Antell saw the tremendous benefits of lanolin for human hair. He ultra-homogenized, refined and compounded it to a substance human hair could utilize—the original Charles Antell ANHYDROUS LANOLIN! And then he combined it with his already outstandingly successful formula for hair and scalp—Charles Antell Formula 9.

People tried it. They found it did things for their hair that no other preparation had ever done. To them, it was, indeed, a "miracle." But there was an even greater discovery to come!

And now—SUPER-Lanolin!

The reason the original Charles Antell Anhydrous Lanolin could help hair as no other oil could is because it is one oil, besides those naturally in your own hair and scalp, that will absorb and hold moisture. The sun dries out these natural oils. You wash them out. So nothing is left to hold the moisture your hair so vitally needs. Your hair may, in fact, actually die of thirst.

The original Charles Antell lanolin helped maintain this vital oil-and-moisture balance by absorbing and keeping the moisture so important to a healthy scalp—to handsome, alive-looking hair.

But, fine as Charles Antell's original lanolin was, he still wasn't satisfied. He continued to experiment with lanolin, looking for a way to give it even more effectiveness. And he found it—Charles Antell SUPER-Lanolin!

The big difference

Super, indeed. By actual test, SUPER-Lanolin carries 3 times more moisture to hair and scalp than ordinary lanolin. It actually puts the lustre of new life in dead-looking hair. You'll feel your scalp wake up. Yet, because of the secret way Formula 9 with SUPER-Lanolin is made, your hair never has that oily, greasy look. It's clean, bright, alive!

Since Charles Antell first told the public about his original lanolin, thousands of lanolin hair preparations have sprung up. But there is only one with SUPER-Lanolin—Charles Antell Formula 9!

Far more than a hair groom

This is why Charles Antell Formula 9 with SUPER-Lanolin is America's finest hair and scalp conditioner. If all you want is a hair groom—something that will make your hair "lay down," instead of helping it way down—you don't have to buy Charles Antell Formula 9. Any ordinary jar of petroleum jelly—any "hair sticker"—will do.

But if you want hair that is conditioned as it is groomed—that constantly maintains its all-important oil-and-moisture balance—you've got to buy Charles Antell Formula 9 with SUPER-Lanolin and no other. It alone has the triple-strength SUPER-Lanolin perfected by the scientists who first made lanolin famous. It alone has both a proved secret formula treatment for hair and scalp, and SUPER-Lanolin. For your hair's sake, accept no substitute. Insist on Formula 9. From 59c to $1.79 at drug and cosmetic counters everywhere. Or, if you prefer, Charles Antell Liquid Formula 9, also with SUPER-Lanolin—59c and 98c.

Sample jar of Charles Antell Formula 9 with SUPER-Lanolin available on request. Send 25c, with your name and address, to Charles Antell, Dept. V, Baltimore 3, Md.

And Charles Antell HAIR SPRAY with Lanolin and the fabulous new miracle ingredient PVP preserves your hair-do and protects your hair, too! 59c to $1.00.

Oriental eyes

This 'new look' is big beauty news. Here's how to achieve it

FOR EVENING, Oriental make-up gives eye a slanted, exotic look. One reason: green eye shadow.

As your clothes go, so goes your make-up. There's a glamorous Oriental feeling in both American and French designs this season — a mandarin grace in the slim, unbelted dress, a richness in fabric from bouclé to brocade, a golden glitter in jewelry that looks like a Marco Polo treasure. This calls for a new allure in make-up, beginning with the eyes.

To carry out the Oriental feeling of the clothes they modeled in the fall showings, Paris mannequins wore a new "long-eyed" look. For you, it can be both a daytime and an evening glamor. (Complete eye make-up has reached such a point of acceptance in the past few years that even in daylight it looks right.) The photos on opposite page show you how to apply the new eye-look.

Begin with color — eye shadow that matches your eyes. (Blue, worn with brown eyes, makes the whites seem whiter. And violet complements gray eyes, make blue eyes brighter.) For evening, try colors with a pearly glitter, golds, bronzes and pearly transparency you can apply over other colors. For very special evenings there are tiny specks of glitter that adhere to your shadow.

As for eyeliner, use a soft pencil in black, brown or dark blue — and for extra exotic effect, turquoise, bright blue or green. During the day, outline your upper lid and give the corner a delicate upturn. At night, outline the lower lid too, and sweep the corner into a long upturn. You also may use a lipstick brush and mascara for outlining. It makes a very fine line and stays on all through the day. And a new item in America — used by Oriental women for ages — is a powdery substance called kohl.

For eyebrows, use a dark pencil, firmer than your eyeliner, and shape your brows with a wide arch or a winged look. A new shade of gray darkens more softly than black.

Mascara now comes in every color from blue and green to purple, looks surprisingly soft and pretty in the daylight. A good way to put it on is in one thin coat, powdered lightly when dried, then recoated. This thickens your lashes without a beady look.

To be most effective, your eye-do must blend with your make-up, your own coloring and your costume. Never apply it too heavily: it becomes theatrical. But don't go without it in this Oriental season, because the naked eye is definitely out of fashion! ■

Six simple steps to daytime eye beauty

1 Eyes ready for make-up: note their lack of sparkle. Before starting, complete all other facial make-up.

2 Put on eye shadow first. Concentrate color on lid; with fingers, sweep it lightly upward and outward.

3 Apply eyeliner in thin line from inner corner to end of eye; draw upturn from outside to meet line.

4 Use eyebrow pencil with short, quick strokes. This will keep from creating too hard or heavy a line.

5 Apply mascara, also, with short upward strokes. Be sure it goes on evenly to prevent a "beaded" look.

6 With make-up finished, eyes have a gentle Oriental "uptilt." They also look deeper and more lustrous.

Teen-age topics

At last my mail is bringing in questions on other things than dating — and more boys are writing me. Keep it up!

Q. If a man whistles at a woman, should she feel insulted or complimented? — C.W., Elmont, N.Y.

A. No woman should appear so flamboyant in public that she evokes whistles. Perhaps as a result of the influence of movies and television, whistles do seem to follow many a pretty girl who is well-behaved and tastefully dressed. But a properly brought up boy, walking down the street by himself or in a group, wouldn't direct a "wolf-whistle" at a pretty girl.

In any case, I doubt that a woman really is insulted by a wolf-whistle, especially if she knows that the reason she has attracted attention is that she looks and acts like a lady. However, she never acknowledges a whistle by even a flick of an eyelash.

Q. Recently I met a boy my age on a train. (I am a high-school sophomore.) I would like to get in touch with him but don't know where he lives. — C.G., Fox Lake, Ill.

A. Sometimes strangers do talk to one another on trains, especially on long trips, but they should always keep in mind that this is just a passing acquaintance. Often, not even names are exchanged, and rarely addresses. It's fun to dream about handsome strangers one meets traveling but more practical to keep one's interests centered on neighborhood prospects.

Q. I am 13 years old and have liked a certain boy for two years. I am heavy and not too pretty. How can I get him to notice me? — T.L., Akron, Ohio.

A. I never know what a teenager means by "heavy." You must take into consideration your height, bone structure and, of course, your age. Your doctor or school nurse can help you on this; if you really are overweight, perhaps you should be more careful with your diet. And a girl does not need to be pretty. Just look around you and you will see that this is true. She needs to be attractive, but that is a matter of attitude, grooming and taste.

Q. I am 14 and like a boy I once went with. He doesn't like me. How could I get him back? Should I send him a birthday card? — T.R., Columbiana, Ohio.

A. Throughout your teens you will find that there is a painful but necessary shifting of boy-and-girl relationships. It is necessary because we really don't know what we want in an eventual mate until we have associated with different kinds of boys or girls, as the case may be. If this boy seems to have lost interest in you, it may be that his needs are different now. But if you attracted him, you will attract many more before you find the right one.

It won't do any harm to send him a birthday card.

Bob Cousy:

HE SINKS 'EM BLINDFOLDED

by PAUL GARDNER PHOTOS BY DAVID P. PRESTON

BOSTON, MASS.

The photos on these and the following pages show the most spectacular — and perhaps the best — basketball player of all time. He's lean, jackrabbit-fast Bob Cousy, who for the past five years has confounded the nation's top players with the slickest sleight-of-hand tricks ever seen on a basketball court. One of his favorites is to dribble nonchalantly down court, suddenly switch direction (both his own and the ball's) with a fluid behind-the-back dribble, then sink an easy basket as a red-faced defender flounders in his wake.

As a result, Cousy has been one of the five top scorers in the National Basketball Association each year since 1950, when he joined the professional Boston Celtics after winning All-American honors at Holy Cross. Last year he racked up the most field goals in the league (522), was third in overall scoring (average: 21.2 points a game).

The two men who beat him out tower 6'8" and 6'5"; Cousy measures 6'2". There are only a few other NBA players as "small," but there's one major difference between them and Cousy: they average — at best — about half as many points as he does.

Cousy's main talents are speed and a steady shooting eye. During a 30-second interval in a game against Fort Wayne, he popped in a long set shot, swirled through the entire Fort Wayne team for a layup, capped the display with a lightning pass to a teammate for another basket.

Cousy's passing once was the bane of foe and friend alike. "He was so clever when he first came up," says his coach, Red Auerbach, "that his own teammates didn't know where or when he'd pass. As a result they missed about as many as they caught." By last season, however, Cousy had zeroed in on his fellow Celtics so well that he set a new league record in assists (passing to a teammate for a score) with 557.

But his on-court pyrotechnics are only half the Cousy story. Unlike most professional athletes, Cousy is truly grateful to a sport that's made him moderately wealthy. He wants to keep basketball growing, and is constantly trying to get more kids to play the game. "I have always felt," he says, "that basketball is the one organized sport best qualified to fight juvenile delinquency. All a boy needs is a hoop and a ball and a little space; he can practice by himself or with just a few other kids. This can't be done in baseball or most other sports."

To teach kids the game, Cousy has built a summer camp for boys — called Gray Lag — in Pittsfield, N.H. Youngsters from 8 to

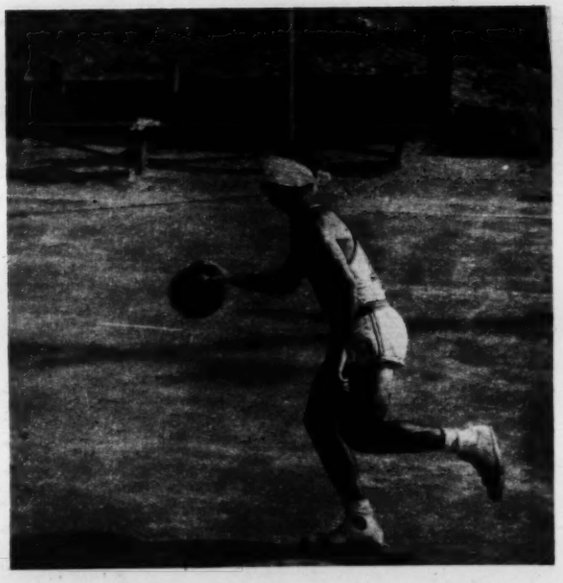
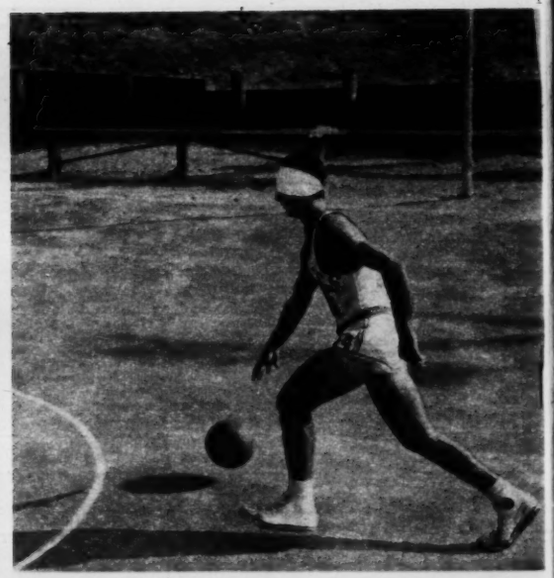
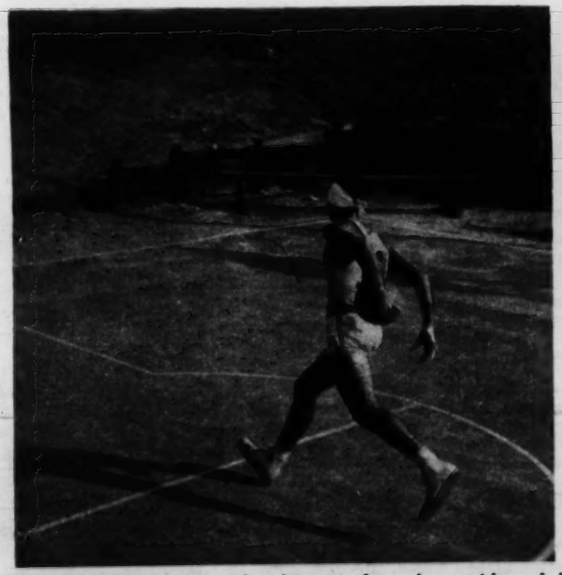
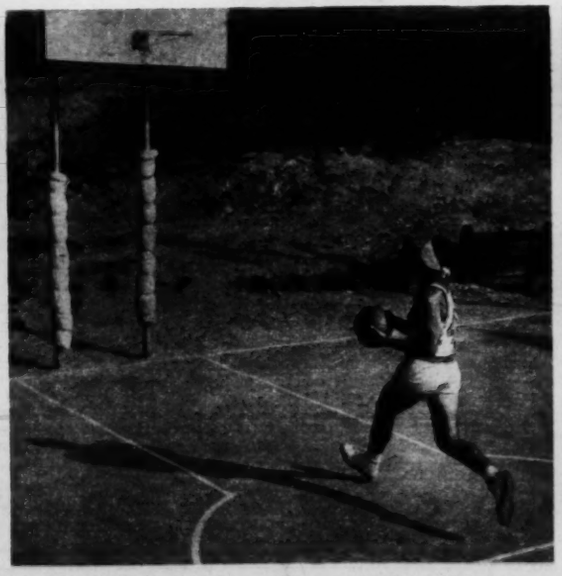
He dribbles, swings the ball behind his back and scores—with his eyes shut

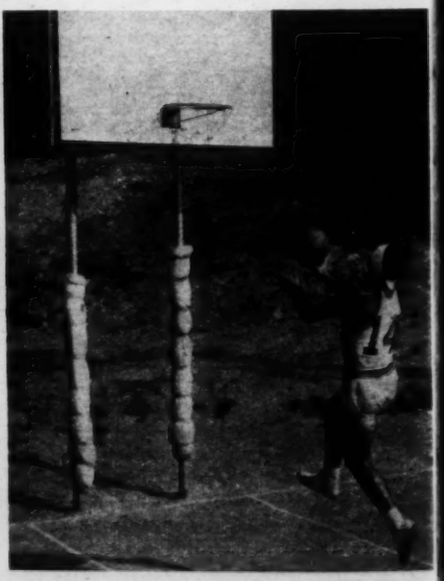




After first pacing off steps to goal, blindfolded Cousy starts dribbling. At foul circle (above), he . . .







Completing maneuver, he drives in for a layup (though he takes an extra step) — and scores (right). Bob's only rival in ball handling is ex-Globetrotter . . .

The Celtics didn't want Cousy—at first

15 have come from as far as California and Cuba, been taught by Cousy and other NBA pros. "Basketball is a game," explains Cousy, "that a boy can learn at a pretty late age and still have a chance to make a college team. Some boys played basketball for the first time at the camp and are now varsity material."

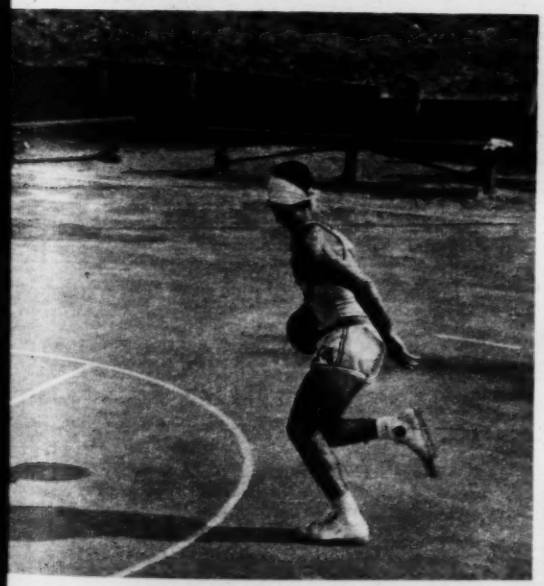
Cousy's missionary work doesn't stop at his camp. During a year, he estimates, he speaks to nearly 6,000 boys and girls at school and church affairs in New England. In these talks he points out to the kids and their parents that basketball is safe ("I've never heard of a fatality"), easy to play ("You just have to master a few fundamentals").

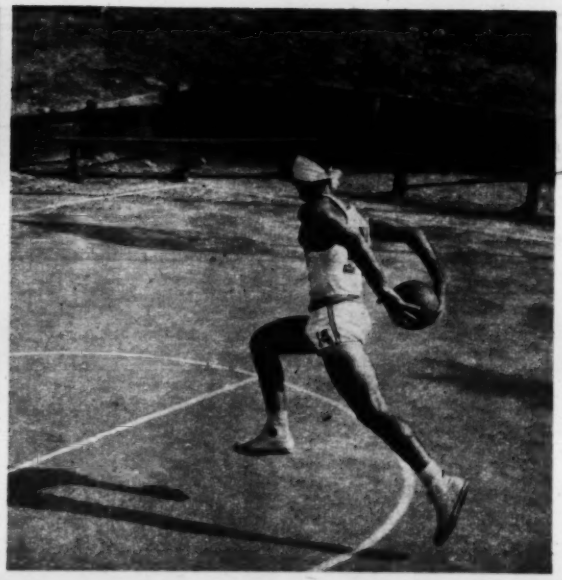
"It's amazing what the talks have done throughout New England," says Cousy. "A few years ago hockey was the big winter sport up here. But now basketball has really caught on; in the little town of Houlton, Me., to give just one example, they recently had to double the capacity of the school gymnasium."

Cousy himself is proof that kids can learn basketball quickly. Raised by his French-born parents in St. Albans, N. Y., he showed no interest in the game until he was 15. Then his neighborhood's wild enthusiasm for the local high-school team decided him on his career: He would be an All-American basketball star. Within a year, hard-working Cousy had made the team; with characteristic self-confidence he promptly predicted that he would win a basketball scholarship to college. He did, too. At Holy Cross, in Worcester, Mass., he pinned down All-American honors three years in a row.

On his graduation in 1950, however, the professionals greeted Cousy coolly. They felt he passed too much and too wildly for the pro game, with its accent on scoring. The Celtics, who had first rights on him, turned thumbs down. A few months later they picked his name out of a hat in a drawing for surplus players, and had to sign him. Actually, they had entered the drawing in a desperate attempt to pick another player, the now-retired Max Zaslofsky; today, they're tickled pink that they got Cousy instead.

Shortly after graduation, Cousy had done some picking of his own, marrying a boyhood sweetheart from St. Albans, the former Marie Ritterbusch. They now live in a nine-room, Colonial-type house in Worcester with their two daughters, Marie Colette, 4, and Mary Patricia, 3 (see cover). "Bob is just wonderful with the children," says Mrs. Cousy. "They'll do anything that he tells them." For Bob Cousy, one big question now is: Will the kids of America also do what he tells them — play more basketball? ■





. . . begins his famed behind-the-back dribble. In a real game, he would switch directions while doing this.

. . . Goose Tatum. But Tatum can't shoot with Cousy's accuracy.

SAYS BOB COUSY:

BASEBALL IS NO LONGER OUR NATIONAL SPORT

Baseball is dying. City kids haven't played it much for years; they've lacked the fields. Now rural kids play it less and less as suburbs grab up vacant lots. TV, moreover, has decimated the minor leagues. Result: Talent that once flowed from city or farm to the minors and then to the majors is now drying up.

Basketball, though, is blooming. Kids can play it in a small space, and indoors or out. Yet baseball is still called our "national pastime," though only a few hired men pass their time at it. The kids have already adopted basketball as their national sport; why don't we get realistic and do the same?

As a result, I'd been having a lot of trouble with my feet and my leg muscles. Finally, I tried Ben-Gay. I rubbed my legs, feet and ankles with it and what relief! Believe it or not, the next day I played 18 holes of golf without an ache or a pain! Ben-Gay's my stand-by from now on!"

Mr. Craig is right. Ben-Gay is amazingly effective in relieving the throbbing and burning of tired, sore feet. Ben-Gay acts fast . . . really fast to bring soothing relief. Its world-famous formula contains up to two and a half times more of two famous pain-relieving agents than any of five other widely offered rub-ins. It works two ways: First it stimulates the blood supply to the painful area. Then its pain-deadening action goes to work to bring welcome relief. Your feet feel better . . . you feel better all over. Try it! Rub in Ben-Gay . . . rub pain away!

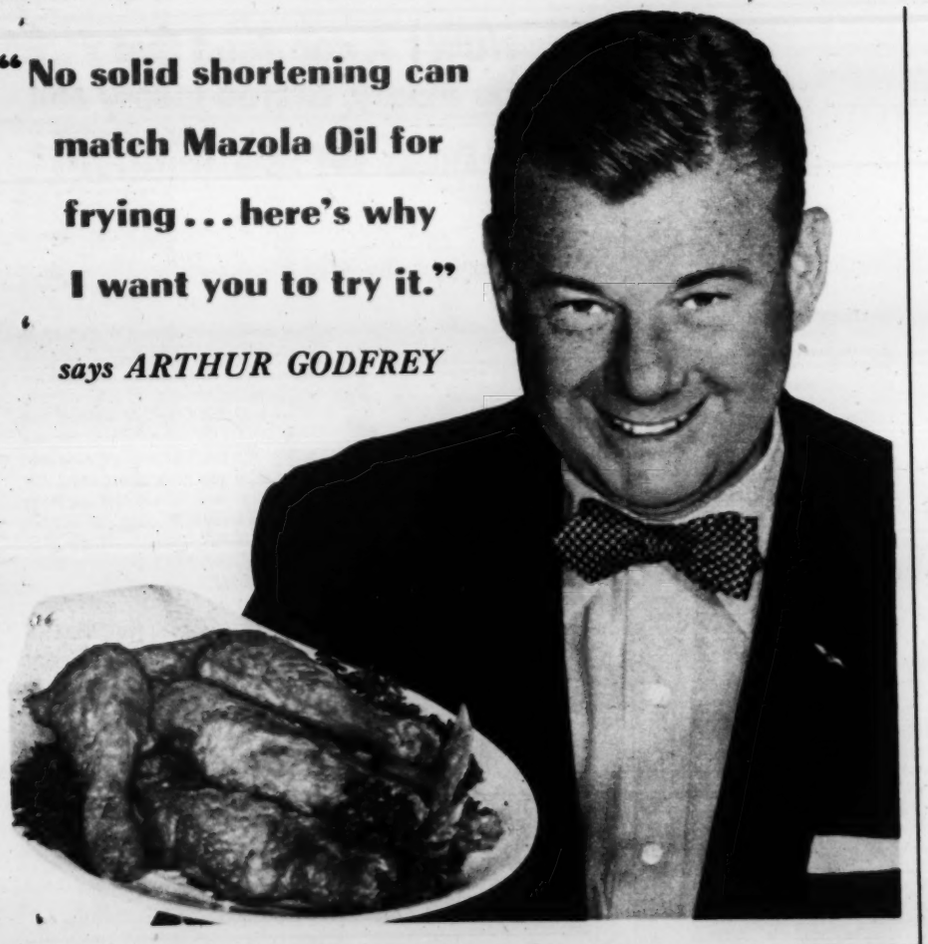
"No solid shortening can match Mazola Oil for frying... here's why I want you to try it."

says ARTHUR GODFREY



foods taste better because you fry right... at the correct high temperature with no smoking... and

"KEEP CALORIES DOWN"

ARTHUR GODFREY's right! With Mazola* you fry food at a higher temperature than ordinary fats allow. And with no smoking or burning!

Food can't get fat-soaked. The quick-crusting action of Mazola oil gives food a golden brown crust fast—seals flavor and juices in, keeps "extra" calories in the pan.

All your Mazola fried foods taste better... look better, and are truly digestible, too.

This low-calorie Mazola method works for chicken, fish, French fried potatoes—all your favorite fried foods. So take Arthur's advice: Get Mazola Oil today!

For pan-frying and deep-frying always pre-heat Mazola to 375°F. before food is added. To test temperature, use a frying thermometer... or 1-inch square of day-old bread which turns golden brown in 15 seconds when pan-frying, in 30-40 seconds when deep-frying.

Arthur says: "No store-bought dressing can possibly have the fresh flavor, downright goodness of your own home-made dressing... so easy with golden Mazola Oil!"

Have you tried the new, easy Mazola No-Roll Pie Crust? Make, shape, bake right in the pie pan. No rolling. Recipe on label. Makes a wonderfully rich, tender pie crust.

L'AMOUR: Cleo schmoozes with Rhubarb, Jr., one of 36 trained cats used to make the film Rhubarb.

How friendly can you get?

HOLLYWOOD.

If the dog is indeed man's best friend, Cleo, the young basset hound pictured on these pages, has gone the adage one better: she also is the best friend of a squirrel, a rabbit, a cat and a raccoon. Other dogs might chase these animals on sight. Cleo, who lives with them on the ranch of movie-animal trainer Frank Inn near here, finds them all charming.

Currently, Cleo further finds time to be Jackie Cooper's best friend. She plays his jealous pet on The People's Choice, a filmed video series (NBC, Thursdays). She helps the plot considerably and, adds Cooper, "swipes every scene."

That other TV basset, Morgan, can look to his laurels.

KIBITZER: Cleo frowns on TV romancing between Jackie Cooper and Pat Breslin, makes acid comments via dubbed-in human voice.

HELPFUL: Cleo holds nursing bottle for Tex, a squirrel who likes to mix feeding with acrobatics.

Parade visits Russia

LOOK FOR THIS COVER — NEXT SUNDAY.

The smiling Moscow schoolboys above are a foretaste of a "first" in Sunday magazines: an entire issue of PARADE devoted to the Soviet Union today. Editor Jess Gorkin and photographer David P. Preston have just returned from an extended visit. They traveled more than 7,000 miles in Russia, met people of all classes (in the "classless society"), took thousands of pictures (including unique color shots of Khrushchev, Bulganin and other leaders). The result is an unprecedented look at the U.S.S.R in this year of the lukewarm cold war. Do the Russian people like Americans? How popular are their leaders? Will religion survive in Russia? How good are Russian TV sets? You'll get the answers — and much, much more — next Sunday in PARADE.
